Jacket Of Cartridge Taken From Lungs Of Boy, Aged 3

Arkansas Child Recovering At Local Clinic After Rare Operation

By Paul Martin

A rare and delicate operation for the removal of the jacket of a .22 cartridge from the lung of a 3-year-old boy was successfully performed at the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic here Friday, and the chubby little brown-eyed patient was reported well on the way to recovery from his experience yesterday.

The child, Frank Thurman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thurman of Huttig, Ark., swallowed the cartridge shell Friday morning shortly before noon, and the object passed into his windpipe and became lodged in the right lower bronchus.

Dr. Joseph P. Brown, specialist at the clinic, removed the shell with the use of the bronchoscope shortly after the child had been rushed here.

Rarely do such cases come to the attention of physicians during the

NOT SINCE the worst days of the depression have so many beggars appeared on the streets of New York—jobless men and hungry victims of unkindly circumstances. One wonders what has become of the professional beggars—smooth rascals with money in the bank often enough, or deeds to an apartment house or two.

When I was a young reporter there was a veritable social register of beggardom. It listed the aristocrats of the fraternity, gentlemen like "Kid McCoy," who borrowed the name of the famous pugilist and worked the big hotels, especially the Waldorf and the Old Holland house. The Kid invariably was the picture of a prosperous Wall Street broker. He strolled forth under a silk tile, sporting a long overcoat with a fur collar, patent leather shoes and gray spats.

TEN MONTHS in the year the Kid was a satchel thief, one of the smoothest in the business—and not above a little second story work in the provinces. He was an Englishman, and had once been a druggist, but had learned that there was more money and less work in other trades. His specialty was trimming English tourists. Being an Englishman himself, with cultivated manners, he reaped a harvest of five and ten-dollar bills.

He had a pal named Klondike Gene Dawson, whose hunting ground was the old Waldorf at 34th street and Fifth avenue. Klondike Gene was the Kid's understudy, with a slight difference. Klondike made up as a Frenchman and with an excellent

BISHOP DOBBS WILL CONDUCT CUBA MEET

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, appointed Bishop H. M. Dobbs of Shreveport today to hold the annual meeting of the Cuba conference at Cienfuegos December 30.

He was selected after Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of Macon, Ga., whose area includes Cuba, requested a replacement because of his recent illness.

The college of bishops adjourned after a routine two-day discussion of church affairs. Their next meeting was set for January 11, 1938, at Savannah, Ga., the last gathering before the quadrennial conference in Birmingham, Ala., next April.

The Rev. H. Bascomb Watts, pastor of the First Methodist church, Little Rock, Ark., was named by the college as fraternal messenger to the general conference of the church's negro branch at Hot Springs, Ark., next May.

Passengers Of Liner President Hoover Find Refuge In Pacific

MANILA, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Passengers of the broken, helpless luxury liner President Hoover huddled together on two small, sub-tropical Japanese islands in the far western Pacific tonight awaiting the arrival of four rescue ships.

The $8,000,000 liner was reported "bumping heavily" on the rocks of Hoishoto island, where she ran ashore early this morning. A skeleton crew presumably remained aboard, attempting to keep her from breaking up.

Three American destroyers and the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia were nearing the scene, a volcanic, sparsely inhabited bit of land 500 miles north of here, just off the east coast of Formosa.

Radio messages received here during the late afternoon said "all passengers" had been taken ashore and emergency headquarters had been set up on the island.

The jurors deliberated 58 minutes before returning the verdict without a recommendation of mercy, thus making a death sentence mandatory.

Judge H. Clay Warth deferred sentence pending arguments for a new trial.

Booth listened calmly while Jury Foreman W. E. Swain read the verdict but was obviously shaken as he walked silently from the courtroom.

SHIPPERS OPPOSE INCREASED RATE

Spokesman Says Railroads Could Raise Depressed Charges Now

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—A spokesman for shippers told the interstate commerce commission today that the railroads were throwing away a million dollars a day by keeping low rates which they could raise without commission action.

R. C. Fullbright, chairman of the shippers' committee, was the speaker. He appeared at a time when the commission was arranging to give a quick decision on the railroads' appeal for a fifteen per cent raise in rates.

Fullbright said the evidence showed there were many thousands of reduced rates that had been put at levels far below those set by the commission in order to meet the competition of highway and water hauling agencies.

"The railroads are at liberty to increase such depressed rates at any time without asking the interstate commerce commission for authority," he said. "The commission seldom interferes with the railroads in increasing these depressed rates where the railroads feel that they can get more revenue out of the traffic."

Fullbright said the carriers were attempting to "rush the commission" and to "place all responsibility on it without regard to rudimentary requirements of a hearing for shippers."

The carriers, Fullbright said, should be compelled to make a full showing of the extent to which they are losing revenue through "voluntarily depressed rates."

The commission announced final hearing of testimony would begin January 17. Closing oral arguments will be started as soon as the testimony-taking is complete, the commission said. This created an impression that a decision might be expected not later than March 1 and some experts predicted one even earlier. Railroad experts said a decision by March 1 would establish a new record for termination of a major rate case.

The I. C. C. yesterday denied a motion by the carriers for an immediate decision.

Under its revised schedule, the final hearing on January 17 will continue until the taking of testimony is completed. Oral arguments will follow immediately. Briefs, if any, must be filed by the conclusion of oral arguments.

HUNDREDS LEFT HOMELESS WHEN RISING WATERS HIT CALIFORNIA

Sacramento Crops, Livestock And Houses Swept Away By Torrent

Nashville And Louisville Report 14 Degrees Above Zero

(By Associated Press)

Community-paralyzing blizzards in the east and rising storm floods in California, linked with disastrous gales at sea, caused at least 77 deaths last night (Saturday) as winter struck most of the northern hemisphere.

Hundreds were left homeless in northern California, and in the fertile Sacramento valley crops, livestock and houses were swept away in the three-to-seven-inch deluge that sent river stages to dangerous levels.

The worst storm disaster occurred in Europe, near Castlecary, Scotland, where rescue workers dug for the bodies of still more victims in Britain's biggest railway wreck in 22 years. Thirty bodies were taken from the debris of the crack Scottish express which smashed into the rear of another passenger train during a blinding snowstorm.

Upstate New York felt the full brunt of the American storm, with ten known dead. The federal government authorized the use of national guard troops to help storm-isolated Erie county communities "dig out."

Ogdensburg, N. Y., city of 17,000 on the St. Lawrence river, 300 miles north of Buffalo, reported drifts five to ten feet high. Taxpayers who voted down a $5,000 snow removal fund last spring waited ruefully for shovel parties to clear the streets by hand.

Pennsylvania counted 14 dead. Aside from Buffalo, other parts of New York state reported four storm fatalities.

Two were believed to have drowned in the California floods, at Chico, where a bursting reservoir sent hundreds of families fleeing from their homes after one of the worst rainstorms in northern California history.

Between 400 and 500 were homeless at historic Downieville, Calif., famous old mining town in a canyon on the Yuba river's north fork. Houses were anchored to trees with cables.

At sea, the $8,000,000 liner President Hoover was aground on a reef near Formosa. Captain E. Stepbach, master of the German freighter Preussen, first ship to reach the Hoover, said the big ship was "bumping heavily" and "leaking badly." Several hundred passengers were taken off.

'DEATH SYNDICATE' REVEALED

"Yes I did it—pardon me" was part of the confession, according to French police, which Eugene Weidmann (left), fugitive German, blurted out in explaining the killing of Jean de Koven (right), American dancer. Police say Weidmann, who allegedly admitted four other slayings, explained that he killed Miss De Koven for her money. After confessing, he led police to the shallow grave under the porch of his St. Cloud, France, house where he hid the body. In the meantime Paris police announced the capture of a scarfaced chief of an abduction-death syndicate from whom Weidmann reputedly took orders.

TRADE BOOM OF CHRISTMAS FELT

Downtown Area Packed As Shoppers For Miles Around Crowd Stores

Residents of the Twin Cities and the surrounding trade territory thronged Monroe's business district yesterday in the first trade boom of the Christmas season. Apparently realizing that Christmas is "just around the corner" and that only 12 shopping days remained in which to complete the happy task of gift buying for the Yuletide, shoppers from miles around crowded Monroe's stores and gladdened the hearts of the city's merchants who had prepared for the expected seasonal trade boom.

More than ever before in the history of the city the merchants of Monroe this year have lavishly stocked their counters and shelves with the finest merchandise procurable. No city in the country surpasses Monroe for the excellent quality and wide variety of seasonable gifts which await the Christmas shopper.

In keeping with the practice of recent years, many stores have installed a toyland department and the variety of the toys on display is enough to bring the sparkle to any little boy's eye and squeals of delight to any little girl's throat as they gaze entranced at the DeSiard street shop windows. The toys on display this year are conspicuous by their appearance of quality and sturdiness. Merchants this season are offering toys that are not only interesting and full of fun-possibilities but that are well constructed and designed. Grown-ups,

QUICK PASSAGE OF PAY BILL EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—House leaders predicted today the house would approve a wage-hour bill quickly next week.

They said privately they believed controversy over administration of the program and over exact terms of control of wages and hours would not endanger final adoption of the measure.

Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, majority floor leader, said he expected the legislation to be approved by Thursday. The house will spend four hours on general debate Monday.

The first step will be formal action on a motion to take the measure from the rules committee, which blocked consideration last summer. A majority of the house members, required by parliamentary procedure, already have demanded that action.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, an opponent of the legislation, said today this motion might not be adopted because the pending bill is radically different from the one 218 members approved tentatively 10 days ago.

The house labor committee, which originally placed administration of the act in the hands of a new, five-man board, changed its mind this week and chose, instead, an administrator in the labor department with authority to create assisting committees.

FEARFUL ANOTHER AMERICAN SLAIN

Paris Police Search For Several More Murder Syndicate Victims

PARIS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Police tonight sought the fate of a second American they feared might have brought the number of victims of a mass murder syndicate to ten.

In addition to the five slayings already admitted by the gang's "expert in murder," Eugene Weidmann, police believed four women and an American tourist might have been lured to the isolated villa of death at suburban St. Cloud.

The bodies of lovely Jean de Koven, American dancer, and Fritz Frommer, himself once a member of the murder-for-profit ring, already have been unearthed at the villa where police were spading up a half acre of ground in their search for other victims.

Detectives studied a small black notebook, containing forty names and addresses, found among Weidmann's possessions. They started a checkup to determine whether they were names of victims or accomplices.

The police shovels rang against the hard, snow-covered earth near the villa named La Voulzie after the peaceful French river.

The four women were known to police only as "Jeannine," "Charlotte," "Josephine," and "Sophie" from the names [illegible] a trunk at the villa.

Both Weidmann and [illegible], supposed head of the group, [illegible] police said, frequenting [illegible] Paris hotels and [illegible] with American and other tourists whom they believed [illegible].

That Weidmann confessed was how he met the 22-year-old [illegible], N. Y., dancing girl, whose strangled body was buried beneath the villa porch four months ago after she collapsed "like a rag doll" under the killer's fingers.

Colette Tricot, described by police as the shared mistress of Million and Jean LeBlanc, who gave himself up with them last night, told police of an

Appeals for Christmas remembrance coming to the Good Fellows editor this year are concerned almost exclusively with requests for the necessities of life. These appeals are pathetic in their earnestness and evident sincerity and the picture they disclose of dire poverty in many of the homes of the Twin Cites. The tragic part of this picture is the fact that the children in these homes are the principal sufferers. Many of them are bereft of the bare necessities required to permit them to attend school.

Many Good Fellows perhaps would prefer to give direct help to some of these families. In that case, the Good Fellows editor will be glad to turn over to such citizens letters received from these homes. Such a plan would prove a revelation to those who live in comfortable homes and know nothing of how "the other half lives."

Here are a few extracts from letters in Saturday's mail:

"I am writing to see if you will bring us a basket for Christmas. There won't be any Christmas dinner for my children if you don't help us.

FASCIST GRAND COUNCIL VOTES TO GET OUT AT CALLED SESSION

MUSSOLINI BELLIGERENT AS HE ADDRESSES THRONG

Little Part Taken By Nation In Geneva Affairs In Last Two Years

ROME, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy withdrew tonight from the League of Nations but announced her determination to continue to collaborate for peace.

The action, decided upon at a seven-minute meeting of the Fascist grand council, was proclaimed by Premier Benito Mussolini from the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia.

One of the greatest crowds ever assembled in the vast square in front of the palace, despite a heavy rain, roared its approval.

"Now we are on our own," he shouted, "and depart without regrets from the reeling ship where they do not work for peace but are preparing for war."

Italy thus followed in the footsteps of Germany and Japan, with whom she is joined in an anti-Communist pact, among the leading nations to depart from the league.

Membership in the league will not end until two years after formal notice of withdrawal but Italy for more than a year has pursued a "policy of non-cooperation" with Geneva.

This estrangement dated to May 11, 1936, when the Italian delegation walked out of a meeting of the league council after it had voted to continue sanctions against Italy because of the Ethiopian war.

Mussolini was in a fighting mood as

SENATE APPROVES SUBSIDY AT ONCE

Leaders Hopeful Of Passage Of Farm Bill By Next Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The senate approved today payment of the three-cents a pound cotton subsidy immediately upon enactment of a farm bill.

The action was taken in adoption of an amendment backed by Senators George, Democrat, Georgia, and Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina. They contended the bill as it stood would delay payments until determination of whether cotton growers complied with production programs.

"The program in the senate bill is compulsory," Bailey said, "and there is no purpose in holding up payments for proof of compliance."

The senate also approved a companion amendment providing that subsidy payments on crops put up for loans should be made on a basis of prices the day the farmer applied for a loan.

Another amendment by Chairman Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, of the agriculture committee to exempt from the bill provisions of crops to be used for seed purposes also was adopted.

Despite criticism from Senator Pope, Democrat, Idaho, the senate voted to permit reclassification at government

After confessing, he led police to the shallow grave under the porch of his St. Cloud, France, house where he hid the body. In the meantime Paris police announced the capture of a scarfaced chief of an abduction-death syndicate from whom Weidmann reputedly took orders.

TRADE BOOM OF CHRISTMAS FELT

Downtown Area Packed As Shoppers For Miles Around Crowd Stores

Residents of the Twin Cities and the surrounding trade territory thronged Monroe's business district yesterday in the first trade boom of the Christmas season. Apparently realizing that Christmas is "just around the corner" and that only 12 shopping days remained in which to complete the happy task of gift buying for the Yuletide, shoppers from miles around crowded Monroe's stores and gladdened the hearts of the city's merchants who had prepared for the expected seasonal trade boom.

More than ever before in the history of the city the merchants of Monroe this year have lavishly stocked their counters and shelves with the finest merchandise procurable. No city in the country surpasses Monroe for the excellent quality and wide variety of seasonable gifts which await the Christmas shopper.

In keeping with the practice of recent years, many stores have installed a toyland department and the variety of the toys on display is enough to bring the sparkle to any little boy's eye and squeals of delight to any little girl's throat as they gaze entranced at the DeSiard street shop windows. The toys on display this year are conspicuous by their appearance of quality and sturdiness. Merchants this season are offering toys that are not only interesting and full of fun-possibilities but that are well constructed and designed. Grown-ups,

QUICK PASSAGE OF PAY BILL EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—House leaders predicted today the house would approve a wage-hour bill quickly next week.

They said privately they believed controversy over administration of the program and over exact terms of control of wages and hours would not endanger final adoption of the measure.

Representative Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, majority floor leader, said he expected the legislation to be approved by Thursday. The house will spend four hours on general debate Monday.

The first step will be formal action on a motion to take the measure from the rules committee, which blocked consideration last summer. A majority of the house members, required by parliamentary procedure, already have demanded that action.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, an opponent of the legislation, said today this motion might not be adopted because the pending bill is radically different from the one 218 members approved tentatively 10 days ago.

The house labor committee, which originally placed administration of the act in the hands of a new, five-man board, changed its mind this week and chose, instead, an administrator in the labor department with authority to create assisting committees.

FEARFUL ANOTHER AMERICAN SLAIN

Paris Police Search For Several More Murder Syndicate Victims

PARIS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Police tonight sought the fate of a second American they feared might have brought the number of victims of a mass murder syndicate to ten.

In addition to the five slayings already admitted by the gang's "expert in murder," Eugene Weidmann, police believed four women and an American tourist might have been lured to the isolated villa of death at suburban St. Cloud.

The bodies of lovely Jean de Koven, American dancer, and Fritz Frommer, himself once a member of the murder-for-profit ring, already have been unearthed at the villa where police were spading up a half acre of ground in their search for other victims.

Detectives studied a small black notebook, containing forty names and addresses, found among Weidmann's possessions. They started a checkup to determine whether they were names of victims or accomplices.

The police shovels rang against the hard, snow-covered earth near the villa—named La Voulzie after the peaceful French river.

The four women were known to police only as "Jeannine," "Caroline," "Josephine," and "Sophie" from the names embroidered on filmy lingerie found crammed in a trunk at the villa.

Both Weidmann and Roger Million, supposed head of the group, admitted, police said, frequenting fashionable Paris hotels and striking acquaintances with American and other tourists whom they believed wealthy.

That, Weidmann confessed, was how he met the 22-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., dancing girl, whose strangled body was buried beneath the villa porch four months ago after she collapsed "like a rag doll" under the killer's fingers.

Colette Tricot, described by police as the shared mistress of Million and Jean LeBlanc, who gave himself up with them last night, told police of an

Appeals for Christmas remembrance coming to the Good Fellows editor this year are concerned almost exclusively with requests for the necessities of life. These appeals are pathetic in their earnestness and evident sincerity and the picture they disclose of dire poverty in many of the homes of the Twin Cites. The tragic part of this picture is the fact that the children in these homes are the principal sufferers. Many of them are bereft of the bare necessities required to permit them to attend school.

Many Good Fellows perhaps would prefer to give direct help to some of these families. In that case, the Good Fellows editor will be glad to turn over to such citizens letters received from these homes. Such a plan would prove a revelation to those who live in comfortable homes and know nothing of how "the other half lives."

Here are a few extracts from letters in Saturday's mail:

"I am writing to see if you will bring us a basket for Christmas. There won't be any Christmas dinner for my children if you don't help us.

FASCIST GRAND COUNCIL VOTES TO GET OUT AT CALLED SESSION

Great Crowd, Assembled In Square In Front Of Palace, Roars Approval

Little Part Taken By Nation In Geneva Affairs In Last Two Years

ROME, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy withdrew tonight from the League of Nations but announced her determination to continue to collaborate for peace.

The action, decided upon at a seven-minute meeting of the Fascist grand council, was proclaimed by Premier Benito Mussolini from the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia.

One of the greatest crowds ever assembled in the vast square in front of the palace, despite a heavy rain, roared its approval.

"Now we are on our own," he shouted, "and depart without regrets from the reeling ship where they do not work for peace but are preparing for war."

Italy thus followed in the footsteps of Germany and Japan, with whom she is joined in an anti-Communist pact, among the leading nations to depart from the league.

Membership in the league will not end until two years after formal notice of withdrawal but Italy for more than a year has pursued a "policy of non-cooperation" with Geneva.

This estrangement dated to May 11, 1936, when the Italian delegation walked out of a meeting of the league council after it had voted to continue sanctions against Italy because of the Ethiopian war.

Mussolini was in a fighting mood as

SENATE APPROVES SUBSIDY AT ONCE

Leaders Hopeful Of Passage Of Farm Bill By Next Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The senate approved today payment of the three-cents a pound cotton subsidy immediately upon enactment of a farm bill.

The action was taken in adoption of an amendment backed by Senators George, Democrat, Georgia, and Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina. They contended the bill as it stood would delay payments until determination of whether cotton growers complied with production programs.

"The program in the senate bill is compulsory," Bailey said, "and there is no purpose in holding up payments for proof of compliance."

The senate also approved a companion amendment providing that subsidy payments on crops put up for loans should be made on a basis of prices the day the farmer applied for a loan.

Another amendment by Chairman Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, of the agriculture committee to exempt from the bill producers of crops to be used for seed purposes also was adopted.

Despite criticism from Senator Pope, Democrat, Idaho, the senate voted to permit reclassification at government

WAR VETERANS PUSH PETITION

Ten Thousand Expected To Sign Local Document Urging Peace

Headed by city and parish officials and all civic organizations in Monroe, Ouachita parish and all parishes of the fifth congressional district, signatures of 10,000 persons were said to be the anticipated number of signers to the petitions being circulated by Veterans of Foreign Wars to be presented to the president of the United States and congress asking that they keep America out of war if it can be done by honorable means.

Similar petitions are being circulated by this veterans' group, nationwide.

Mayor Arnold Bernstein, of Monroe, gave out the following open letter Saturday:

"E. H. Miller, commander, Veterans of Foreign wars, Monroe, La.

"Dear Sir: I know all thoughtful good Americans want first of all, 'peace on earth and good will to men,' yet as a practical proposition we, in this country, must not fool ourselves as to world conditions and feverish preparations for war.

"The congress of the United States knows our people want and must have national preparedness to the limit of our resources. This will keep us out of war.

"Those who are now known as the dictators of some foreign countries are no fools (whatever our personal opinion of them may be). They all leave alone those countries that are able to protect themselves—this is human nature.

"Let us lend our moral support to all countries who are endeavoring to preserve world peace."

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed) Arnold Bernstein, mayor."

Similar letters have been received from Mayor C. C. Bell, of West Monroe, and also from William D. M. Rodriguez, commissioner of finance and public utilities, and C. R. Tidwell, commissioner of parks and streets, of the city of Monroe.

Mr. Miller stated Saturday that every official, civic group and private citizen thus far approached has signed the petition 100 per cent. There has been such a widespread demand for petition blanks that a new supply was ordered by air mail, he said.

Work of circulating the petitions will go forward rapidly during the next few days, Mr. Miller assured.

Remarkable Embalming Keeps Corpse Of Red Leader In Lifelike Condition

MOSCOW—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Nikolai Lenin's unmouldering body has attracted 11,500,000 visitors to his tomb in Red square since his death nearly fourteen years ago.

Five afternoons out of six the visitors to the shrine of communism line up for the hurried trip past the dead leader's undried mummy.

Such is the state of the body's preservation that millions more are likely to see it in the years to come. Although Dr. Vladimir Vorobieff, who supervised the embalming, died recently, his assistant, Professor Sbarsky, still lives and the newspapers announced the Vorobieff's pupils would "carry on his work."

Whether this work includes occasional injections of fresh preservatives into the body, or whether similar embalming of other leaders when they die is contemplated, the newspapers failed to say.

Dr. Vorobieff's lasting work earned him membership in the central executive committee, or legislative body, of the Ukraine and decoration with the Order of Lenin in his lifetime. At his death, it rewarded him with a state funeral and a pension for his family. His death revived stories of the embalming.

Within 36 hours after his death January 21, 1924, at Gorki, near Moscow, Lenin's body was laid out in state in the hall of white columns of the former Moscow nobles' assembly rooms. In the bitter cold of 25 degrees below zero fahrenheit, known ever since as "Lenin's frost," thousands of Moscow and the surrounding country lined up night and day to see him. Great fires were lighted for them in the streets. After three days, the procession of mourners still stretched for blocks.

That out-turning gave Bolshevik leaders the idea of a semi-permanent display. Vorobieff, an expert on anatomy, and Sbarsky, who together were steeped in the knowledge of embalming, ancient and modern, were called in.

A week had passed before the two professors could begin work. That complicated their task. But they went to work and within six months Lenin again was on show in a temporary wooden tomb. That tomb eventually was replaced by a squat, massive mausoleum, built of immense polished blocks of dull red granite and gray and black labradorite.

"Give us a free hand and follow our instructions afterwards," the professors had said, "and we guarantee to preserve the appearance of the visible parts of the body unimpaired not only for three months you ask, but perhaps for a hundred years."

PATRICIAN SHAPE, in the latter part of the Eighteenth Century, when Josiah Wedgwood was making history in the Ceramic Art, there came to his Etruria potteries leading artist of the day. Patrician has the simplicity and dignity characteristic of that school without, however, its conventionality.

EDME, the rich cream body, moulded in shapes of classic beauty, is devoid of anything resembling elaborate decoration. The delicate fluting effects interesting play of light and shade, and contrasts pleasingly with the flat surfaces. It harmonizes with any colour scheme and is, moreover, thoroughly serviceable.

LOUISIANA'S 'GOLDEN RULE' POLICY TOLD

Plan To Help Industry Hailed As 'Model' For Congress

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Louisiana's "golden rule" policy toward industry, inaugurated a year ago by Governor Richard W. Leche, is being hailed nation-wide by the press as a model for congress to study in its quest of relief measures for business burdened by taxation.

Editorial comment by scores of leading newspapers in the United States reflects high credit upon Louisiana's ten-year property tax holiday which has resulted in the establishment of 82 new industries with capital totaling in excess of $37,000,000 in the state during the past twelve months.

The thunder of new wheels of industry in Louisiana is echoed throughout the nation as congress, in special session, ponders the problem of lessening the tax load of wearied business.

Youthful Governor Leche has been given much of the credit by newspapers in their editorials for the advancement Louisiana has made under the "Fair Play for Industry," plan and the 10-year-tax-exemption program, which was ratified in a constitutional amendment by the state's elecorate in November, 1936.

Many of the editorials cited the Louisiana plan as a good example of the type of influence government should exert in the world of private industry.

Following are excerpts from some of the editorials which have appeared recently in newspapers in other states, heaping praise on Louisiana's attitude toward industry:

Chicago Tribune: "Perhaps the maxim guiding Governor Leche of Louisiana will not be received at the seat of federal policy with as much scorn as it would have encountered at an earlier stage of the New Deal experiment. . . . Pummeling the man who has to meet the payroll is a poor way to bring the more abundant life. Perhaps that truth will come home outside of Louisiana."

Jackson, Miss., Clarion Ledger: "The Leche Louisiana program, to date, has been far more successful than industrial programs sponsored by many other southern states, and Governor Leche, personally, receives much of the credit. He has, at the same time, given substantial and practical aid to conservation of Louisiana's natural resources, including its wild life."

Fargo, N. D., Forum: "The governor (Governor Richard W. Leche) has been in office for a year. He believes that definite results have come out of this theory. He is not offering industry any undue advantages, but is simply seeking to give industry a fair break. True, in order to bring new industries and give them a chance to get started he made it possible for new capital in industry to have some tax exemptions for a ten-year period. But he thinks that this is more than offset by reason of getting the new industry and the returns, on a fair basis, later on . . . Louisiana is worth watching."

Albion, Mich., Recorder: "As congress reconvenes it might do well to ask the delegation from Louisiana to tell something about how the followers of Huey Long have combatted the depression and made advances. . . . Governor Leche put to work a policy which has proved him right. It may be, reading the president's message to congress, Mr. Roosevelt also sees the light.

"Louisiana has not been considered one of our forward states. In fact it has been classed as backward, but it seems to be on its way now. One cannot but believe its new slogan could be applied with success in other states and in the union. The administration at Washington is beginning to believe there is something in it. You can't slap down the goose that lays the golden eggs and get more eggs. 'If we take care of industry, industry will take care of us.' And we do not have to give industry free license to do as it pleases, either."

Pensacola, Fla., News: "That industry goes where it is invited, even when facilities may not be so good as they are elsewhere, is amply proven by the recent report of the Louisiana state board of commerce and industry which shows that Louisiana's golden rule policy toward the man who meets the weekly payroll has netted that state more than $36,000,000 in new investment in 69 plants in a year's time.

"What has happened in Louisiana since announcement of that state's policy, and the enactment of state laws which grant new industries tax exemption for a ten-year period and guarantees that industries will be protected against unreasonable legislation and stifling taxation, will happen in any southern community which hangs out the "welcome" sign to industrial institutions. . . ."

Vincennes, Ind., Post: "Not only in words but by deeds has it been made apparent that the political philosophy of Louisiana is one of fair play to the man who is willing to risk his capital in starting a business, and who is faced with the necessity of meeting a weekly payroll. The end of the first twelve months of this attitude has more than justified the return to "old fashioned" methods of letting business mind its own business. . . .

"A study of the report of Louisiana's twelve months' 'experiment in common sense,' should prove highly advisable for those other officials over the country who are really interested in having a return of prosperity under their jurisdiction. Governor Leche predicted last year, in inaugurating this plan in his state. 'If we take care of industry, then industry will take care fo Louisiana.' And since there is no patent on common sense, a similar road would get the rest of us somewhere, too."

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Nonpareil: "The man who meets the payroll is entitled to a lot more consideration everywhere than he has been receiving in recent years. Whether he runs a store or a farm or a factory, the man who is keeping folks employed is doing the most important job. We do not appreciate this kind half enough."

Minneapolis, Minn., Morning Tribune: "The Louisiana experiment has simply tended to confirm a truth which is quite fundamental in the relationships between government and industry. . . . From the early days of his administration, Governor Leche has made it plain he had no more sympathy with those who would bullrag industry with harsh taxes and burdensome restrictions. . . . We commend that record particularly to Minnesota which seems to have more than its share of politicians who still subscribe to the extraordinary notion that business and industry are best calculated to thrive and create new employment in an atmosphere of constant opposition and harassment."

Houston, Texas, Chronicle: "Obviously these new payrolls will greatly stimulate business generally, especially retail business. Perhaps the most striking instance of the factories' effects upon heavy industry is seen at Baton Rouge, where the power company found it necessary to build a $3,000,000 addition to its steam generating plant in order to meet a new demand for electricity."

Bluefield, W. Va., Telegraph: "Some other states might take a lesson from Louisiana—Not one drawn from its political squinting but from its business vision."

A Bulletin Addressed To Young Men

Do you want to be someone? Do you want to go somewhere in life? Do you want success of any kind?

You can't do it alone. You must depend on people—on the public which surrounds you.

Not even a lighthouse keeper can succeed by himself. For if there were not ships manned by crews there would be no need of a lighthouse.

The writer and the sculptor may withdraw from contact with the public and say that they depend on nothing but the flame of creation burning within themselves, but they are mistaken. Unless there are people to read what they write and to view what they model, their work is futile.

The doctor, the stylist, the jockey, the minister, the actor, the butcher—all these, as much as the auctioneer or the sales person, are helpless and hopeless without the sustaining society that surrounds them.

Imprint this on the innermost recesses of your heart. Let it burn into your mind. Let it be the backdrop and prompter of your thinking.

Wherever people gather, look at them and realize they are your sustenance and support.

What are you doing about it? How do you treat this sustaining support of yours? Do you barely tolerate the public or do you appreciate it? Do you look upon these numerous people of varied appearance and capacities as the very machine of life which grinds out your living? Do you look at these people with sympathy and in an effort to understand them?

Every city in the land is full of people with jobs in which they contact their employers' customers. Customers who support the business! Customers for whom the business is operated!

What are you doing about that? How do you meet customers of your employer? The boss invested the money. He carries the big worries and responsibilities. He pays for the advertising which invites people in. And he employs you for only one thing—to serve. He employs you to assist this public which means your living.

Do you meet the people you serve as their servant—willing and eager to do all you can to make their lives more satisfying? If you don't, you are a cheat and a fraud, for that is your job. For naught else does the business exist.

Customers may not always be considerate of you, but it is your job always, eternally, and forever to be considerate to the customer.

THUMBS DOWN ON BLIMPS

And now it is proposed that some of the funds for the development of a United States merchant marine should go into the production of commercial dirigibles. The dirigible is held forth as a safe and comfortable means of travel. It is pictured as a transportation device that America should not neglect either in time of war or in time of peace.

Most people, with memories of the Shenandoah, the Macon, the Akron and the Hindenburg (to mention only a few), will feel that the government should turn thumbs down on the above proposal and refuse to spend a single penny for dirigible construction.

Even when using non-inflammable helium, these giant lighter-than-air craft have demonstrated a chronic susceptibility to tragic accidents. Whatever money is available for purposes of transit development might far better go into the construction of ordinary water craft then into the building of unstable monsters of the air.

OUT OF GAS!

There are times when it does seem as if the predominating trait of the American people must be plain absent-mindedness.

Some enterprising statistician with a flair for oddments of interesting but useless information has reported that no fewer than 1,500,000 motorists last year managed to get themselves stalled on the highway with empty gasoline tanks, and if that record can be due to anything but ordinary, every-day absent-mindedness, many persons would like to know what it is.

Every car nowadays has a gasoline gauge, perfectly visible to the driver at all times. There are times when it seems as if every corner had a filling station. With that combination, it is hard to see how anyone ever gets stalled with an empty tank. Yet somehow we all do it—a million and a half of us, in one year's time.

We must be a tolerably flighty people, in some ways.

OUGHT TO BE A LAW—

One of the less spectacular items of business which congress is supposed to handle this fall is the Ramspeck bill, which would put first, second and third-class postmasters permanently under the merit system and would go far to relieve the postoffice department of the patronage evil.

This bill passed the house last winter, and now—along with so much other legislation—slumbers peacefully in a senate committee. It should be taken from the committee and passed at once.

From the standpoint of public interest—the only standpoint which the senators are supposed to consider—there can be no objection to this reform. Both major parties in the last campaign pledged themselves to adopt it. There will be no shadow of an excuse for the senate if it fails to enact the reform into law at an early date.

RHYME AND REASON

By ANNE CAMPBELL

A COUNTRY MILE

When we have lost our way (It leads past farms,
And we enjoy the country's quiet charms),
We ask a native standing at a stile:
"Where does Joe live?" . . . He indicates a mile.

A city mile seems brief, but as we go
Along a winding roadway deep in snow,
We swear that our informant is a lout
Who has forgotten his slow way about.

A country mile! How long it seems to us,
But you remember still how glorious
It was when years ago I matched your stride . . .
A country mile was short, walked by your side!

THEATER ISN'T DEAD

By BRUCE CATTON

Read any theatrical magazine, talk to any actor or scan the columns of any dramatic critic, and you are pretty certain to learn that the theater is dead, as far as the "road" is concerned.

Cities that once supported two, three or four theaters all winter long now have but one, and it is dark half of the time. A few group theaters valiantly keep the dramatic torch alight in the hinterlands, but for the most part the citizen who likes the theater has to get by on pretty slim fare.

Theatrical men have plenty of reasons to offer for the decline. They blame the movies, the automobiles, the radio, and so on; but somehow they never seem able to put the finger on the greatest culprits of all—themselves.

Here is a case in point. Not long ago Helen Hayes brought her Broadway success, "Victoria Regina," to Cleveland. Now Cleveland is a spot where the decline of the theater has been extremely pronounced. Aside from a capable group theater outfit, it supports just one "legitimate" house, which starves its way through winter after winter.

But Miss Hayes did a land-office business. She stayed a week and played to a packed house every night. The theater had to turn back thousands of dollars worth of orders for tickets. Never, not even in the pre-movie days, did any theatrical troupe do a better business.

So the road, then, is not dead at all—as far as this particular actress and this particular play are concerned. It is as lively and as lucrative as if radios, movies, autos and all the other distractions had never been invented.

Which compels one to wonder if the much talked-of decline of the road is not the fault of the theatrical magnates themselves.

To be sure, actresses like Helen Hayes do not grow on every bush; nor do plays like "Victoria Regina." But the point is that a first-rate show with a first-rate star and a first-rate cast will still do a good business in the provinces—whenever New York sees fit to offer such fare.

The plain truth is that the theater has played its cards very stupidly. It has sent out "original New York casts" filled with incompetents who never saw Broadway. It has sponsored dull, hackneyed, unimaginative plays, unspeakably poor musical shows, and "revivals" of numbers that never were any good in the first place. It has inflicted try-outs on the provinces without even bothering to make the performers learn their lines before accepting the public's good money.

It could get away with that in the old days, because it had no competition. The citizen who wanted amusement had to take what was offered. Now he doesn't. If he slips into the movies or listens to the radio instead of going to the theater, it's simply because he gets better amusement that way.

The road would revive quickly enough, if the theatrical world got back to first principles and gave the customer a decent run for his money.

A LIVING MEMORIAL

There are few of us who have not been saddened by the loss of a friend or relative who has died of cancer. Today, the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer is building a living memorial to those thousands who have died. The memorial is not an obelisk of stone but a vital crusade with a message of encouragement and hope for our own and later generations.

The Army honors those who have died by appealing to the living to unite in a movement to fight cancer with knowledge, to spread the message that in its early stages this disease is curable. Probably half of the 150,000 men and women who died last year could have been saved had they known the symptoms of early cancer and acted on that knowledge.

These symptoms—the cancer danger signals—which may mean cancer and are certainly important enough to warrant a visit to a physician are:

1. Any persistent lump or thickening, especially of the breast.
2. Any irregular bleeding or discharge from any body openings.
3. Any sore that does not heal—particularly about the tongue, mouth or lips.
4. Persistent indigestion.
5. Sudden changes in the form or rate of growth of a mole or wart.

In its second annual campaign the Army has the support of the 100,000 men and women who enlisted last spring. It has the backing and the supervision of distinguished physicians, the official representatives of the state medical societies, who have approved the program of the Women's Field Army. Marjorie B. Illig, the national commander of the Woman's Field Army, is national chairman of the division of health of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and national chairman of the health commission of the Association of Women in Public Health. Dr. C. C. Little, managing director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, which sponsors the Army, is also director of the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Research laboratory at Bar Harbor, Me., and one of six distinguished scientists named recently by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau to direct the National Cancer institute. A national advisory committee headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt includes the presidents of fifteen women's organizations.

The acting commander of this state is Mrs. Ralph Holden Agate, Lafayette, La.

The first year's campaign of the Women's Field Army showed gratifying results. Physicians have reported many cases of women with early and thus curable cancer who came to them as a result of the educational work of the Army. Men and women in great number accepted the message of the Army and went to competent physicians for general physical examinations.

Every woman astan individual and as a member of an organized group however small can help the Army present its message. In April, men and women by enrolling and paying their enlistment fee in the Army will furnish the funds to carry on the cause of cancer control.

No finer tribute can be paid to the memory of those who have died of cancer than by supporting this war to save human life. A living memorial to these loved ones we have lost and a successful crusade to save and protect ourselves and our friends—this we can build by courageous and patient devotion to the Women's Field Army.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

Passing Tammany Hall the other afternoon I dropped in. Not a soul was about the reception room, generally packed to the limit, and finally I had to stamp several times. Just as I was getting ready to go, a secretarial looking fellow came out of the nowhere.

"Nobody around," I ventured. He shook his head and inquired what he could do. I made some excuse and departed. Thus has one of the most powerful political organizations in America lost its strangle hold and permitted an outraged citizenry to breathe more easily.

Never were there such shocking abuses of the ballot as Tammany has demonstrated through its long and discreditable career. I have on three occasions been unable to vote because the machine refused to work for the anti-Tammanyites I preferred. Upon coming out of the booth in a rage I was met only with smiling contempt by the election officers and with a shrug of indifference by the police sworn to carry out their duties.

In the old days of heavier immigrations, Tammany, for voting gain, of course, may have accomplished some good in making the newcomer feel at home, and it has filled the grocery basket and paid the tenement rent for a few it might use, but generally speaking its job has been to plunder a city. And it has done so with pitiless and mercenary disregard for all those who opposed it.

There are those who cry that Tammany is dead. And while it is nearest to dissolution it has ever been in its career, there may still be another life in the old cat. Anyway, it needs watching, and for the first sign of getting its head above water should receive another ducking.

Some talk of changing the name, but that will be of no value. Tammany is Tammany, whatever it is called, and honorable men and women will recognize it for what it is—a dishonest organization for plunder.

A friend in sending some watermelon rind pickles from the Ohio valley says: "We use every part of the melon out here, even down to the seeds, which we squirt at drunks in the drinking places."

One of the inquisitive magazines finds that it takes about $15 to see Radio City from top to bottom, including lunch and dinner, hear a few broadcasts and the like. Sounds a little high but it is most of a day excursion and in comparison to other sightseeing tours of similar time and interest is quite reasonable.

Another Train has taken to the scribbling art. She is Helen Train Hilles, daughter of the novelist Arthur Train and daughter-in-law of Charles D. Hilles, former chief of the Republican national committee. Mrs. Hilles' latest is an informal, amusing and practical guide for the modern hostess. Before this she wrote three successful juvenile books.

I heard another of the horror stories the other day. A lady visitor to a New York hotel was assigned a room with twin beds. During the night while half asleep she plunged her hand between the beds. At first she felt a slight scratching, then something live and warm ran up her arm. It was a mouse. She let go a shriek and followed it up with a series of Comanche yells. For ten days afterward she was unable to sleep more than a half hour at a time. And now she has gone to a sanitarium to recuperate.

Puzzle: We often wonder just precisely where the Windsors intended to stay on their visit to New York. We have the solemn word of four hotel pressagents that elaborate suites had been made over for the royal pair.

One of New York's strangest occupational niches is that of the seller of hot chestnuts, who, with his portable charcoal stove, stands on various corners selling his five-cent pokes. He never solicits, and to all appearances is indifferent to trade. He merely stands statue-like and waits. I am told many are able to make enough during winter months to live the rest of the year loafing. Some vendors have been in the business 30 years. They are akin to the old apple women who peddle their wares through the manufacturing districts at lunch time—and leave vast apartment buildings to relatives.

STAMP NEWS

By I. S. Klein

SINCE the beginning of Spain's civil war, every large Spanish city and both insurgents and Loyalists have turned out an amazing number of stamp issues. Upwards of 2000 varieties have been printed to the confusion of the collector and the speculator. Recently, both sides have seized on the release of miniature sheets. In many cases foreign speculators have printed "Spanish" stamps outside the country for immediate sale. The stamps never entered Spain. All of which behooves the collector to make current Spanish additions most carefully.

The last of the unsold Edward VIII stamps have now been recalled from all British postoffices, it is reported. There will be no further government sale of them.

The Postoffice Department has under consideration a possible series of U. S. stamps designed to honor famous native sons. The list would include educators, pioneers, inventors, engineers, physicians and surgeons, jurists, sculptors, musicians, scientists, artists and authors.

Effective Dec. 1, general reduction in airmail postage on letters and articles addressed to Central and South America and the West Indies was announced by Postmaster General James A. Farley. Airmail postage to practically all Latin-American countries was substantially reduced. There was no change in rates where the postage has heretofore been 10 cents—the minimum postage to any country being 10 cents a half ounce. The new rates conform more closely to prevailing international postage rates.

COAT STOLEN

John Worley, student at Louisiana Tech, yesterday reported to the Monroe police department the theft of an overcoat which he said was stolen early Saturday morning from the Lakeside Country club where he was attending a dance.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine)

Another extraordinary disease of the nervous system, known as St. Vitus dance, or Sydenham's chorea, after the man who first described it, is usually seen in children, but sometimes also in adults.

Nowadays it is believed to be due in some perhaps indirect way to an infection by a germ of the streptococcus type. Perhaps some of the poisons developed by this germ in the body get into the brain and nervous system.

Sometimes the first appearance of the symptoms is associated with a fright, an accident or an emotional shock. Children who frequently mimic the actions of other people may seem to have this disease but a habit spasm is not to be confused with the twitching of true chorea.

Girls suffer with this condition about two and one-half times as often as do boys, and more than 80 per cent of all of the cases occur during early childhood. The cases appear more often in certain families, probably because of the special construction of the nervous system in those families.

Frequently St. Vitus dance is associated with rheumatism or rheumatic infections, probably because both conditions are related to an infection by the streptococcus type of germ.

Occasionally there may be a period of illness with headache, vomiting and even a slight fever before the symptoms first appear. Then come the spontaneous movements, the dizziness and the weakness, which are the chief marks of the disease.

The person who has St. Vitus dance makes involuntary but conscious muscular jerks and twitches and because of this has difficulty in co-ordinating his actions. When the twitching movements affect the muscles of the face, they are, of course, much more noticeable than when they concern the arms or legs.

The typical twitching movements are quick, beginning suddenly and passing rapidly. No two movements are exactly alike as is usually the case with a habit spasm. The movements usually stop during sleep but in severe cases may appear during sleep. In some cases the trouble may be so severe that the patient cannot sleep.

REPORT RAPID PROGRESS ON CENTER STRUCTURE

Rapid progress is reported on the construction of the new social center building at the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. Ground was broken more than four weeks ago and the concrete framework of the first floor was poured some days ago.

Weather permitting, the second floor cement will be poured this week. It is hoped that the roof can be built before heavy rains or unbroken cold weather begin.

Dean C. C. Colvert said that he anticipates that the building will be completed for occupancy about March 1. It will contain a cafeteria, library, and room for social assemblies on the first floor, and a dormitory on the second floor.

STATE NORMAL ENROLLS 2,105 FOR NEXT SESSION

NATCHITOCHES, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Early registration for the winter quarter which opened at the Louisiana State Normal college here this week mounted to 2,105 in all departments of the college Saturday to give the college one of the largest mid-year campus enrollments in its history.

Late registration for advanced students which will extend through January 3 following the two-week holiday period is expected to bring the final enrollment for the new session to more than 2,500. With 432 students throughout the state enrolled in extension and correspondence work, the college will have almost 3,000 in all divisions this quarter.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—Opinion appears to vary as to how much of the potential sixteen billion dollar housing boom suggested by Roosevelt actually can be realized.

The problem of reducing building material and labor costs, which the president will tackle in promised conferences with industry, labor and finance, and which he says must be met if the proposed boom is to succeed, is very far from solved.

The effectiveness of proposed changes in the Federal Housing administration law, although calculated to make housing investment slightly more attractive, also is questioned. The administration hasn't yet made up its mind whether to seek to use capital gains tax exemptions, and taxation of income from tax exempt bonds, as a means of pushing money into the housing market.

Some experts believe that early next year the pressure of insurance company and mutual savings bank funds yearning for investment will begin to flood into the housing field, regardless of administration moves.

Others suspect that the "strike of capital" will balk the Roosevelt effort until the administration makes various concessions to Wall Street or finally defies reluctant private capital and undertakes to launch a huge house-building program of its own.

Consumer Market In Doubt

Finally, there appears to be much doubt as to just how large a consumer market there is for new housing and just how much potential buyers or renters can afford to pay. After the president's message appeared, the national housing committee decided to postpone publication of its report on the available market for dwellings.

The report will show that the number of families which can afford to pay $50 a month for rent is now about a third as large as the number in 1929, when it was figured at about 7,000,000 non-farm families. (Roughly, an income of $50 a week can economically pay rent of about $50 a month on a house costing an average of about $5,000.)

The report will show that 83 per cent of all dwelling units built in the period of 1930-37, when prices of building materials and labor averaged less than at present, cost $5,000 or more. (Roosevelt makes a "moderate estimate of $4,000 per unit" in the boom which the administration hopes will appear to beat the depression.)

Shortage In Low-Cost Homes

The committee's survey will show that there is practically no shortage in houses costing $5,000 or more, no considerable shortage in the range renting between $30 and $50 a month, but a great shortage in the range renting from $20 to $30 a month.

Although these figures may offer no great encouragement to the administration and its hopes, they certainly suggest confirmation of the president's idea that prices and rents of new dwellings must be driven well below present levels if any important results are to be achieved.

The national housing committee, of which Monsignor John A. Ryan is chairman, is composed of industrialists, labor leaders and others of national prominence. Its survey of the housing market was made through consultation with a number of outstanding economists and statisticians in government and industry.

Middle Class Hit Hardest

Findings indicate that the middle-income groups which buy average, modest homes have not emerged from the depression as well, proportionately, as the higher income groups and the very low income groups.

Although in 1929 it was found that 12.6 per cent of American non-farm families had annual incomes of less than $500, only 8 per cent were in that group in 1935. (The average annual WPA wage of $750 was a factor here.) And while the national income increased 35 per cent from 1933 to 1935, families in the $50-a-week group increased only 22 per cent.

Some housing experts think that raising the insurable limit on FHA loans from 80 to 90 per cent will be no great stimulus to home-building. One reason is that this raises the carrying charge load, offsetting the half-of-one per cent reduction in the FHA rate. Size of the monthly payment, FHA has found, has been the chief deterrent to would-be home-owners.

EIGHT ALARMS GIVEN TO FIRE DEPARTMENT

There was little leisure at the Monroe fire department yesterday. Eight alarms were turned in between 7 a.m., and 6 p.m., and members of the various companies were kept on the go. Despite the large number of calls the property damage reported was very slight.

The first included six grass, one automobile and one house fire. The automobile, which was only slightly damaged, belonged to T. E. Weldon and caught afire at the corner of North Second and DeSiard streets shortly after 10 a.m. The cause of the fire was said to have been a short in the wiring system.

The house fire was reported at 261 DeSiard street, and was caused by sparks from a flue. The property is owned by John Spatafora and occupied by Ratchel Baker, negro woman.

Grass fires were reported at South First and Apple streets where two separate runs were made; 1703 Park avenue; 1600 South Grand street, Stovall park and South Fourth street and Ouachita avenue.

OFFICERS TO MEET

The last meeting of the year of the reserve officers' school will be held at the American Legion home Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. A chicken-spaghetti supper will be served following the meeting. "Current Military Events" will be the subject, which will be presented by Major George T. Madison. Attention is called to the fact that the meeting night has been changed for this time only to Tuesday instead of Monday night.

Alabama has an old statute which makes it illegal to buy or sell a bag of peanuts between the hours of sunset and sunrise.

A Bulletin Addressed To Young Men

Do you want to be someone? Do you want to go somewhere in life? Do you want success of any kind?

You can't do it alone. You must depend on people—on the public which surrounds you.

Not even a lighthouse keeper can succeed by himself. For if there were not ships manned by crews there would be no need of a lighthouse.

The writer and the sculptor may withdraw from contact with the public and say that they depend on nothing but the flame of creation burning within themselves, but they are mistaken. Unless there are people to read what they write and to view what they model, their work is futile.

The doctor, the stylist, the jockey, the minister, the actor, the butcher—all these, as much as the auctioneer or the sales person, are helpless and hopeless without the sustaining society that surrounds them.

Imprint this on the innermost recesses of your heart. Let it burn into your mind. Let it be the backdrop and prompter of your thinking.

Wherever people gather, look at them and realize they are your sustenance and support.

What are you doing about it? How do you treat this sustaining support of yours? Do you barely tolerate the public or do you appreciate it? Do you look upon these numerous people of varied appearance and capacities as the very machine of life which grinds out your living? Do you look at these people with sympathy and in an effort to understand them?

Every city in the land is full of people with jobs in which they contact their employers' customers. Customers who support the business! Customers for whom the business is operated!

What are you doing about that? How do you meet customers of your employer? The boss invested the money. He carries the big worries and responsibilities. He pays for the advertising which invites people in. And he employs you for only one thing—to serve. He employs you to assist this public which means your living.

Do you meet the people you serve as their servant—willing and eager to do all you can to make their lives more satisfying? If you don't, you are a cheat and a fraud, for that is your job. For naught else does the business exist.

Customers may not always be considerate of you, but it is your job always, eternally, and forever to be considerate to the customer.

THUMBS DOWN ON BLIMPS

And now it is proposed that some of the funds for the development of a United States merchant marine should go into the production of commercial dirigibles. The dirigible is held forth as a safe and comfortable means of travel. It is pictured as a transportation device that America should not neglect either in time of war or in time of peace.

Most people, with memories of the Shenandoah, the Macon, the Akron and the Hindenburg (to mention only a few), will feel that the government should turn thumbs down on the above proposal and refuse to spend a single penny for dirigible construction.

Even when using non-inflammable helium, these giant lighter-than-air craft have demonstrated a chronic susceptibility to tragic accidents. Whatever money is available for purposes of transit development might far better go into the construction of ordinary water craft then into the building of unstable monsters of the air.

OUT OF GAS!

There are times when it does seem as if the predominating trait of the American people must be plain absent-mindedness.

Some enterprising statistician with a flair for oddments of interesting but useless information has reported that no fewer than 1,500,000 motorists last year managed to get themselves stalled on the highway with empty gasoline tanks, and if that record can be due to anything but ordinary, every-day absent-mindedness, many persons would like to know what it is.

Every car nowadays has a gasoline gauge, perfectly visible to the driver at all times. There are times when it seems as if every corner had a filling station. With that combination, it is hard to see how anyone ever gets stalled with an empty tank. Yet somehow we all do it—a million and a half of us, in one year's time.

We must be a tolerably flighty people, in some ways.

OUGHT TO BE A LAW—

One of the less spectacular items of business which congress is supposed to handle this fall is the Ramspeck bill, which would put first, second and third-class postmasters permanently under the merit system and would go far to relieve the postoffice department of the patronage evil.

This bill passed the house last winter, and now—along with so much other legislation—slumbers peacefully in a senate committee. It should be taken from the committee and passed at once.

From the standpoint of public interest—the only standpoint which the senators are supposed to consider—there can be no objection to this reform. Both major parties in the last campaign pledged themselves to adopt it. There will be no shadow of an excuse for the senate if it fails to enact the reform into law at an early date.

RHYME AND REASON

By ANNE CAMPBELL

A COUNTRY MILE

When we have lost our way (It leads past farms,
And we enjoy the country's quiet charms),
We ask a native standing at a stile:
"Where does Joe live?" . . . He indicates a mile.

A city mile seems brief, but as we go
Along a winding roadway deep in snow,
We swear that our informant is a lout
Who has forgotten his slow way about.

A country mile! How long it seems to us,
But you remember still how glorious
It was when years ago I matched your stride . . .
A country mile was short, walked by your side!

By BRUCE CATTON

Read any theatrical magazine, talk to any actor or scan the columns of any dramatic critic, and you are pretty certain to learn that the theater is dead, as far as the "road" is concerned.

Cities that once supported two, three or four theaters all winter long now have but one, and it is dark half of the time. A few group theaters valiantly keep the dramatic torch alight in the hinterlands, but for the most part the citizen who likes the theater has to get by on pretty slim fare.

Theatrical men have plenty of reasons to offer for the decline. They blame the movies, the automobiles, the radio, and so on; but somehow they never seem able to put the finger on the greatest culprits of all—themselves.

Here is a case in point. Not long ago Helen Hayes brought her Broadway success, "Victoria Regina," to Cleveland. Now Cleveland is a spot where the decline of the theater has been extremely pronounced. Aside from a capable group theater outfit, it supports just one "legitimate" house, which starves its way through winter after winter.

But Miss Hayes did a land-office business. She stayed a week and played to a packed house every night. The theater had to turn back thousands of dollars worth of orders for tickets. Never, not even in the pre-movie days, did any theatrical troupe do a better business.

So the road, then, is not dead at all—as far as this particular actress and this particular play are concerned. It is as lively and as lucrative as if radios, movies, autos and all the other distractions had never been invented.

Which compels one to wonder if the much talked-of decline of the road is not the fault of the theatrical magnates themselves.

To be sure, actresses like Helen Hayes do not grow on every bush; nor do plays like "Victoria Regina." But the point is that a first-rate show with a first-rate star and a first-rate cast will still do a good business in the provinces—whenever New York sees fit to offer such fare.

The plain truth is that the theater has played its cards very stupidly. It has sent out "original New York casts" filled with incompetents who never saw Broadway. It has sponsored dull, hackneyed, unimaginative plays, unspeakably poor musical shows, and "revivals" of numbers that never were any good in the first place. It has inflicted try-outs on the provinces without even bothering to make the performers learn their lines before accepting the public's good money.

It could get away with that in the old days, because it had no competition. The citizen who wanted amusement had to take what was offered. Now he doesn't. If he slips into the movies or listens to the radio instead of going to the theater, it's simply because he gets better amusement that way.

The road would revive quickly enough, if the theatrical world got back to first principles and gave the customer a decent run for his money.

A LIVING MEMORIAL

There are few of us who have not been saddened by the loss of a friend or relative who has died of cancer. Today, the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer is building a living memorial to those thousands who have died. The memorial is not an obelisk of stone but a vital crusade with a message of encouragement and hope for our own and later generations.

The Army honors those who have died by appealing to the living to unite in a movement to fight cancer with knowledge, to spread the message that in its early stages this disease is curable. Probably half of the 150,000 men and women who died last year could have been saved had they known the symptoms of early cancer and acted on that knowledge.

These symptoms—the cancer danger signals—which may mean cancer and are certainly important enough to warrant a visit to a physician are:

2. Any irregular bleeding or discharge from any body openings.

4. Persistent indigestion.
5. Sudden changes in the form or rate of growth of a mole or wart.

In its second annual campaign the Army has the support of the 100,000 men and women who enlisted last spring. A national advisory committee headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt includes the presidents of fifteen women's organizations.

The acting commander of this state is Mrs. Ralph Holden Agate, Lafayette, La.

The first year's campaign of the Women's Field Army showed gratifying results. Physicians have reported many cases of women with early and thus curable cancer who came to them as a result of the educational work of the Army. Men and women in great number accepted the message of the Army and went to competent physicians for general physical examinations.

Every woman as an individual and as a member of an organized group however small can help the Army present its message. In April, men and women by enrolling and paying their enlistment fee in the Army will furnish the funds to carry on the cause of cancer control.

No finer tribute can be paid to the memory of those who have died of cancer than by supporting this war to save human life. A living memorial to these loved ones we have lost and a successful crusade to save and protect ourselves and our friends—this we can build by courageous and patient devotion to the Women's Field Army.

By O. O. McINTYRE

Passing Tammany Hall the other afternoon I dropped in. Not a soul was about the reception room, generally packed to the limit, and finally I had to stamp several times. Just as I was getting ready to go, a secretarial looking fellow came out of the nowhere.

"Nobody around," I ventured. He shook his head and inquired what he could do. I made some excuse and departed. Thus has one of the most powerful political organizations in America lost its strangle hold and permitted an outraged citizenry to breathe more easily.

Never were there such shocking abuses of the ballot as Tammany has demonstrated through its long and discreditable career. I have on three occasions been unable to vote because the machine refused to work for the anti-Tammanyites I preferred. Upon coming out of the booth in a rage I was met only with smiling contempt by the election officers and with a shrug of indifference by the police sworn to carry out their duties.

In the old days of heavier immigrations, Tammany, for voting gain, of course, may have accomplished some good in making the newcomer feel at home, and it has filled the grocery basket and paid the tenement rent for a few it might use, but generally speaking its job has been to plunder a city. And it has done so with pitiless and mercenary disregard for all those who opposed it.

There are those who cry that Tammany is dead. And while it is nearest to dissolution it has ever been in its career, there may still be another life in the old cat. Anyway, it needs watching, and for the first sign of getting its head above water should receive another ducking.

Some talk of changing the name, but that will be of no value. Tammany is Tammany, whatever it is called, and honorable men and women will recognize it for what it is—a dishonest organization for plunder.

A friend in sending some watermelon rind pickles from the Ohio valley says: "We use every part of the melon out here, even down to the seeds, which we squirt at drunks in the drinking places."

One of the inquisitive magazines finds that it takes about $15 to see Radio City from top to bottom, including lunch and dinner, hear a few broadcasts and the like. Sounds a little high but it is most of a day excursion and in comparison to other sightseeing tours of similar time and interest is quite reasonable.

Another Train has taken to the scribbling art. She is Helen Train Hilles, daughter of the novelist Arthur Train and daughter-in-law of Charles D. Hilles, former chief of the Republican national committee. Mrs. Hilles' latest is an informal, amusing and practical guide for the modern hostess. Before this she wrote three successful juvenile books.

I heard another of the horror stories the other day. A lady visitor to a New York hotel was assigned a room with twin beds. During the night while half asleep she plunged her hand between the beds. At first she felt a slight scratching, then something live and warm ran up her arm. It was a mouse. She let go a shriek and followed it up with a series of Comanche yells. For ten days afterward she was unable to sleep more than a half hour at a time. And now she has gone to a sanitarium to recuperate.

Puzzle: We often wonder just precisely where the Windsors intended to stay on their visit to New York. We have the solemn word of four hotel pressagents that elaborate suites had been made over for the royal pair.

One of New York's strangest occupational niches is that of the seller of hot chestnuts, who, with his portable charcoal stove, stands on various corners selling his five-cent pokes. He never solicits, and to all appearances is indifferent to trade. He merely stands statue-like and waits. I am told many are able to make enough during winter months to live the rest of the year loafing. Some vendors have been in the business 30 years. They are akin to the old apple women who peddle their wares through the manufacturing districts at lunch time—and leave vast apartment buildings to relatives.

STAMP NEWS

By I. S. Klein

SINCE the beginning of Spain's civil war, every large Spanish city and both insurgents and Loyalists have turned out an amazing number of stamp issues. Upwards of 2000 varieties have been printed to the confusion of the collector and the speculator. Recently, both sides have seized on the release of miniature sheets. In many cases foreign speculators have printed "Spanish" stamps outside the country for immediate sale. The stamps never entered Spain. All of which behooves the collector to make current Spanish additions most carefully.

The last of the unsold Edward VIII stamps have now been recalled from all British postoffices, it is reported. There will be no further government sale of them.

The Postoffice Department has under consideration a possible series of U. S. stamps designed to honor famous native sons. The list would include educators, pioneers, inventors, engineers, physicians and surgeons, jurists, sculptors, musicians, scientists, artists and authors.

Effective Dec. 1, general reduction in airmail postage on letters and articles addressed to Central and South America and the West Indies was announced by Postmaster General James A. Farley. Airmail postage to practically all Latin-American countries was substantially reduced. There was no change in rates where the postage has heretofore been 10 cents—the minimum postage to any country being 10 cents a half ounce. The new rates conform more closely to prevailing international postage rates.

Interesting new issues: Germany—annual charity set, nine values, depicting the development of the German merchant marine; Albania—nine special stamps, commemorating the 25th anniversary of the proclamation of independence from Turkey.

COAT STOLEN

John Worley, student at Louisiana Tech, yesterday reported to the Monroe police department the theft of an overcoat which he said was stolen early Saturday morning from the Lakeside Country club where he was attending a dance.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

(Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine)

Another extraordinary disease of the nervous system, known as St. Vitus dance, or Sydenham's chorea, after the man who first described it, is usually seen in children, but sometimes also in adults.

Nowadays it is believed to be due in some perhaps indirect way to an infection by a germ of the streptococcus type. Perhaps some of the poisons developed by this germ in the body get into the brain and nervous system.

Sometimes the first appearance of the symptoms is associated with a fright, an accident or an emotional shock. Children who frequently mimic the actions of other people may seem to have this disease but a habit spasm is not to be confused with the twitching of true chorea.

Girls suffer with this condition about two and one-half times as often as do boys, and more than 80 per cent of all of the cases occur during early childhood. The cases appear more often in certain families, probably because of the special construction of the nervous system in those families.

Frequently St. Vitus dance is associated with rheumatism or rheumatic infections, probably because both conditions are related to an infection by the streptococcus type of germ.

Occasionally there may be a period of illness with headache, vomiting and even a slight fever before the symptoms first appear. Then come the spontaneous movements, the dizziness and the weakness, which are the chief marks of the disease.

The person who has St. Vitus dance makes involuntary but conscious muscular jerks and twitches and because of this has difficulty in co-ordinating his actions. When the twitching movements affect the muscles of the face, they are, of course, much more noticeable than when they concern the arms or legs.

The typical twitching movements are quick, beginning suddenly and passing rapidly. No two movements are exactly alike as is usually the case with a habit spasm. The movements usually stop during sleep but in severe cases may appear during sleep. In some cases the trouble may be so severe that the patient cannot sleep.

REPORT RAPID PROGRESS ON CENTER STRUCTURE

Rapid progress is reported on the construction of the new social center building at the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. Ground was broken more than four weeks ago and the concrete framework of the first floor was poured some days ago.

Weather permitting, the second floor cement will be poured this week. It is hoped that the roof can be built before heavy rains or unbroken cold weather begin.

Dean C. C. Colvert said that he anticipates that the building will be completed for occupancy about March 1. It will contain a cafeteria, library, and room for social assemblies on the first floor, and a dormitory on the second floor.

STATE NORMAL ENROLLS 2,105 FOR NEXT SESSION

NATCHITOCHES, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Early registration for the winter quarter which opened at the Louisiana State Normal college here this week mounted to 2,105 in all departments of the college Saturday to give the college one of the largest mid-year campus enrollments in its history.

Late registration for advanced students which will extend through January 3 following the two-week holiday period is expected to bring the final enrollment for the new session to more than 2,500. With 432 students throughout the state enrolled in extension and correspondence work, the college will have almost 3,000 in all divisions this quarter.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—Opinion appears to vary as to how much of the potential sixteen billion dollar housing boom suggested by Roosevelt actually can be realized.

The problem of reducing building material and labor costs, which the president will tackle in promised conferences with industry, labor and finance, and which he says must be met if the proposed boom is to succeed, is very far from solved.

The effectiveness of proposed changes in the Federal Housing administration law, although calculated to make housing investment slightly more attractive, also is questioned. The administration hasn't yet made up its mind whether to seek to use capital gains tax exemptions, and taxation of income from tax exempt bonds, as a means of pushing money into the housing market.

Some experts believe that early next year the pressure of insurance company and mutual savings bank funds yearning for investment will begin to flood into the housing field, regardless of administration moves.

Others suspect that the "strike of capital" will balk the Roosevelt effort until the administration makes various concessions to Wall Street or finally defies reluctant private capital and undertakes to launch a huge house-building program of its own.

Consumer Market In Doubt

Finally, there appears to be much doubt as to just how large a consumer market there is for new housing and just how much potential buyers or renters can afford to pay. After the president's message appeared, the national housing committee decided to postpone publication of its report on the available market for dwellings.

The report will show that the number of families which can afford to pay $50 a month for rent is now about a third as large as the number in 1929, when it was figured at about 7,000,000 non-farm families. (Roughly, an income of $50 a week can economically pay rent of about $50 a month on a house costing an average of about $5,000.)

The report will show that 83 per cent of all dwelling units built in the period of 1930-37, when prices of building materials and labor averaged less than at present, cost $5,000 or more. (Roosevelt makes a "moderate estimate of $4,000 per unit" in the boom which the administration hopes will appear to beat the depression.)

Shortage In Low-Cost Homes

The committee's survey will show that there is practically no shortage in houses costing $5,000 or more, no considerable shortage in the range renting between $30 and $50 a month, but a great shortage in the range renting from $20 to $30 a month.

Although these figures may offer no great encouragement to the administration and its hopes, they certainly suggest confirmation of the president's idea that prices and rents of new dwellings must be driven well below present levels if any important results are to be achieved.

The national housing committee, of which Monsignor John A. Ryan is chairman, is composed of industrialists, labor leaders and others of national prominence. Its survey of the housing market was made through consultation with a number of outstanding economists and statisticians in government and industry.

Middle Class Hit Hardest

Findings indicate that the middle income groups which buy average, modest homes have not emerged from the depression as well, proportionately, as the higher income groups and the very low income groups.

Although in 1929 it was found that 12.6 per cent of American non-farm families had annual incomes of less than $500, only 8 per cent were in that group in 1935. (The average annual WPA wage of $750 was a factor here.) And while the national income increased 35 per cent from 1933 to 1935, families in the $50-a-week group increased only 22 per cent.

Some housing experts think that raising the insurable limit on FHA loans from 80 to 90 per cent will be no great stimulus to home-building. One reason is that this raises the carrying charge load, offsetting the half-of-one per cent reduction in the FHA rate. Size of the monthly payment, FHA has found, has been the chief deterrent to would-be home-owners.

EIGHT ALARMS GIVEN TO FIRE DEPARTMENT

There was little leisure at the Monroe fire department yesterday. Eight alarms were turned in between 7 a.m., and 6 p.m., and members of the various companies were kept on the go. Despite the large number of calls the property damage reported was very slight.

The first included six grass, one automobile and one house fire. The automobile, which was only slightly damaged, belonged to T. E. Weldon and caught afire at the corner of North Second and DeSiard streets shortly after 10 a.m. The cause of the fire was said to have been a short in the wiring system.

The house fire was reported at 2618 DeSiard street, and was caused by sparks from a flue. The property is owned by John Spatafora and occupied by Ratchel Baker, negro woman.

Grass fires were reported at South First and Apple streets where two separate runs were made; 1703 Park avenue; 1600 South Grand street; Stovall park and South Fourth street and Ouachita avenue.

OFFICERS TO MEET

The last meeting of the year of the reserve officers' school will be held at the American Legion home Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. A chicken-spaghetti supper will be served following the meeting. "Current Military Events" will be the subject, which will be presented by Major George T. Madison. Attention is called to the fact that the meeting night has been changed for this time only to Tuesday instead of Monday night.

Alabama has an old statute which makes it illegal to buy or sell a bag of peanuts between the hours of sunset and sunrise.

MADDEN DENIES INJURING PRESS

Asserts Its Freedom Guarantees Not Violated By Issuing Subpoena

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Chairman J. Warren Madden of the labor relations board denied today that his board violated freedom of the press guarantees while hearing unfair labor practice charges against the Weirton Steel company.

He issued a statement defending the board's action in subpoenaing Hartley Barclay, a New York trade magazine editor, as a witness in the Weirton case.

Board attorneys said they wanted Barclay to testify whether an article he wrote criticizing the hearing had been used by Weirton to discourage steel workers from exercising their right under the Wagner labor act to join a free union. Barclay refused to obey the subpoena, claiming it violated freedom of the press.

The mild-mannered one-time law school professor from Pittsburgh, piloting the board through intermittent storms of criticism from congressional and labor sources, said there was no relation between the board's subpoena action and freedom of the press.

Editors and reporters, Madden said, are not exempt by constitutional immunity from giving public authorities any evidence they may have of law violations. Neither do they have the common law exemptions granted priests, lawyers and doctors from divulging confidential information.

Referring to Barclay's refusal to answer the subpoena, Madden said:

"If a merchant or a teacher or a farmer had such evidence, everyone would expect him to respond to such a call and assist his government in the enforcement of the laws. How does the fact that the witness is an editor change the situation?"

Freedom of the press, Madden said, "does not mean that if a news gatherer or an opinion seeker in the course of his work observes a violation of law, he may not be asked by public authority to give evidence of that violation."

The same applies to a publisher, he added, if he "knowingly or unwittingly permits the writing and printing to be used as a part of a course of conduct which is in violation of law."

Madden said he could not believe the makers of the constitution "had any such intention" to exempt publishers and editors from giving public authorities evidences of law violations observed in the course of gathering and printing news.

Aides of the board said the legal staff was considering federal court action to require Barclay to answer the subpoena.

STALIN ADMITS ELECTION SURE

Asks For Recall Of Those Who 'Go Off The Right Road'

MOSCOW, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Joseph Stalin, the Soviet Union's Communist leader, acknowledged tonight that his own election to the supreme council of the union in tomorrow's election was a foregone conclusion.

Addressing the nation on the eve of its first secret, direct election, Stalin thanked his constituents for the confidence they placed in him and said he willingly accepted the responsibilities of office.

"You may depend on Comrade Stalin to carry out his duties before the people," he declared, in the second radio broadcast he had ever made.

Every man and woman who has reached the age of 18 years was expected to vote in the election of 1,143 members for four-year terms in the supreme council of the union—the two-house Red parliament. The election was regarded as a nation-wide test of confidence in Stalin.

The Communist leader told Soviet voters tomorrow's election would be the first free democratic election the world has ever known because the voters would be free from pressure by "haves" and "have nots."

He urged them to keep a close check on their newly chosen representatives and recall those who "go off the right road."

Turning to the possibility that all the candidates might not turn out to be satisfactory, he said "every family has a mongrel."

AIR CORPS OFFICER BURNED TO DEATH

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Dec. 11.—(AP)—An army air corps officer burned to death and his non-commissioned companion suffered serious injuries today when their pursuit plane caught fire while flying in an aerial show and crashed in flames before 5,000 spectators.

Major A. E. Waller, the pilot, perished in the blazing wreckage, but his observer, Staff Sergeant John Johnson, escaped cremation when catapulted from the open cockpit thirty feet through the air.

He bounced along the ground until he came to rest 10 feet from the spot where he struck. At first reported killed, he was found to have suffered a head injury from which hospital attendants gave him a chance to recover.

Major Waller left his formation when the plane caught fire about 200 feet from the ground while levelling off for a landing. He eased downward but 50 feet above the earth the plane nosed sharply down and crashed.

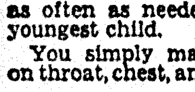
Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.



You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin ...

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

MADDEN DENIES INJURING PRESS

Asserts Its Freedom Guarantees Not Violated By Issuing Subpoena

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Chairman J. Warren Madden of the labor relations board denied today that his board violated freedom of the press guarantees while hearing unfair labor practice charges against the Weirton Steel company.

He issued a statement defending the board's action in subpoenaing Hartley Barclay, a New York trade magazine editor, as a witness in the Weirton case.

Board attorneys said they wanted Barclay to testify whether an article he wrote criticizing the hearing had been used by Weirton to discourage steel workers from exercising their right under the Wagner labor act to join a free union. Barclay refused to obey the subpoena, claiming it violated freedom of the press.

The mild-mannered one-time law school professor from Pittsburgh, piloting the board through intermittent storms of criticism from congressional and labor sources, said there was no relation between the board's subpoena action and freedom of the press.

Editors and reporters, Madden said, are not exempt by constitutional immunity from giving public authorities any evidence they may have of law violations. Neither do they have the common law exemptions granted priests, lawyers and doctors from divulging confidential information.

Referring to Barclay's refusal to answer the subpoena, Madden said:

"If a merchant or a teacher or a farmer had such evidence, everyone would expect him to respond to such a call and assist his government in the enforcement of the laws. How does the fact that the witness is an editor change the situation?"

Freedom of the press, Madden said, "does not mean that if a news gatherer or an opinion seeker in the course of his work observes a violation of law, he may not be asked by public authority to give evidence of that violation."

The same applies to a publisher, he added, if he "knowingly or unwittingly permits the writing and printing to be used as a part of a course of conduct which is in violation of law."

Madden said he could not believe the makers of the constitution "had any such intention" to exempt publishers and editors from giving public authorities evidences of law violations observed in the course of gathering and printing news.

Aides of the board said the legal staff was considering federal court action to require Barclay to answer the subpoena.

BAPTIST MEET TO INCLUDE 18 STATES

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Eighteen states and the District of Columbia will be represented at the semi-annual meetings of the executive committee of the Southern Baptist convention Wednesday.

The Sunday school board of the convention will convene the following day to consider adoption of plans for the erection of the proposed $100,000 auditorium at Ridgecrest, N. C.

STALIN ADMITS ELECTION SURE

Asks For Recall Of Those Who 'Go Off The Right Road'

MOSCOW, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Joseph Stalin, the Soviet Union's Communist leader, acknowledged tonight that his own election to the supreme council of the union in tomorrow's election was a foregone conclusion.

Addressing the nation on the eve of its first secret, direct election, Stalin thanked his constituents for the confidence they placed in him and said he willingly accepted the responsibilities of office.

"You may depend on Comrade Stalin to carry out his duties before the people," he declared, in the second radio broadcast he had ever made.

Every man and woman who has reached the age of 18 years was expected to vote in the election of 1,143 members for four-year terms in the supreme council of the union—the two-house Red parliament. The election was regarded as a nation-wide test of confidence in Stalin.

The Communist leader told Soviet voters tomorrow's election would be the first free democratic election the world has ever known because the voters would be free from pressure by "haves" and "have nots."

He urged them to keep a close check on their newly chosen representatives and recall those who "go off the right road."

Turning to the possibility that all the candidates might not turn out to be satisfactory, he said "every family has a mongrel."

AIR CORPS OFFICER BURNED TO DEATH

LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Dec. 11.—(AP)—An army air corps officer burned to death and his non-commissioned companion suffered serious injuries today when their pursuit plane caught fire while flying in an aerial show and crashed in flames before 5,000 spectators.

Major A. E. Waller, the pilot, perished in the blazing wreckage, but his observer, Staff Sergeant John Johnson, escaped cremation when catapulted from the open cockpit thirty feet through the air.

He bounced along the ground until he came to rest 10 feet from the spot where he struck. At first reported killed, he was found to have suffered a head injury from which hospital attendants gave him a chance to recover.

Major Waller left his formation when the plane caught fire about 200 feet from the ground while levelling off for a landing. He eased downward but 50 feet above the earth the plane nosed sharply down and crashed.

POWER WORKER KILLED

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Carroll Bickham, 34-year-old service man for the Louisiana Power and Light company, was killed today when he came into contact with a 33,000-volt line on a circuit breaker at LaPlace, La. Survivors are his widow, a daughter and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Bickham of Franklinton, La. The funeral will be held there tomorrow.

WPA AND NYA EARNINGS FOR CHRISTMAS BOOSTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Aubrey Williams, deputy works progress administrator, said today Christmas earnings of WPA and National Youth administration workers would amount to nearly $85,000,000.

Williams' estimate followed orders to re-schedule project operations so that workers could receive as much employment as possible before Christmas.

The estimated earnings by states, from December 1 to December 24, included:

Alabama, $750,000; Arkansas, $550,000; Louisiana, $900,000; Mississippi, $550,000; Tennessee, $650,000.

Children's Colds

Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin . . .

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

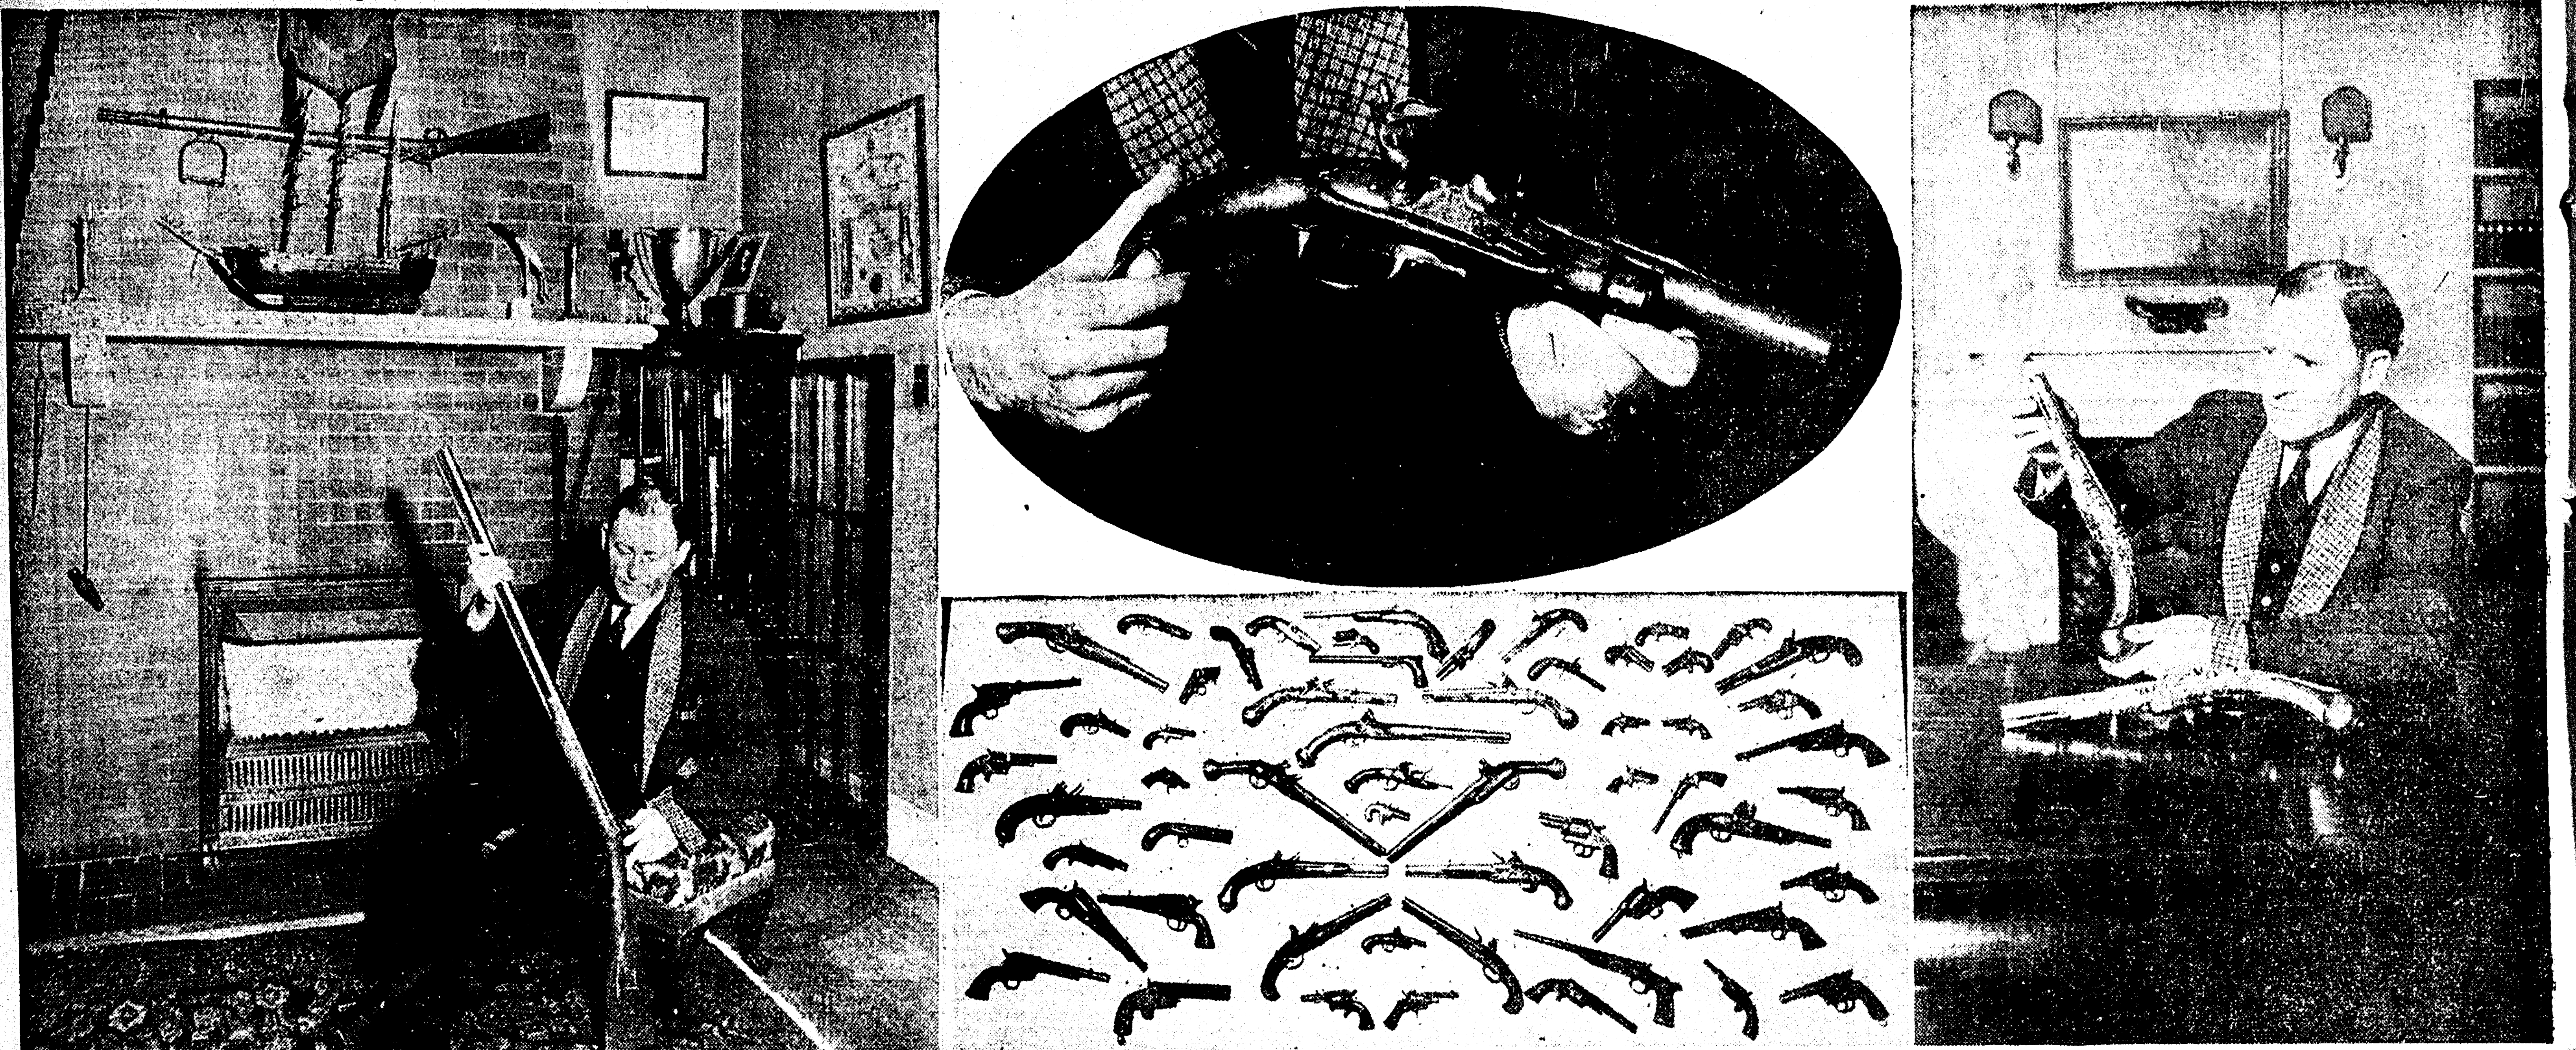
Fascinating History Revealed In Banker-Sportsman's Gun Collection



A graphic story of the development of the gunsmith's art is portrayed in these pictures, which include a portion of the extensive collection of smallarms owned by Travis Oliver, banker-sportsman of Monroe. Left: Mr. Oliver, in the library of his home on Riverside drive, explaining the features of an ancient long rifle, used by a Kentucky frontiersman in pre-civil war days. Note Peruvian dagger of ironwood, hanging from mantelpiece at extreme left. Right: A pair of beautifully mounted pistols of the 17th century, set with jewels and inlaid with pearl, once the possession of a Balkan prince. Top: A pirate's firearm, elaborately mounted, belonging to the late 18th century. Below: A part of the Oliver collection, which includes a pistol once worn by a member of the Turkish sultan's family in the 18th century. The collection covers three centuries of the art of gunmaking.

Story Of Three Centuries Told In Priceless Group Of Firearms

Travis Oliver Has Spent Twenty Years Gathering Weapons From All Parts Of The World

History—romance—adventure—glory—honor — sudden death—dark deeds—liberty—rugged individualism—

These are some of the terms, traversing the whole range of human experience, which flash across the mind after a view of one of the most interesting private collections of firearms in the possession of any individual in the south.

Firearms that once served for the protection of oriental potentates; others that blazed in the hands of the pioneer frontiersman; still others that saw service in the shock of grim battle; and, relics of the days of romance, pistols that settled affairs of honor on the dueling field. Guns of mystery; tokens of heroic combat; weapons that once made a final decision in a story of revenge.

The collection belongs to Travis Oliver, bank president, aviation enthusiast, and—the particular incentive for his gun-collecting hobby—ardent lover of outdoor sports, hunter of big and little game.

Hard-working business man that he is, Travis Oliver gets his recreation from two sources—perhaps it should be said, three. He is definitely air-minded, and one of his accomplishments is the piloting of a fleet airship through rough or calm weather. In his moments of relaxation his chief enjoyment is his piano.

But in hunting—following the elusive quail, tracking black bears through Louisiana's tangled forests, bringing down a fat goose or a wild turkey, or pursuing the fleet and lordly deer—he derives a pleasure that has its own and lasting satisfactions.

Follower Of The Chase

All his mature life Travis Oliver has been a hunter, and as such he has established lasting friendships with some of the greatest Nimrods of the country. Irvin S. Cobb, quite as famous a hunter as he is a writer, is periodically an outdoor associate of Mr. Oliver when he comes to Louisiana on his hunting trips. The celebrated magazine publisher, the late great Ray Long, editor of Cosmopolitan, and Bob Davis, who edited Munsey's, are among his list of distinguished friends. In fact, anybody who is anybody, when he comes a-hunting in north Louisiana, naturally gravitates toward Travis Oliver as one most learned in the lore of the chase.

A fascinating life history could be written about Travis Oliver, his rise in the banking world, his service to the cause of aviation in its importance to Monroe and the south, his hobbies and recreations. But this story is about his noteworthy success as a collector of firearms.

A hundred colorful stories could be developed from this unique assembly of smallarms, a graphic history in itself of the march of progress in the last three centuries. Every item in the collection offers material for a vivid transcription of incidents intimate with the heights and depths of human emotion.

The stories cover a far-flung field, remote and mysterious corners of the world, as well as the wide open spaces, the field of battle and the pomp of pageantry. The stories belong in the realm of action, and they have their aspects of education as well as the quality of stirring entertainment.

Historical Collection

It was his interest in hunting that gave Mr. Oliver the inspiration which led to the collecting of firearms. It began 20 years ago, and since then the collection has grown to extensive proportions. Today it includes nearly 100 pieces, each with a history of its own. Some of them are so rare as to be almost priceless.

For instance, there is a pair of jeweled flintlock pistols, covered with ivory and inlaid with pearl. They belonged to a prince of the Balkans in the 17th century, and are veritable works of art. They were used for dress occasions and state pageants, and formed an important part of the panoply which royalty employed to impress its subjects. The art of making small firearms was not so very old in those days, but what these pistols may have lacked in offensive or defensive effectiveness was made up in beauty of design and workmanship.

Another historically interesting pair of pistols in the collection is a brace of gold and and pearl mounted Turkish weapons, made about 1710. They bear an inscription, "Allah, Il Allah," meaning, "There is no God but God, and Allah is his name." The inscription was only used on weapons borne by the sultan or members of his family, hence the pistols are authentically of royal origin.

That early firearms makers gave themselves to ingenious devices in fabricating the guns of their time is shown in another early specimen, originating in Corsica in 1700 to 1710. It has a disappearing trigger.

Relic Of Pirate Era

A pistol that belongs to the lawless era of piracy, and carries the imagination back to the days when buccaneers knew no flag but the "jolly Roger," is a fine example of the gunsmith's art. The pirate who owned it had a flair for personal display in his accoutrement, for the weapon is beautifully mounted with jewels and precious metal. It is a deadly gun, withal, and most probably figured persuasively in prize-taking episodes on the high seas in the heyday of its destructive usefulness. Today it is a prize in the collection of a connoisseur. Mr. Oliver acquired it while on a visit to Mexico City.

Another pistol of curious design is a "saw-handle" gun that once belonged to one of Ethan Allen's "Green Mountain Boys" during the Revolutionary war. It has a long straight barrel, the butt shaped like the handle of a handsaw.

Another memento of revolutionary days is a pistol that was worn by a member of Washington's continental army. An exact duplicate is treasured in the John Hancock house at Concord, Mass.

The romantic side of the collection breaks out in a pair of Italian dueling pistols, exquisitely wrought but entirely serviceable. What tales of "satisfaction for insulted honor" they might reveal if they could speak!

There are guns that recall the wild and "woolly" days when the west was emerging from the wilderness and the "forty-five" was the only recognized law of the plains and the roaring outposts of civilization.

There is the "pepper-box" pistol which ante-dated the revolver and demonstrated the endeavors of gunsmiths to discover some means to provide a weapon capable of greater efficiency than the single-shot variety.

Gambler's Weapon

The glamorous days of the steamboat and the prevalence of the gambling fraternity, who habitually were armed with their own peculiar artillery, are recalled in the tiny weapons that could be held in the palm of the hand, and fired without revealing the source of the explosion.

A more modern gun is the "knuckle-duster," a small a deadly weapon with a double grip, made of brass, so that as soon as it was discharged it could be reversed and used to bash a victim over the head.

One of the rarest guns of the collection is a Winchester pistol of a pattern from which only seven designs were made. All of the seven, with the exception of the one owned by Mr. Oliver, are in museums. The Monroe specimen is a collector's piece and is worth a fabulous sum.

Among the novel weapons is one worn late in the last century by a Cossack officer of the czarist regime. It is a pistol equipped with an elongated straight bar which was inserted in an opening in the cavalryman's saddle, convenient to his right hand. Another oddity is a small double-shot gun with its two barrels set one on top of the other. After the first chamber is fired, the gunman flicks the lower chamber into position at the top for the second discharge. The weapon was the predecessor of the five and six-chambered revolver.

A revolver that belonged to a naval officer a generation ago is interesting not so much because of its design or traditions as it is for a unique embellishment, a small gold plate affixed to the top of the gun over the chamber. In microscopic letters engraved on the plate is a complete short story, giving an account of a thrilling adventure on the western plains. The trek of the stage coach across the plains, the attack of the Indians, the final victory are all faithfully depicted, but can only be read with the aid of a microscope.

There are a numer of single-shot derringers, bell-mouthed pistols of the seventeenth century, powder tester, flint-lock pistols, ancient horse pistols, Spanish revolvers firing a shot as big as a marble, muzzle-loading revolvers, pinfire guns, Colt pistols, and an ancient flare-gun formerly used for firing night signals at sea.

A Pioneer's Gun

Not all of the collection is confined to small arms. There are ancient muskets and long-barreled rifles. One of them, which occupies a place of honor in the collector's library, over the mantlepiece, was once owned and used by a Kentucky frontiersman. It is the traditional flintlock of pre-civil war days.

Then, too, there are other trophies besides guns. There is a wicked-looking dagger, familiar to the natives of Peru. It is fashioned from Peruvian iron-wood, one of the toughest woods known. Its sinister qualities are disguised under elaborate ornamentation. Regarding its deadly design the beholder is relieved that it is no longer in circulation.

Virtually the entire history of gunsmithing is traversed in this remarkable collection. It goes back to the earliest days of the art, immediately following that period when primitive firearms were little more than a straight iron stick to which was attached a crude cylindrical shaft that held the charge and had to be fired with a match.

A Modern Touch

The collection is brought down to reflect a picture of modern times with the two guns that were used in a bandit battle at a DeSiard road inn a couple of years ago. In that battle a member of the notorious Karpis gang was killed after he had robbed the roadhouse. Attempting to escape after the robbery, the bandit tried to loose a boat chained to a tiny wharf. While he was engaged in twisting the barrel of his gun through the chain in an effort to release the boat, he was shot by an employe of the inn. The two guns figuring in this episode are in the Oliver collection, the bandit's weapon still carrying a portion of the chain that proved his death trap.

Prized above all of the modern pieces are two beautiful hunting guns, which may be said to be invested with a literary interest. One is a three-barreled combination shotgun and rifle, once owned by Oliver Curwood, the novelist. Another is a 16-gauge shotgun that belonged to famed Jack London, a gift to Mr. Oliver from Ray Long, the Cosmopolitan editor.

Edward Believed Becoming Thoroughly Americanized

Most Of Windsor's Close Friends In Paris Are United States Citizens

PARIS—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—If friends have any influence on the Duke of Windsor, the man who once ruled the British empire is now becoming well Americanized.

Since the former King Edward VIII abdicated and married the former Mrs. Wallis Simpson, most of his friends have come from an international circle dominated by Americans.

The duke's business associates and personal retinue have remained largely British, but his companions are usually persons he has come to know through his American-born duchess.

It is a quiet group, rarely seen in public and completely unostentatious in private, greatly subdued since the days when the duke was a gay prince charming-bachelor king, and the duchess was a leader of Europe's "smart set."

Since postponing their industrial tour of America November 5 and settling down at the Meurice hotel, the Windsors have spent much of their time alone. Mornings, they work on their correspondence. Afternoons, they go for walks, or the duke plays golf and the duchess take a drive. Evenings, they dine in Paris restaurants.

When the royal exiles do have guests or visit friends, however, they are usually Americans.

United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt has entertained the Windsors twice at the embassy residence, first at a formal dinner and concert, and later for an informal dinner and an evening of bridge. He has been a caller at the Meurice hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, at whose chateau the duke and duchess were married, stayed at a hotel near the Windsors' before going to America to arrange the duke's tour.

Bedaux, son of a French railway engineer and naturalized American citizen, who made his fortune as a business efficiency expert, withdrew from the duke's survey because of American labor protests against his "speed-up" work system.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, at whose Cannes villa, Lou Viei, the duchess stayed while awaiting Edward's abdication and her wedding, also came to see the Windsors before returning to New York.

Mrs. Rogers stayed with Mrs. Constance Crowninshield Coolidge of Boston, at whose Paris home the Windsors called for tea.

The duke and duchess have also visited Sir Charles Mendl, secretary of the British embassy, and Lady Mendl, the former Elsie De Wolfe, American actress, interior decorator and hostess to most of Europe's most celebrated personages.

An exception to the American rule is the man who is closest to the Duke of Windsor, Major E. D. "Fruity" Metcalfe, Irish sportsman, former equerry and devoted friend of Edward.

Metcalfe, who followed the duke into exile in Austria and served as his best man in the wedding June 3 at the Chateau de Cande, has come to Paris for several rounds of golf with Edward.

Metcalfe's wife is Lady Alexandra Curzon, daughter of the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston and the marchioness, the former Mary Leiter of Washington, D. C. Lady Alexandra's sister is Lady Cynthia, wife of Sir Oswald Mosley, British fascist leader.

Another former equerry, Lord Brownlow, who accompanied the duchess to the Riviera on her flight from England during the abdication crisis in December, 1936, has also been staying here and has dined frequently with the Windsors.

Since his abdication the duke has had little contact with the church. Friends said he "realized the Church of England's position" on his marriage and planned to "avoid possible unpleasantness."

The "unpleasantness" the duke feared rose up in Paris on Armistice day. The British legion of World war veterans invited all ex-service men in Paris to attend services at St. George's English church in honor of Britain's war dead.

One war-time soldier of the British armies then in Paris was Edward Windsor. Legionnaires explained that "to us he was simply a comrade-in-arms" and was asked to attend the services as such.

The duke said he would attend and a place was reserved for him with the war veterans, but on the evening before Armistice day Canon J. C. L. Dart, rector of the church, gave his private opinion of the duke's position in regard to the church to the press.

"I am glad for all that he (the duke) did in the war," said the rector. "I have a certain respect for his memory and am thankful for the good things he has done in the past.

"But the attitude of the church in the matter of divorce and remarriage is very definite. A marriage ends before God only when it is ended by death.

"I would rather the Duke of Windsor did not attend the service."

Canon Dart had his wish. The duke informed British legion officers next morning that he could not attend the church service.

That same day the canon called the duke "to apologize and to ask him to come." He talked to a secretary.

"The last thing I wished to do," Dart told British war veterans before the church services began, "was to publicly insult a man who couldn't defend himself.

"I take this opportunity to publicly apologize. The duke would be received here with the respect and courtesy which is his due as the brother of the king."

Canon Dart's action stirred up a tempest of criticism, but Edward of Windsor kept out of it. A few days later he learned that even the church itself was split over the incident.

The Rev. W. H. F. Couldridge, rector of Christ church at Neuilly-sur-Seine in the Paris suburbs, invited the duke and duchess to preside at a charity sale to raise money for charities sponsored by his Anglican church.

Both accepted. Friends said the duke "was delighted," but added that the Dart clash would make the royal couple "doubly careful" to avoid trouble with the church and its clergy in the future."

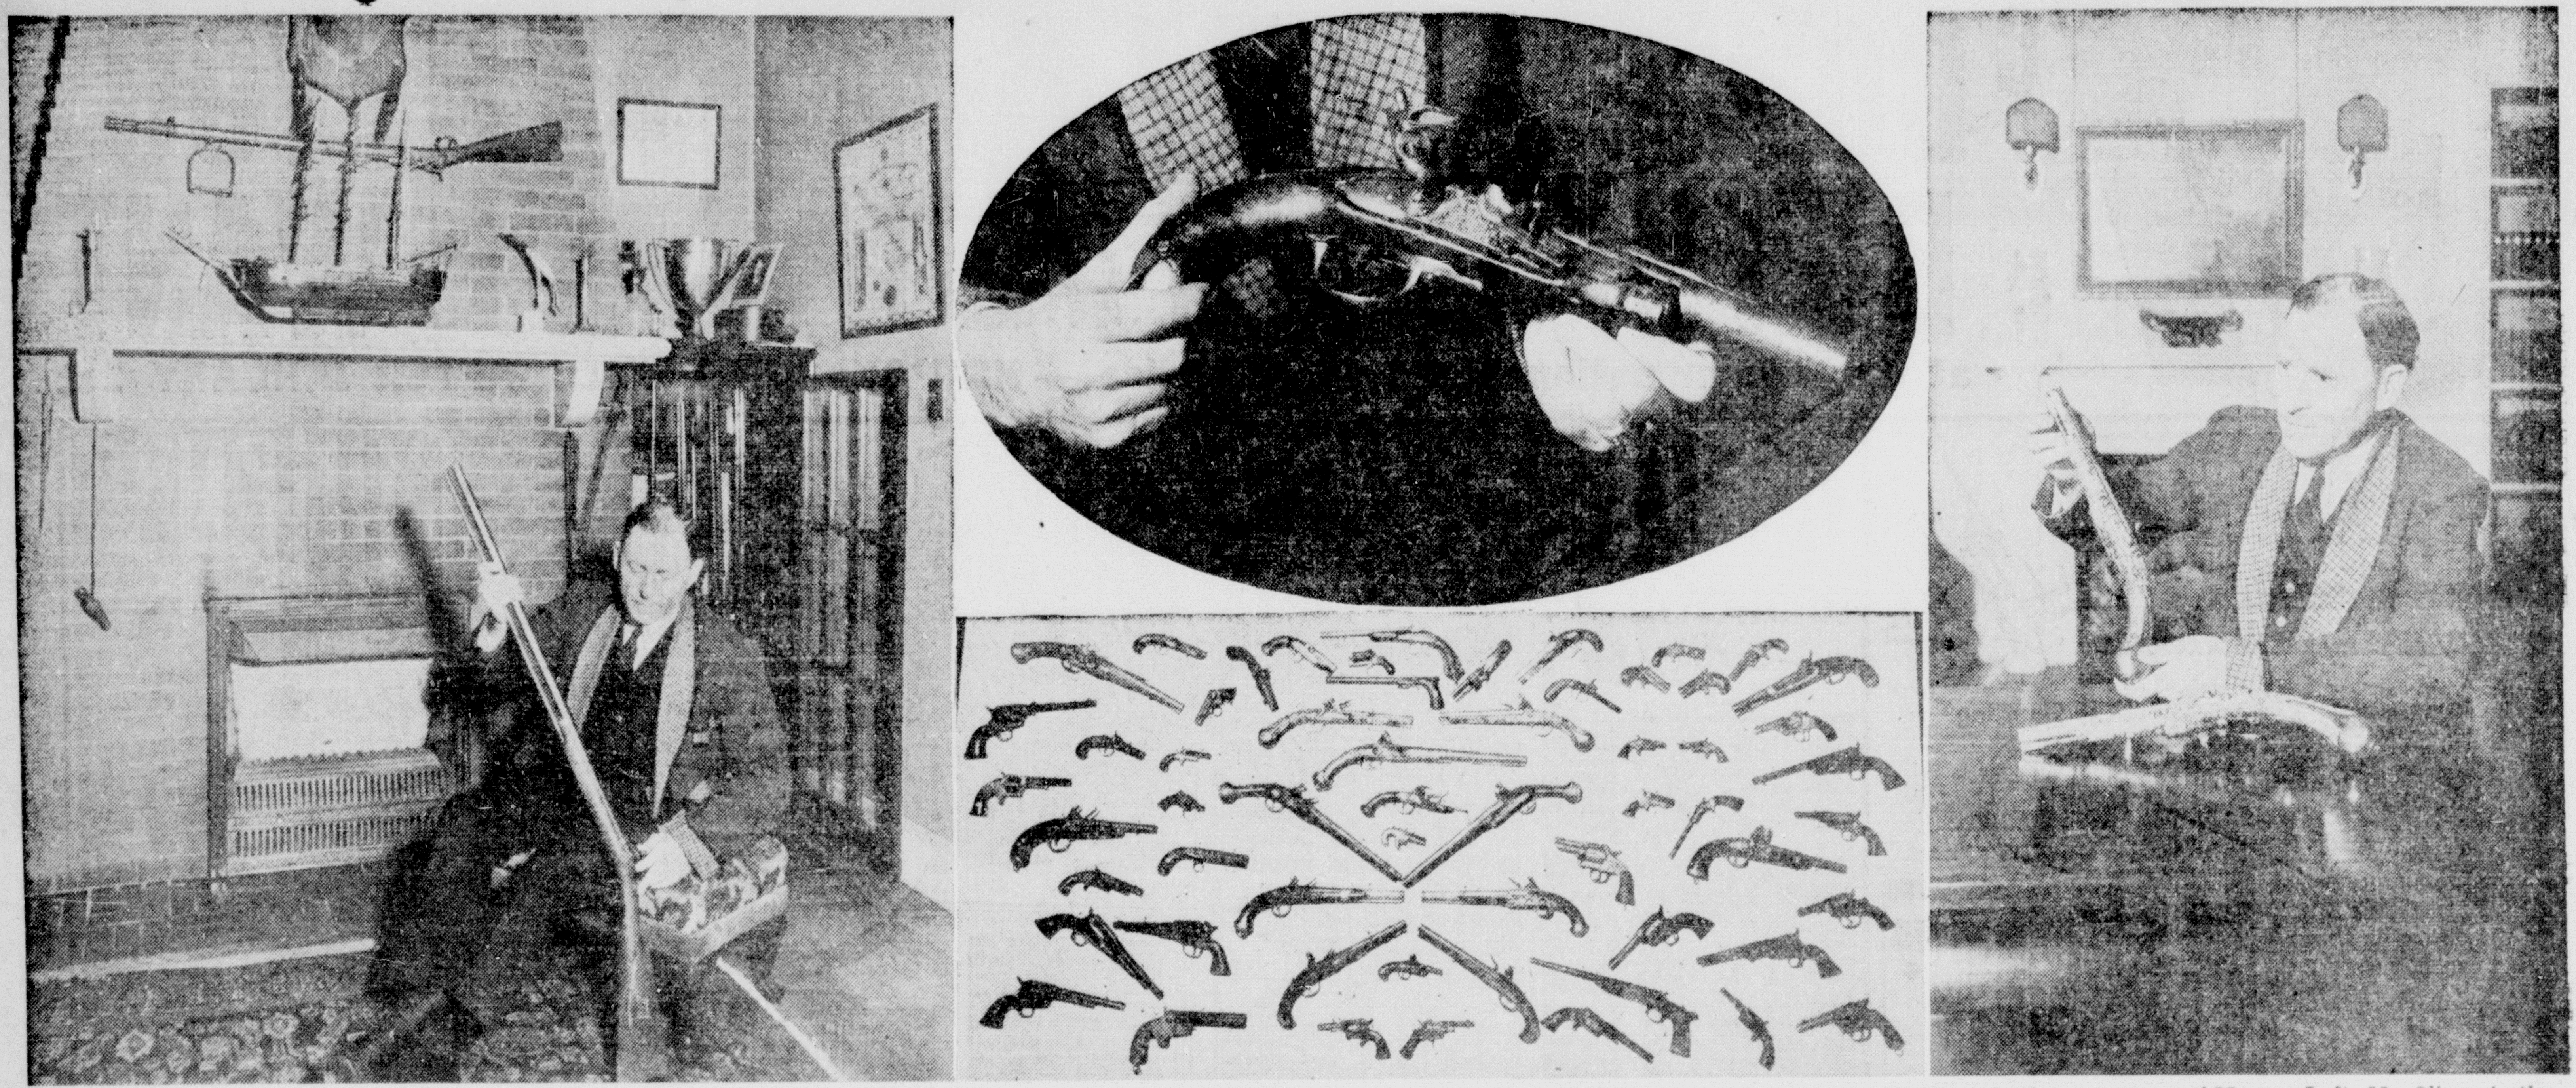
Fascinating History Revealed In Banker-Sportsman's Gun Collection



A graphic story of the development of the gunsmith's art is portrayed in these pictures, which include a portion of the extensive collection of smallarms owned by Travis Oliver, banker-sportsman of Monroe. Left: Mr. Oliver, in the library of his home on Riverside drive, explaining the features of an ancient long rifle, used by a Kentucky frontiersman in pre-civil war days. Note Peruvian dagger of ironwood, hanging from mantelpiece at extreme left. Right: A pair of beautifully mounted pistols of the 17th century, set with jewels and inlaid with pearl, once the possession of a Balkan prince. Top: A pirate's firearm, elaborately mounted, belonging to the late 18th century. Below: A part of the Oliver collection, which includes a pistol once worn by a member of the Turkish sultan's family in the 18th century. The collection covers three centuries of the art of gunmaking.

Story Of Three Centuries Told In Priceless Group Of Firearms

Travis Oliver Has Spent Twenty Years Gathering Weapons From All Parts Of The World

History—romance—adventure—glory—honor — sudden death—dark deeds—liberty—rugged individualism—

These are some of the terms, traversing the whole range of human experience, which flash across the mind after a view of one of the most interesting private collections of firearms in the possession of any individual in the south.

Firearms that once served for the protection of oriental potentates; others that blazed in the hands of the pioneer frontiersman; still others that saw service in the shock of grim battle; and, relics of the days of romance, pistols that settled affairs of honor on the dueling field. Guns of mystery; tokens of heroic combat; weapons that once made a final decision in a story of revenge.

The collection belongs to Travis Oliver, bank president, aviation enthusiast, and—the particular incentive for his gun-collecting hobby—ardent lover of outdoor sports, hunter of big and little game.

Hard-working business man that he is, Travis Olliver gets his recreation from two sources—perhaps it should be said, three. He is definitely air-minded, and one of his accomplishments is the piloting of a fleet airship through rough or calm weather. In his moments of relaxation his chief enjoyment is his piano.

But in hunting—following the elusive quail, tracking black bears through Louisiana's tangled forests, bringing down a fat goose or a wild turkey, or pursuing the fleet and lordly deer—he derives a pleasure that has its own and lasting satisfactions.

Follower Of The Chase

All his mature life Travis Oliver has been a hunter, and as such he has established lasting friendships with some of the greatest Nimrods of the country. Irvin S. Cobb, quite as famous a hunter as he is a writer, is periodically an outdoor associate of Mr. Oliver when he comes to Louisiana on his hunting trips. The celebrated magazine publisher, the late great Ray Long, editor of Cosmopolitan, and Bob Davis, who edited Munsey's, are among his list of distinguished friends. In fact, anybody who is anybody, when he comes a-hunting in north Louisiana, naturally gravitates toward Travis Oliver as one most learned in the lore of the chase.

A fascinating life history could be written about Travis Oliver, his rise in the banking world, his service to the cause of aviation in its importance to Monroe and the south, his hobbies and recreations. But this story is about his noteworthy success as a collector of firearms.

A hundred colorful stories could be developed from this unique assembly of smallarms, a graphic history in itself of the march of progress in the last three centuries. Every item in the collection offers material for a vivid transcription of incidents intimate with the heights and depths of human emotion.

The stories cover a far-flung field, remote and mysterious corners of the world, as well as the wide open spaces, the field of battle and the pomp of pageantry. The stories belong in the realm of action, and they have their aspects of education as well as the quality of stirring entertainment.

It was his interest in hunting that gave Mr. Oliver the inspiration which led to the collecting of firearms. It began 20 years ago, and since then the collection has grown to extensive proportions. TALENTED NEGRO SINGER BOOKED

Etta Moten, Radio And Screen Artist, Will Give Local Recital

Etta Moten, noted negro radio and screen artist, will appear in a recital at the Monroe Negro High school auditorium, January 4 at 8 p.m. She is regarded as an outstanding member of her race and has appeared before large audiences in many large cities of the country, attracting attention of both negro and white people through the talent she has exhibited.

The public of Monroe is invited, the event being sponsored by the Monroe Negro High school and there will be ample accommodations reserved for white music lovers, it is stated.

The program she will present will be classic and popular. There will be such numbers as the Blind Girl's song from La Gioconda; La Danne de Pique and selections from Samson and Delilah.

Newspapers throughout the country have accorded this artist a large degree of credit for her accomplishments. Among them are such papers as the Deseret News, Salt Lake City; Lawrence Journal-World, Lawrence, Kans.; Cleveland, O. News; Herald-Examiner, Chicago, Ill.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch says of her: "Etta Moten, the mezzo-contralto who has appeared in several Hollywood moving picture productions, gave a recital last night in St. Louis university auditorium. Although more of a revue artist than a stereotyped concert performer, she demonstrated that songs by Lalo, Debussy, and Liszt, are entirely within the range of her powers. Her attractive personality had much freer play in the group of negro spirituals and contemporary popular songs which she sang much to the delight of her audience."

FREED UNDER BOND

Curtis Gault, who lives in Ransom addition, West Monroe, was arrested at Perryville yesterday by deputies from the sheriff's department on a warrant charging him with non-support of his wife and minor child. Gault posted bond for $150 and was released.

CHAPTER XIII

"Stand still! Stand absolutely still!" Robert Barry roared the command like an army major.

When the lantern dropped and Mary Melissa had screamed, the two of them had been on the brink of a subterranean cliff. Bob didn't know how high it was, but he knew it was dangerous. If 'Lissa moved carelessly in her fright, instant tragedy might result.

"It's all right!" he calmed her. "Stand where you are, and I'll come to you."

They had been 15 feet or so apart. Carefully he felt his way through the darkness, talking in soothing tones.

"Oh-h-h-h, I don't know h-how I could have done that!" She trembled when he finally touched her.

"No matter, 'Lissa. Accidents happen to anybody. I should have held the lantern. It was my job, not yours. But there's no harm done. We have others in camp, you know. Five, all together, and plenty of gasoline for them."

She was still trembling, and his arm went around her waist. There in the blackness she felt so utterly little. He held her tight to him, in both arms, petting and comforting her as best he could. In a moment she had her composure again.

"All right?" His voice had his old smile in it.

"Yes, thank you, Bob. But it's the worst fright I ever had."

"Shouldn't wonder. Now we'll take the candles and go back out."

"You have candles?" She was both surprised and delighted.

"Yes. But—"

He didn't complete his answer. Sudden fear chilled him!

Yes, he had brought candles, in his shoulder pack. But—he had forgotten to put the pack back on when they had halted a while ago to rest!

The thought almost appalled him. "Easy now," he calmed himself. This was a new danger, but maybe luck would hold. He could go back to that pack in darkness—maybe!

Maybe!

But he couldn't. And of course he soon had to admit their real plight. He had collected his wits by this time, and tried to speak lightly of it. She didn't answer for a moment or two, then—

"Bob, I'm not frightened now. At least I am no longer nervous about it. But you aren't fooling. We're in a predicament, aren't we?"

He reached out to pat her hand in the darkness.

"Yes," he admitted, huskily, "we are."

She said nothing else then. She merely waited.

"Mary Melissa, I am the masterpiece among fools. I could choke myself with satisfaction." He was not funning about it. He was, rather, in deep despair, condemning himself in all seriousness.

"I won't ask forgiveness," he resumed, "for I don't deserve it. I'm going to try my damndest to get us out of here, but you ought to hate me forever, even if I do. I almost wrecked our expedition plans by swinging from that rope in my haste that day. I can think, but I think sketchily. I am not—not dependable. I'm sorry, and I—"

"Bob!" She squeezed his arm. "Hush it! You are no worse than I. Not as bad. You've been wonderful, all the way through. From the very day I surprised you at Blanco Canyon, when you were expecting a man.

"Bob, I know it wasn't fair to ask you to bring a silly girl on a scientific expedition like this. But you did, and I love—I like you tremendously for it, for being a great sport. I admit we are in a jam now, but we're still alive, aren't we—partner?"

Her voice had been soft, liquid. There was no fright evident, no accusation, nothing but sincerity.

It brought a lump of pride for her in Bob Barry's throat. What a girl! He had a sudden mental vision of her beauty, too, and he was almost overcome with emotion, in his sudden wholehearted admiration of her. She hadn't cried, or whimpered, or sniveled. Instead, she had actually comforted him!

In the utter darkness there he threw up his chin, a bit embarrassed with himself, and laughed a little in new confidence.

"The pack," he stated, "ought to be back this way."

They moved at snail pace. Often they crawled on hands and knees, to avoid slipping and falling, also to make feeling with their hands easier. They must—simply must—locate that pack.

Bob strained himself to re-create in his mind the path they took after resting, every turn and every incline. A dozen times he searched his pockets for matches, but they were in the pack too. He never had smoked; for the first time in his life, now, he regretted it.

"I have a bar of chocolate," he announced, after they had crawled for what seemed hours. "You must be hungry."

"Not at all!" she lied. She knew that chocolate might be doubly precious later. "I couldn't eat now."

He put it back in his pocket. They sat still to rest again, holding hands. He tried to think of some way to make artificial light. But these rocks were not flint. And all they had for tinder would be their clothing. He squeezed her hand, and they began to crawl again.

They hoped against hope, and it was fruitless. Their search continued for what must have been several hours. Each stop for rest made them realize the immensity of the great cavern. They had lost all sense of direction. They lived solely by sense of touch—the only two living things, apparently, in all the universe. Bob remembered the shriveled body near the entrance to the cave and the mummy outside, and smiled a little dryly.

"Keep your chin up, kid," he said once, softly.

"I feel fine," she declared. To prove it she sang a little, and they both laughed. It helped.

"I think the thing to do is take it easy, and conserve the chocolate bar," he announced. "The others will of course start looking for us in a few hours, and have the laugh on us for the rest of the trip."

She laughed, to show confidence. But she didn't feel confident.

'Lissa remembered, and Bob remembered, that only Honey Bee Girl knew of the cave at all. And she had been emphatically ordered not to tell, nor to follow. Being a loyal servant, she probably would obey orders, even if they were gone a week or more. She would be just that stupid, they knew. And besides, they had told her they were fully provisioned for as long a stay as necessary. Bob Barry knew it was Indian nature to obey a command to the letter, regardless of developments. It might literally be days before those in camp would start a search, and that would be too late. Bob and 'Lissa were thinking of these things.

She snuggled a bit, just for the comfort of being nearer him. He put his arm around her shoulders and held her close.

"Do you mind," he murmured softly, intently, "if I kiss you?"

"Please do," she whispered.

expense of cotton held as security for 1937 federal loans.

Senator Bilbo, Democrat, Mississippi, said cotton producers believed some stored cotton had been "underclassified" by warehousemen charged with responsibility of guaranteeing the grade to the government.

"It was only human nature," Bilbo said, "for the warehousemen to protect themselves." Reclassification, the Mississippian estimated might increase the value of the stored cotton to the farmer by $10,000,000 Pope protested that the amendment was one of several which would "divert" funds otherwise available for the rest of the farm program.

FARM BILL VOTE BY WEDNESDAY LIKELY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Plodding debate propelled the senate farm bill slowly ahead today, with leaders hopeful of a vote by next Wednesday.

As the drudgery of considering scores of committee amendments neared an end, administration leaders said prospects had brightened for passage of housing legislation immediately after the farm measure is out of the way.

The senate held a week-end session in an effort to hasten action. The house rested until Monday when it will take up wage and hour legislation. The house farm measure was passed yesterday.

The senate's session brought several new amendments to the farm measure, including one by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, to require the agriculture department to consider freight rates in computing the yardstick under which it will make payments to farmers.

Borah said the 15 per cent freight rate increase, now being sought of the interstate commerce commission, would wipe out benefits farmers might realize under the plan.

"Time and again," said Borah, "I have seen farmers in the northwest ship their commodities to eastern markets, and the freight rates have been so high they realized nothing from their labor."

Another amendment by Senator Hayden, Democrat, Arizona, provided for an increase in the cotton acreage limit for next year. Hayden said most of the increase would go to states where the production per acre was high. The change would increase the estimated allowable yield from 10,090,000 to 10,483,000 bales.

After the senate finishes considering amendments to the farm bill, it must hear debate on a voluntary farm plan proposed by Senater Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma.

Lee bolstered administration hopes for action on the pending measure by the middle of next week, however, when he said he planned no prolonged speech-making for his measure.

After the senate finishes with the farm measure, the controversial anti-lynching bill will come up automatically as the next order of business.

Efforts were being made today, however, to effect some agreement between proponents and opponents of the anti-lynching bill under which housing legislation might be taken up immediately after the farm bill.

Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana, a co-author of the anti-lynching bill, said he might agree to such an arrangement if he were assured that anti-lynching would be sidetracked only temporarily.

Senator Wagner, an author of both the lynching measure and the housing legislation, said it would be desirable to pass housing legislation in the special session, but that he had reached no decision on whether it might be brought up immediately after the farm measure.

Senators Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina, and Connally, Democrat, Texas, two of the most vigorous opponents of the anti-lynching bill, urged that the anti-lynching bill be delayed temporarily to permit action on housing.

The housing bill is expected to be ready for action in both house and senate by next Wednesday, with committees concluding their consideration early in the week.

House leaders hoped to finish with the wages and hours bill, despite its controversial nature, by Thursday. The senate already has passed a wage and hour measure.

It was doubtful, however, that differences between the senate and house measures could be composed in time for final action before the scheduled December 22 adjournment date.

DEPUTY SHERIFF DIES

CARTRIDGE TAKEN FROM BOY'S LUNG

course of their practice, it was pointed out, and few doctors own the necessary equipment to perform such an operation.

The bronchoscope kit, as improved by the famous Philadelphia physician, Dr. Chevalier Jackson, is a part of the clinic's equipment and, while it has been available for 10 years, Dr. Brown has been called upon less than a dozen times to utilize the valuable instruments.

The operation in itself is tedious and requires utmost nerve control by the physician during the course of the procedure. The shell was removed from the child's lung, however, in less than 20 minutes. It has been pointed out that such oprations sometimes require much more time than in the case of the Thurman lad.

Preliminary to the operation, an X-ray picture was made of the child's chest to determine where the shell had lodged. The patient was then given a gas-ether anesthetic and put in a recumbent position preparatory to the insertion into the throat and lungs of the laryngoscope and bronchoscope.

The laryngoscope, a metal tubular device which reaches only to the larynx, was first inserted as far as the vestibule of the larynx as an aid in the introduction of the bronchoscope, a long tubular mechanism with a miniature electric light attached at its internal opening for the purpose of locating the foreign object as the operator sights through the tube with one eye.

The bronchoscope was passed through the laryngoscope into the windpipe, or main bronchus tube, to the lungs. The laryngoscope was then removed and the tedious work of locating the cartridge began.

Care was required in passing the bronchoscope into the obstructed bronchus so as not to shut off the supply of air to other bronchi. Each bronchus had to be inspected and identified so that the tube would not be inserted into the wrong passage. The tube was rotated in all directions as it passed through the bronchi in order to bring the lip of the device in the proper position to facilitate the entrance to the desired bronchus, and additional care had to be taken to avoid pushing the cartridge deeper into the obstructed passage.

The entire procedure passed with the physician sighting through the straight metal tube with the aid of his miniature light, probing the recesses of the bronchi to locate the obstructing object.

When the shell had been located, a delicate forceps was passed down through the tube and manipulated to grasp the cartridge, which was removed with the bronchoscope and the forceps.

Mr. Thurman, at the bedside of his son, said the child was in "awful distress" when he was first brought to the clinic. The lad was coughing insistently, sneezing and having difficulty in breathing.

"I was plenty scared at first," said the young father, who is a planer in the Union sawmill at Huttig, "but it's all over now and I hope to be able to take him home Sunday evening, but I don't know yet whether they will let me take him so soon. We don't want to expose him to a chance of developing pneumonia."

The father said the lad picked up the shell in the back yard at his home on Thursday and had been carrying it around in his pocket with several pennies.

"I don't know why he put it in his mouth, but I'm sure he'll be careful about what he puts in his mouth from now on," he said.

PREFERS JAIL TO SON'S VACCINATION

CARLISLE, Pa., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The pleas of his wife and eight children couldn't move Farmhand Jack March tonight from his determination to "stick in jail" rather than see a son vaccinated. Meantime, "fan mail" began coming in.

"Nev—ver," drawled March to all urging that he submit to the law requiring compulsory vaccination of school children.

He's been "in" 27 days and today he started a 5-day sentence imposed last night. Under the law he must be re-sentenced every five days. There were indications this business might go on and on.

Hangers-on, telling about the "fan mail," said "a lot of it urged March to stick it out—fight for your rights."

American man who had given Weidmann $1,200 to start a "theatrical venture."

At least one of Weidmann's four admitted men victims, Roger LeBlond, a broker, was slain after being lured to the trap by the same business deal.

LeBlond's body, like those of Roger Lesobre and Joseph Couffy, however, was found dumped far from the villa, causing police fears the other victims might have been buried in scattered graves.

Weidmann was charged with voluntary homicide in the five known slayings while Million, LeBlanc and the woman who shared charms with both men were charged with complicity with execution-for-money squad.

Still sought were a mysterious blonde and a waiter, known as Maurice, who disappeared two days ago from a fashionable Champs Elysees cafe. He was believed to have supplied Weidmann, a German fugitive from military service, with false passports.

Collette, a plump brunette of 25, told police she first met Million in May. She disclosed she had a husband working in an automobile plant and and eight-year-old son.

She told police that she and her two lovers entered the case through a financial transaction with Weidmann—Weidmann said the scarfaced Million hired him as a specialist in murder. Police said LeBlanc, known as "the little one," was the man with the money.

After they learned Weidmann had killed LeBlond, she said, the trio fled "from one end of France to the other" to escape the same fate.

I want you to help me with some clothes and groceries and some fruit. Please be sure to help us, for we need it. We will be waiting for you Christmas day."—M. M., N. 7th street.

"I am a little boy 10 years old. I am an orphan boy who needs some new overalls and underwear to wear to school, and some socks. I have a little brother who is 3 years old who needs some union-alls and a sweater. And my mother would like some outting and some print to make her a dress, too, and a sweater."—J. G. My mother and daddy have no work and can't get any. Mother would like a sweater if you have it. And would like a little something for dinner. We needs some pairs of socks."—A. W. C., Plum street.

These letters tell their own story, and give the reasons why the Good Fellows Fund must be ample to take care of those needy ones who will be joyless at Christmas time unless the generosity of the people of the two cities is exercised on their behalf.

Much, much more help is needed if the Good Fellows' task is to be properly taken care of. Checks and cash should be sent to the Good Fellows Fund, 110 North Second street, Monroe.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH
North Fourth And Glenmar Streets
Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

"Behold, I send my messenger before thy face who shall prepare my way before thee." In one sense this prophecy has been fulfilled, in that John the Baptist was the Elijah who heralded the first coming of Christ. But the Apostolic ministry is the John Baptist of the latter day, heralding the second coming (Advent), and the coming of the Judge. Accordingly, the church today (third Sunday in Advent) dwells on the Christian ministry and its great mission, in connection with that of the Baptist, as its precursor. The Collect for the third Sunday in Advent sums up what is asserted, with reference to the spirit of the day. The Epistle is a condensed statement of the commission of Christ's ministers. They are not merely "preachers," but "stewards of the mysteries," that is, ministers of the Sacraments and other means of Grace, for the administrations of which they bear "the keys of the Kingdow." They bind and loose and open and shut; and when they do so according to the laws of the Kingdom, then what they do on earth is ratified in Heaven. And the Holy Gospel is the testimony which our Lord gave to John Baptist as His faithful steward and forerunner; and cites the prophetic promise of such a messenger, which serves to identify both John and his Master. The Scriptures for the third Sunday in Advent, therefore, set forth the nature of the Christian ministry, and the Emberfasts which occur in this week, followed by ordinations on next Sunday, are all in beautiful harmony for this Sunday worship. Services are as follows: The Holy Eucharist at 7:30 a.m.; church school at 9:30 a.m., followed by the 10:45 service and sermon by the rector. The church is open daily from 7:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Come in, rest, pray, give thanks, meditate.

A special missionary service will be conducted at the Church of God Monday evening, December 20. Mr. and Mrs. Starks, missionaries to Africa, will be the speakers. Be sure and attend. (Ps. 23) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, today is big with blessings. Love is impartial and universal in its adaptation and bestowals. It is the open fount which cries, 'Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters.'" (Pref. vii; p. 13)

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Sunday will again be "pledge day," when members who have not made pledges will be given an opportunity to make their pledge for the support of their church during the coming year. Until this is done, it is impossible to make plans for the new year so members are urged to bear this in mind and co-operate with the officials that this may be taken care of before the Christmas holidays. The finance committee will meet in the church office Tuesday at 7 p.m. The Women's Missionary society will meet in circles, Tuesday at 3 p.m. The Julia Reed circle will meet Tuesday night for a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. O. in Japanese hands, as was Taiping, midway to the capital.

As the Japanese military machine tightened its grip, stubborn Chinese resistance apparently prevented the Japanese from extending the foothold gained within the city walls Friday.

British dispatches from Hankow reported General Tang Seng-Chi, commander of Nanking's defense, admitted loss of the main southeastern gate, Kuanghuamen, but declared the invaders were unable to push farther inside the thick walls.

He reiterated China's determination to defend the city to the end.

In addition to the 16 Americans still within Nanking, 14 others were aboard the gunboat Panay anchored on the Yangtze and three on a Standard Oil tanker, still in the danger zone.

Hankow reports said seven Americans had evacuated recently-captured Suhu, indicating that 17 still were in that river port.

Chinese sources said artillery north of Amoy, southern port across from Japanese-owned Formosa, sank a Japanese destroyer while it was covering an unsuccessful attempt to land Japanese marines.

As Japanese shells poured into Nanking's defenses several large fires started. A large part of Hsiakwan, the waterfront area outside the walls, was in flames. The British-owned bridge house, oldest foreign hotel in Nanking was destroyed.

Just across the river, in Pukow, the waterfront was alight with burning wharves and warehouses.

(It was believed such a regime would be recognized in Tokyo as spokesman for all Chnia. Japanese superintended elaborate prepartions in Peiping to celebrate Nanking's fall.)

Tanks led the Japanese assault on Nanking's walls as attacks converged from all land sides of the city. Chinese sources said the defenders still were putting up stiff resistance near Purple mountain, east of the city. Japanese said they captured the mountain stronghold Friday.

TWO MEN ARRESTED FOR DRUNK DRIVING

Two separate automobile wrecks in one of which a street car was involved and the other causing considerable damage to a taxicab, last night resulted in the arrest of two men who were booked at police headquarters on charges of drunken driving.

Those arrested were J. E. Grantham and E. N. Terrell. Grantham was released after posting a $100 property bond and Terrell was also freed on his own recognizance. Both men are scheduled to appear in city court this week to answer the charges.

Grantham was arrested about 5 o'clock last night by Police Officer Harold Coates after his automobile is said to have crashed into a Lee avenue street car driven by Motorman Carl E. Paulus on Jackson street. The arresting officers reported Grantham made a right turn into Jackson street out of Orange street and swung his automobile in a broad arc across the car tracks resulting in the collision with the street car.

Terrell was arrested by Police Captain J. D. Busby and Police Officer Coates about 10 p.m., after allegedly crashing into a taxicab driven by C. A. Cheshire in the 100 block of Catalpa street. The taxicab was badly damaged, it was reported.

later reported that one of its cruisers had taken 200 of the President Hoover's first class passengers to Hayake island.

Captain E. Stepnach of the German freighter Preussen, which stood by the liner for several hours and then proceeded toward Manila, said the ship was in a dangerous position.

"The Hoover was bumping heavily," he wirelessed the Associated Press. "She was in a bad position on the northwest side of Hoishoto island. A northwest side of Hoishoto island. A was increasing. The sea was rough.

"On request we stood by until daylight, ready to take the passengers over and make an attempt at towing off. The Hoover's captain, George Yardley, decided to land the passengers and crew on the island.

"Soundings showed towing off was impossible. We proceeded on our voyage to Manila, offering assistance again one hour later. There was no reply to this.

"Later wireless reports said the passengers and crew were safe on Hoishoto and a skeleton crew was remaining aboard. The ship was leaking badly forward."

The 21,900-ton liner, which played a dramatic part in the removal of refugees from war-torn Shanghai, was attempting to make up for delays occasioned by those operations when she came to grief.

She was heading from Japan to Manila via a hitherto untried "outside passage" which led down the east coast of Formosa rather than southward through the China sea off the Formosan west coast.

FASCIST GRAND COUNCIL VOTES

he appeared upon the balcony of his palace.

Arraigning the league in a vigorous attack, he declared:

"It is necessary to choose whether to be in the league or out of it."

Then he cried the question: "In it?"

"No!" responded the multitude.

"Out of it?"

"Yes!" responded the throng.

Booes resounded when Il Duce spoke derisively of the great democracies.

He assumed a belligerent posture, with lips puckered out and hands plunged tightly against his hips. Then he pounded the balcony railing with his fist like a trip hammer to emphasize his points.

Assailing the league as "preparing for war" rather than working in the interests of peace, he said Italy would adhere to her policy of "collaboration for peace."

"It is believed abroad that pressure was brought on us from outside," he said. "This is not true. It could not be. Our comrades of the Berlin-Tokyo axis have preserved absolute discretion."

Immediately after the grand council session, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano notified Joseph Avenol, secretary general of the League of Nations, of Italy's resignation "as of December 11, 1937."

"Italy's exit from the League of Nations," Mussolini said in his declaration from the palace balcony, "represents an event of great historical significance which has attracted world attention."

It was at this point that he declared Italy did not abandon one of "our fundamental policies: collaboration for peace."

"Some menacing voices have already risen, perhaps more still will arise, from the herds of the great democracies; all futile against people like the Italians who are capable of making any kind of sacrifice," he said.

"We have air, land and sea arms, abundant and tempered by two victorious wars," he continued, "but above all we have the heroic spirit of our revolution which no power in the world can break."

Italy's decision to leave the league, he said, "could not be put off longer."

He declared Italy "during long years" had "offered the world a spectacle of unheard of patience. We have not forgotten and won't forget the opprobrious attempt at economic strangulation of the Italian people perpetuated at Geneva. (This was a reference to sanctions during the Italo-Ethiopian war.)

"Some thought that at a certain moment the League of Nations would make a gesture of due reparation.

"It did not do it. It did not want to do so.

"Under these conditions our presence on the threshold of Geneva was no longer tolerable; It was injuring our doctrine, our style, our temperament as soldiers."

Mussolini was recalled by the crowd half a dozen times after he re-entered his palace at the conclusion of his speech.

RUSSIANS BELIEVE BIGGER WAR COMING

MOSCOW, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Soviet circles today expressed the belief that Italy's retirement from the League of Nations indicated a bigger war than the Chinese-Japanese conflict was brewing.

They pointed out that Italy, by quitting the league, would feel herself relieved of her obligations under its covenant.

The inspired press indicated it was considered "self-evident that this step on the part of Italy has been taken in agreement with Germany and Japan possibly as a result of Halifax's (Viscount Halifax, British cabinet minister) talk with Hitler."

"It is believed the bloc of Fascist aggressors may be attempting to set itself in opposition to the League of Nations for purposes of blackmail," said identical comment on several papers, including the Moscow News.

"It also is felt the bloc is preparing for some new extended aggression and is taking the precaution of relieving itself of insignificant obstacles connected with Italy's formal membership in the league.'

ITALY'S WITHDRAWAL 'RATHER WELCOME'

PARIS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy's retirement from the League of Nations will have "little practical effect," French officials said tonight, while several diplomats representing nations allied to France called it "rather welcome."

French officials said that Premier Mussolini had refused to cooperate with the league since its members voted sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian war and that "for all intents and purposes" Italy had not been a member for two years.

They called the action "a logical consequence" of Italian adherence to the anti-Communist pact with Germany and Japan.

GERMANY PLEASED BY WITHDRAWAL OF ITALY

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—(AP)—News of Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations, four years after Germany had taken similar action, was received with extreme satisfaction here tonight.

That Premier Mussolini's step was taken in close accord with Berlin was disclosed by the National Zeitung, published by Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, number two Nazi leader, which said Italy's future foreign policy was framed in an agreement with Chancellor Hitler last September.

AMERICANS EXPECT LITTLE DIFFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Informed American and Italian sources agreed tonight in believing Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations would not materially affect the European political situation.

They said the withdrawal simply put on a formal basis a condition which has already existed for a year and a half, namely, Italy's total lack of cooperation with the league.

They called attention to Mussolini's immediate coupling of his announcement with the statement that Italy would remain in open collaboration with other nations for peace.

This statement, they said, was indication that Italy did not intend making any brusque move following her withdrawal.

LEGATION OFFICIALS AGREE BLOW SERIOUS

VIENNA, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Government and legation officials here agreed tonight that Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations was a serious blow, but did not at all mean that the league was finished.

The concensus definitely seemed to be that Austria and Hungary, Italy's ally, would not follow Italy's example, principally because of league loans and other financial relations with the league.

BRITAIN LOOKS ON WITHDAWAL CALMLY

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy's departure from the League of Nations was accepted in most British quarters tonight chiefly as a move to give new emphasis to the anti-Communist agreement recently signed by Italy, Germany and Japan.

The liberal press voiced approval of the departure, but conservative opinion appeared to regard Italy's withdrawal as a further obstacle to any effort to revive the league's effectiveness.

The British government under Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, however, is showing less interest in the league and placing more emphasis on direct diplomacy such as the recent visit of Viscount Halifax to Germany and the Anglo-French talks in London.

WITHDRAWAL WILL GIVE LEAGUE JOLT

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (Sunday).—(AP)—Italy's withdrawal will jolt the League of Nations but will not prove a knockout blow—such was the general view expressed at Geneva today after Premier Mussolini made his dramatic but expected announcement.

Informed sources said Rome's action should expedite the plan for reforms through which many countries hope to make the league universal.

Mussolini has boycotted the league ever since his invasion of Ethiopia and Geneva sources regarded his withdrawal as merely taking formal cognizance of an existing fact.

"Italy is more honest in resigning in view of her recent league boycott," one newspaper said.

DOSHER FUNERAL

FERRIDAY, La., Dec., 11.—(Special)—Funeral services were held for J. B. Dosher of Harrisonburg, prominent planter of Catahoula parish, at the Harrisonburg cemetery.

He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. S. Barnett Serio of Natchez, Miss.

NURSERY STOCK BARRED

REBEL FORCES NEAR 'DEFINITE VICTORY'

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared today his insurgent forces were "near a definite victory" in the 17-month-old Spanish civil war.

His statement followed closely the closing of the insurgent section of the French-Spanish border, giving rise to the belief a major offensive impended. Even Spanish nationalists visiting in France were refused permission to recross the border.

Franco's communique mentioned an insurgent air victory in the Zaragoza sector, described as one of the most important of the war. At the same time, the government reported winning an aerial battle from the insurgents in the Bujaraloz region, about 60 miles east of Zaragoza.

Government sources reported two persons killed and 40 wounded when three insurgent battleships shelled Alicante, on the southeastern coast for half an hour yesterday.

Franco reiterated in his published statement the insurgents would refuse to agree to peace terms and intended to fight to a finish.

northward through heavy seas from Manila although a late message from the President Hoover declared a sounding showed it would be impossible to tow the vessel off. Company officials, however, said they expected to refloat the 21,900 ton liner with the arrival of calmer weather.

In the English channel, a 70-mile hurricane capsized the motorship Gothic with the loss of two lives. Two others were rescued by the steamship American Banker.

Violent winds crashed a British air force bomber on the beach at Portland, England, killing two fliers.

Cold weather penetrated the United States as far south as Florida, where citrus growers kept smudge-pots burning to form "smoke blankets" in an effort to save their fruit.

Sixteen deaths were directly attributed to the cold wave, in an area from Virginia through the Carolinas to Louisiana. Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., each reported 14 degrees above zero.

WARMER WEATHER SEEN FOR LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Moderating temperatures with occasional rains were predicted tonight for Louisiana and Mississippi by Gordon E. Dunn, forecaster for the New Orleans weather bureau.

Dunn said the cold wave which has chilled the gulf coast states for more than a week was receding. He forecast cloudy and warmer weather for tomorrow, turning colder Monday night in Louisiana.

During the last week minimum temperatures daily have been at freezing or below, down to the coast.

FIVE SHIPWRECK VICTIMS WASH ASHORE

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Five victims of a shipwreck were washed ashore in northern Ireland today, raising the death toll of storms sweeping the British isles.

They were drowned when the Belfast steamer Annagher, a 586-ton coastal vessel, sank off the Irish coast during a driving snow storm. Four others were reported missing.

KIDNAPER GIVEN DEATH VERDICT

25, and Orville Adkins, 24, abducted the retired Huntington minister November 1 and kept him in the old mine 10 days. Ransom of $50,000 was demanded of the victim's children, but never paid.

Travis and Adkins await trial.

Booth, slim and bald-headed, based his defense on insanity. His counsel did not ask the jury to free him, only that he be spared the gallows.

Dr. Seder was induced to enter the kidnaper's car on the promise of making good a $30 bad check which Booth had given him.

The former missionary to Japan and former head of the West Virginia Anti-Saloon league died November 15 from pneumonia which physicians testified was caused by exposure in the mine, and from a brain hemorrhage.

TIME EXTENSION ASKED FOR STARTING PROJECTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—J. Lester White, Louisiana planning commission chairman, asked public works administration officials today to extend for 30 days the time limit for starting construction on six Louisiana projects.

The projects are—gymnasium-auditorium at Southern university, Scotlandville, La., three school buildings in Iberville parish, a Livingston parish courthouse, and a Lake Charles, La., sewage system and disposal plant.

White said delay in transfer of records of the recently abolished New Orleans, La., PWA office to the new regional PWA office at Fort Worth, Tex., necessitated the request.

He also asked the PWA to extend the time limit for completing the state exhibits building at the Louisiana state fair in Shreveport La., until May 1, 1938, explaining that a construction contract clause would permit a $3,300 cost reduction if the extension were granted.

command of the language, a very Gallic-looking beard and a certain nicety in dress, got away with the goods more often than not.

THOSE WERE the days when Big Spanish worked the hotels around 14th street, places much ferquented by Latin Americans. He was a big, good-looking South American who came here from Venezuela, posing as a revolutionist. That was his pet racket. He actually organized a Junta here for the purpose of turning Dictator Castro out of Venezuela. He was running the Junta for all that was in it when Jim Forbes of the Charity Organization society tipped off a few South Americans who had fallen for Big Spanish's fiery oratory. Therefore Big Spanish was seen no more. Never again in this world.

Perhaps the slickest of those old time artists of beggardom was Rudolph, an Austrian plinger and crook. The Floppers and the Black Hoods and the Plingers called him "Prince Rudolph," because of his lavish spending and his high play in stuss and poker. He was the high-roller of the fraternity, and it took a good deal of easy money to keep him going.

GOLD TOOTH ENGLISH and Hoboken Dick, both mopers, or gentlemen who lounged along Broadway striking any easy mark that happened to come along, were notable members of the craft. Their specialty was working the Broadway restaurants.

One of the most interesting of all was Charles Berkowitz—"Blind" Berkowitz—a flopper, or fake cripple, who sat usually on the sidewalk in front of the old Herald Square theater, holding his plate out for contributions from the tender-hearted. It was said of "Blind" Berkowitz, when he died, that he held the deeds of 12 apartments and had bank books representing more than $20,000 cash. These were only a few of the professional beggars who added to the color of Little Old New York.

Once a year these aristocrats of the profession held a celebration in downtown New York. They gave a New Year's eve party in the back room of Diamond Dan O'Rourke's saloon, and there, throughout the night, they introduced the Black Hoods and the High Heels (the women who panhandled for them when they were too tired to work) and their particular favorites in the profession.

IT WAS THEN that the Undertaker, with his long, sorrowful face and his suit of solemn black gave an annual sermon on the vicissitudes of life and the imminence of death. It was then that Fiddling Dan with an instrument stolen, of course, and said to have been the work of Stradivarius himself, played for the dancers who shuffled about all the night long. It was then that they opened more champagne than was popping anywhere in the big bars uptown. Even politicians did not disdain to drop in and pay their respects to the leaders of the beggar profession.

But they have passed, this curious and colorful crew. Hard times have submerged them and their like in a vast army of the unfortunate who lack their peculiar talents.

inclined to feel indulgent towards the child-like fancies of junior and sis, are intrigued by the inviting possibilities of electric trains, mechanical toys, and the host of other playthings which will find their way into the children's stockings this Christmas.

Never before in the memory of Monroe residents have the city's stores been stocked with such an abundance of high-quality merchandise. There are gifts to fit every pocketbook and comparable with the finest to be had in any metropolitan center. Monroe shoppers found this out yesterday and the tills in the various establishments rang merrily as overflow crowds shoved and pushed good-naturedly while they shopped from store to store purchasing just the right gift at the right price.

Monroe presents a fairy-like picture these crisp nights with its myriad Christmas illuminations and visitors to the city last night were much impressed and gratified with the splendid display.

Store fronts and display windows have never been so artistically or brilliantly decorated as they are this holiday season, and with Christmas only two weeks away, every prospect points to the most successful season this year ever to be experienced by local merchants.

Weather observers reported a gust of wind blew 231 miles an hour at the top of Mount Washington, N. H., at 1:21 p.m. April 12, 1934.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE PLANNED FOR POOR

FERRIDAY, La., Dec., 11.—(Special)—The Ferriday Rotary club, the Woman's club and the Gray-McCearley post No. 148 of the American Legion, plan to stage a community Christmas tree for the poor children and their families at the Legion hall Christmas day.

Toys and baskets are being collected by the members of the Woman's club, and the Rotary club and Legion members are raising money to be used to defray the expenses of the annual distribution. One of the members of the organization will act as Santa Claus and Mayor E. W. Vogt, who is supervising the tree and the distribution, says that no poor family in Ferriday will be forgotten during the Yuletide season.

Arraigning the league in a vigorous attack, he declared:

"It is necessary to choose whether to be in the league or out of it."

Then he cried the question: "In it?"

"No!" responded the multitude.

"Out of it?"

"Yes!" responded the throng.

Booes resounded when Il Duce spoke derisively of the great democracies.

He assumed a belligerent posture, with lips puckered out and hands plunged tightly against his hips. Then he pounded the balcony railing with his fist like a trip hammer to emphasize his points.

Assailing the league as "preparing for war" rather than working in the interests of peace, he said Italy would adhere to her policy of "collaboration for peace."

"It is believed abroad that pressure was brought on us from outside," he said. "This is not true. It could not be. Our comrades of the Berlin-Tokyo axis have preserved absolute discretion."

Immediately after the grand council session, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano notified Joseph Avenol, secretary general of the League of Nations, of Italy's resignation "as of December 11, 1937."

"Italy's exit from the League of Nations," Mussolini said in his declaration from the palace balcony, "represents an event of great historical significance which has attracted world attention."

It was at this point that he declared Italy did not abandon one of "our fundamental policies: collaboration for peace."

"Some menacing voices have already risen, perhaps more still will arise, from the herds of the great democracies; all futile against people like the Italians who are capable of making any kind of sacrifice," he said.

"We have air, land and sea arms, abundant and tempered by two victorious wars," he continued, "but above all we have the heroic spirit of our revolution which no power in the world can break."

Italy's decision to leave the league, he said, "could not be put off longer."

He declared Italy "during long years" had "offered the world a spectacle of unheard of patience. We have not forgotten and won't forget the opprobrious attempt at economic strangulation of the Italian people perpetuated at Geneva. (This was a reference to sanctions during the Italo-Ethiopian war.)

"Some thought that at a certain moment the League of Nations would make a gesture of due reparation.

"It did not do it. It did not want to do so.

"Under these conditions our presence on the threshold of Geneva was no longer tolerable: It was injuring our doctrine, our style, our temperament as soldiers."

Mussolini was recalled by the crowd half a dozen times after he re-entered his palace at the conclusion of his speech.

RUSSIANS BELIEVE BIGGER WAR COMING

MOSCOW, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Soviet circles today expressed the belief that Italy's retirement from the League of Nations indicated a bigger war than the Chinese-Japanese conflict was brewing.

They pointed out that Italy, by quitting the league, would feel herself relieved of her obligations under its covenant.

The inspired press indicated it was considered "self-evident that this step on the part of Italy has been taken in agreement with Germany and Japan possibly as a result of Halifax's (Viscount Halifax, British cabinet minister) talk with Hitler."

"It is believed the bloc of Fascist aggressors may be attempting to set itself in opposition to the League of Nations for purposes of blackmail," said identical comment on several papers, including the Moscow News.

"It also is felt the bloc is preparing for some new extended aggression and is taking the precaution of relieving itself of insignificant obstacles connected with Italy's formal membership in the league.'

ITALY'S WITHDRAWAL 'RATHER WELCOME'

PARIS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy's retirement from the League of Nations will have "little practical effect," French officials said tonight, while several diplomats representing nations allied to France called it "rather welcome."

French officials said that Premier Mussolini had refused to cooperate with the league since its members voted sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian war and that "for all intents and purposes" Italy had not been a member for two years.

They called the action "a logical consequence" of Italian adherence to the anti-Communist pact with Germany and Japan.

GERMANY PLEASED BY WITHDRAWAL OF ITALY

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—(AP)—News of Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations, four years after Germany had taken similar action, was received with extreme satisfaction here tonight.

That Premier Mussolini's step was taken in close accord with Berlin was disclosed by the National Zeitung, published by Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, number two Nazi leader, which said Italy's future foreign policy was framed in an agreement with Chancellor Hitler last September.

AMERICANS EXPECT LITTLE DIFFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Informed American and Italian sources agreed tonight in believing Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations would not materially affect the European political situation.

They said the withdrawal simply put on a formal basis a condition which has already existed for a year and a half, namely, Italy's total lack of cooperation with the league.

They called attention to Mussolini's immediate coupling of his announcement with the statement that Italy would remain in open collaboration with other nations for peace.

This statement, they said, was indication that Italy did not intend making any brusque move following her withdrawal.

LEGATION OFFICIALS AGREE BLOW SERIOUS

VIENNA, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Government and legation officials here agreed tonight that Italy's withdrawal from the League of Nations was a serious blow, but did not at all mean that the league was finished.

The concensus definitely seemed to be that Austria and Hungary, Italy's ally, would not follow Italy's example, principally because of league loans and other financial relations with the league.

BRITAIN LOOKS ON WITHDAWAL CALMLY

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Italy's departure from the League of Nations was accepted in most British quarters tonight chiefly as a move to give new emphasis to the anti-Communist agreement recently signed by Italy, Germany and Japan.

The liberal press voiced approval of the departure, but conservative opinion appeared to regard Italy's withdrawal as a further obstacle to any effort to revive the league's effectiveness.

The British government under Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, however, is showing less interest in the league and placing more emphasis on direct diplomacy such as the recent visit of Viscount Halifax to Germany and the Anglo-French talks in London.

WITHDRAWAL WILL GIVE LEAGUE JOLT

GENEVA, Dec. 12 (Sunday)—(AP)—Italy's withdrawal will jolt the League of Nations but will not prove a knockout blow—such was the general view expressed at Geneva today after Premier Mussolini made his dramatic but expected announcement.

Informed sources said Rome's action should expedite the plan for reforms through which many countries hope to make the league universal.

Mussolini has boycotted the league ever since his invasion of Ethiopia and Geneva sources regarded his withdrawal as merely taking formal cognizance of an existing fact.

"Italy is more honest in resigning in view of her recent league boycott," one newspaper said.

DOSHER FUNERAL

FERRIDAY, La., Dec., 11.—(Special) —Funeral services were held for J. B. Dosher of Harrisonburg, prominent planter of Catahoula parish, at the Harrisonburg cemetery.

He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. S. Barnett Serio of Natchez, Miss.

NURSERY STOCK BARRED

REBEL FORCES NEAR 'DEFINITE VICTORY'

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 11. — (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared today his insurgent forces were "near a definite victory" in the 17-month-old Spanish civil war.

His statement followed closely the closing of the insurgent section of the French-Spanish border, giving rise to the belief a major offensive impended. Even Spanish nationalists visiting in France were refused permission to recross the border.

Franco's communique mentioned an insurgent air victory in the Zaragoza sector, described as one of the most important of the war. At the same time, the government reported winning an aerial battle from the insurgents in the Bujaraloz region, about 60 miles east of Zaragoza.

Government sources reported two persons killed and 40 wounded when three insurgent battleships shelled Alicante, on the southeastern coast for half an hour yesterday.

Franco reiterated in his published statement the insurgents would refuse to agree to peace terms and intended to fight to a finish.

northward through heavy seas from Manila although a late message from the President Hoover declared a sounding showed it would be impossible to tow the vessel off. Company officials, however, said they expected to refloat the 21,900 ton liner with the arrival of calmer weather.

In the English channel, a 70-mile hurricane capsized the motorship Gothic with the loss of two lives. Two others were rescued by the steamship American Banker.

Violent winds crashed a British air force bomber on the beach at Portland, England, killing two fliers.

Cold weather penetrated the United States as far south as Florida, where citrus growers kept smudge-pots burning to form "smoke blankets" in an effort to save their fruit.

Sixteen deaths were directly attributed to the cold wave, in an area from Virginia through the Carolinas to Louisiana. Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., each reported 14 degrees above zero.

WARMER WEATHER SEEN FOR LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11—(AP)—Moderating temperatures with occasional rains were predicted tonight for Louisiana and Mississippi by Gordon E. Dunn, forecaster for the New Orleans weather bureau.

Dunn said the cold wave which has chilled the gulf coast states for more than a week was receding. He forecast cloudy and warmer weather for tomorrow, turning colder Monday night in Louisiana.

During the last week minimum temperatures daily have been at freezing or below, down to the coast.

FIVE SHIPWRECK VICTIMS WASH ASHORE

LONDON, Dec. 11—(AP)—Five victims of a shipwreck were washed ashore in northern Ireland today, raising the death toll of storms sweeping the British isles.

They were drowned when the Belfast steamer Annagher, a 586-ton coastal vessel, sank off the Irish coast during a driving snow storm. Four others were reported missing.

Travis and Adkins await trial.

Booth, slim and bald-headed, based his defense on insanity. His counsel did not ask the jury to free him, only that he be spared the gallows.

Dr. Seder was induced to enter the kidnaper's car on the promise of making good a $30 bad check which Booth had given him.

The former missionary to Japan and former head of the West Virginia Anti-Saloon league died November 15 from pneumonia which physicians testified was caused by exposure in the mine, and from a brain hemorrhage.

TIME EXTENSION ASKED FOR STARTING PROJECTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 —(AP)— J. Lester White, Louisiana planning commission chairman, asked public works administration officials today to extend for 30 days the time limit for starting construction on six Louisiana projects.

The projects are gymnasium-auditorium at Southern university, Scotlandville, La., three school buildings in Iberville parish, a Livingston parish courthouse, and a Lake Charles, La., sewage system and disposal plant.

White said delay in transfer of records of the recently abolished New Orleans, La., PWA office to the new regional PWA office at Fort Worth, Tex., necessitated the request.

He also asked the PWA to extend the time limit for completing the state exhibits building at the Louisiana state fair in Shreveport La., until May 1, 1938, explaining that a construction contract clause would permit a $3,500 cost reduction if the extension were granted.

command of the language, a very Gallic-looking beard and a certain nicety in dress, got away with the goods more often than not.

THOSE WERE the days when Big Spanish worked the hotels around 14th street, places much ferquented by Latin Americans. He was a big, good-looking South American who came here from Venezuela, posing as a revolutionist. That was his pet racket. He actually organized a Junta here for the purpose of turning Dictator Castro out of Venezuela. He was running the Junta for all that was in it when Jim Forbes of the Charity Organization society tipped off a few South Americans who had fallen for Big Spanish's fiery oratory. Therefore Big Spanish was seen no more. Never again in this world.

Perhaps the slickest of those old time artists of beggardom was Rudolph, an Austrian plinger and crook. The Floppers and the Black Hoods and the Plingers called him "Prince Rudolph," because of his lavish spending and his high play in stuss and poker. He was the high-roller of the fraternity, and it took a good deal of easy money to keep him going.

GOLD TOOTH ENGLISH and Hoboken Dick, both mopers, or gentlemen who lounged along Broadway striking any easy mark that happened to come along, were notable members of the craft. Their specialty was working the Broadway restaurants.

One of the most interesting of all was Charles Berkowitz—"Blind" Berkowitz—a flopper, or fake cripple, who sat usually on the sidewalk in front of the old Herald Square theater, holding his plate out for contributions from the tender-hearted. It was said of "Blind" Berkowitz, when he died, that he held the deeds of 12 apartments and had bank books representing more than $20,000 cash. These were only a few of the professional beggars who added to the color of Little Old New York.

Once a year these aristocrats of the profession held a celebration in downtown New York. They gave a New Year's eve party in the back room of Diamond Dan O'Rourke's saloon, and there, throughout the night, they introduced the Black Hoods and the High Heels (the women who panhandled for them when they were too tired to work) and their particular favorites in the profession.

IT WAS THEN that the Undertaker, with his long, sorrowful face and his suit of solemn black gave an annual sermon on the vicissitudes of life and the imminence of death. It was then that Fiddling Dan with an instrument stolen, of course, and said to have been the work of Stradivarius himself, played for the dancers who shuffled about all the night long. It was then that they opened more champagne than was popping anywhere in the big bars uptown. Even politicians did not disdain to drop in and pay their respects to the leaders of the beggar profession.

But they have passed, this curious and colorful crew. Hard times have submerged them and their like in a vast army of the unfortunate who lack their peculiar talents.

inclined to feel indulgent towards the child-like fancies of junior and sis, are intrigued by the inviting possibilities of electric trains, mechanical toys, and the host of other playthings which will find their way into the children's stockings this Christmas.

Never before in the memory of Monroe residents have the city's stores been stocked with such an abundance of high-quality merchandise. There are gifts to fit every pocketbook and comparable with the finest to be had in any metropolitan center. Monroe shoppers found this out yesterday and the tills in the various establishments rang merrily as overflow crowds shoved and pushed good-naturedly while they shopped from store to store purchasing just the right gift at the right price.

Monroe presents a fairy-like picture these crisp nights with its myriad Christmas illuminations and visitors to the city last night were much impressed and gratified with the splendid display.

Store fronts and display windows have never been so artistically or brilliantly decorated as they are this holiday season and with Christmas only two weeks away, every prospect points to the most successful season this year ever to be experienced by local merchants.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE PLANNED FOR POOR

FERRIDAY, La., Dec., 11.—(Special) —The Ferriday Rotary club, the Woman's club and the Gray-McCearley post No. 148 of the American Legion, plan to stage a community Christmas tree for the poor children and their families at the Legion hall Christmas day.

Toys and baskets are being collected by the members of the Woman's club, and the Rotary club and Legion members are raising money to be used to defray the expenses of the annual distribution. One of the members of the organization will act as Santa Claus and Mayor E. W. Vogt, who is supervising the tree and the distribution, says that no poor family in Ferriday will be forgotten during the Yuletide season.

The Louisiana Power and Light company, wtih Manager L. P. Wilder in charge, will erect a community Christmas tree for the occasion.

MONROE, LOUISIANA, SUNDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1937

Sports Chatter

By GEORGE V. LOFTON

BASEBALL BOOM

The local baseball situation took a decided turn for the better last week upon the return of Saul Adler from Milwaukee, where he attended the minor leagues meeting. Adler negotiated a hook-up with the Chicago White Sox, through the Dallas Steers, and from all indications, it's one of the most advantageous deals that could possibly be made.

The White Sox will furnish as many players as are needed here. In addition, they will make a cash contribution each month to help pay these players' salaries. In return, they get the pick of the local squad when the season's over. Otherwise, they have nothing whatever to do with the management of the club, that remaining in the hands of the Monroe owners.

The ill-fated deal at Vicksburg last year was entirely different. Dallas owned the Vicksburg club outright, they furnished the executives and ran the club from top to bottom. Vicksburg people promised to do certain things and Dallas lived up to its contract by putting a first division ball club there. When Vicksburg fell down, Dallas pulled out.

Under the agreement with the Monroe club, Dallas cannot remove a ball player until the end of the season, unless the local club owners consent. Furthermore, the White Sox submitted two propositions—furnish a guaranteed first division club and a certain amount of money, or send a club here that would be a doubtful contender and increase the amount of money to be paid each month. Local owners accepted the first proposition, thus assuring local fans of a team that will be in the thick of the pennant fight.

So far, Messrs. Adler, Bendel and Meredith have batted 1.000.

A HEFTY SCHEDULE

When Ouachita Parish High school's 1938 football schedule is completed, Coach "Lefty" Haynes will have arranged probably the stiffest card ever attempted by a local prep school eleven. Monroe fans will see some classy teams, although, of course, all of the "big games" will not be played here.

After the preliminary battles with such teams as Camden, Vivian, Tallulah, Delhi and maybe Fortier of New Orleans or Minden, the Lions will swing into action against Haynesville, Byrd, Fair Park, Lake Charles and Bolton. Not one of those teams, including the first six mentioned, is a setup. And when the Lions come to those last five, they'll need their claws sharpened plenty to cope with the opposition.

Ouachita, of course, isn't expected to win all those games. But at least they'll be playing teams in their own class and they'll be furnishing some high class football attractions for the fans of this section.

Coach Haynes and his associates at Ouachita are to be congratulated on that bang-up schedule.

ARMY ELIGIBILITY RULE

Army's decision to install the three-year rule for athletes—a rule in effect at virtually every college in the nation—was a blow to the football ambitions of a pair of Ruston boys who seemed destined to become stars at West Point. Billy Mitchell and Jack Thigpen, outstanding members of the plebe eleven this season, were counted upon to bolster the varsity backfield squad next year.

The three-year rule, of course, simply means that an athlete who has completed three years of varsity football on any college team is ineligible to compete at Army. Heretofore, a football player, for instance, could play three years at any college and then enter West Point and play three years of varsity football there.

There seems to be a possibility that the rule recently put into effect may not affect the status of athletes already enrolled at The Point. The last story concerning the matter stated that the rule would bar several members of the current crop of players but other information indicated that point had not been settled.

The former Tech stars were praised in a recent issue of The Pointer, official publication at the academy. In the annual resume of the plebe grid season, The Pointer said:

"Mitchell, the number three back, has been the most consistent ground gainer all year. He kicks, passes and runs. Polk, Thigpen and Kelleher also stand out in the plebe backfield.

"All in all, Lieutenant Meehan is turning over a fine bunch of prospects to the varsity next fall."

The Army plebes, incidentally, won three of their four games last fall.

Schmeling Starts 'Comeback' Against Thomas Monday

German Rates 2-1 Favorite In Betting To Polish Off Chicago Slugger

By Eddie Brietz

Max Schmeling

Notwithstanding that it will be his first ring appearance since he stunned the fistic world by knocking out the present champion, Joe Louis, 18 months ago, "Der Schlager" was a 2 to 1 favorite in the Broadway spots tonight.

There are those who think the hard-hitting Thomas, who never has been knocked off is feet, has a chance to spring a surprise and upset the German, but not many are saying so with money.

Promoter Mike Jacobs predicted a crowd of 16,000 and a gate of $75,000 despite a boycott of the fight by an anti-Nazi society. Other sources estimated the gate would be around $50,000. A sellout would mean the crowd of 18,500 and receipts of close to $100,000.

Schmeling, who came here expecting a easy fight, apparently has taken the Thomas "build up" seriously. Those close to him say the Teuton has never worked harder preparing for a battle. Since pitching camp at Summit, N. J., 20 days ago, Max boxed 116 rounds and used up eight sparring partners. He wound up work today with four snappy rounds.

Thomas loafed Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he conditioned. He is in tip top shape and hasn't put on the gloves since Thursday. Both fighters will remain in their camps until Monday morning when they'll motor into town to weigh in before the New York State Athletic commission in the Garden.

Thomas has been fighting since 1932. He has had 56 fights. He won 43 of them by knockouts, eight by decisions, drew in two and lost only three. He can hit with either hand and in his workouts has demonstrated that he can absorb punishment as well as deal it out.

He knocked out Jorge Brescia of the Argentine in one of the preliminaries to the Braddock-Louis championship fight in Chicago last June. He has fought six times this year, losing only to Roscoe Toles.

If it were not for the memories, ever green, of the Braddock-Baer, Schmeling-Louis and Farr-Louis form reversals, the general public would take Monday night's fight between Thomas and Schmeling lightly. However, those three imbroglios have made the fistic clients wary and curious.

Tub-thumping which has boomed extraordinary new qualities in Thomas' ring repertoire must be ignored. If he were as great as some would have you believe he would have been fighting top bouts long ago. But the fact remains that Schmeling has chosen no second-rater for his first test since Louis. Thomas is a genuine tough article, ready and able to give the Teuton schlager a busy evening.

The bout will have a third competitor—the old guy with the scythe. Prime importance is attached to Schmeling's age and his 16 months of exile from the ring. Schmeling admits he is 32. Some say he is three years older.

Schmeling brings a war-worn but trusty armament into the ring. If he is tuned anywhere near the fighting pitch he was when he spattered the Louis legend in the Yankee stadium it would be no contest. But there is more than a hint that the Black Uhlan is far from his top form.

Max withstood the shots of one of the game's hardest punchers in Louis. Therefore, his friends say, he has nothing to fear from Thomas, whose punches cannot equal the steam the Louis maulies carry. But should Schmeling's legs show signs of age, it should be a long hard bout against a fighter young enough to go 15 rounds at top speed.

Schmeling has every technical advantage on his side except the springy legs of youth. But Thomas is hungry. He has been knocking around midwest fight clubs for a long time. He is hungry as Dempsey was against Willard, as Tunney was against Dempsey. Sometimes it makes a difference.

JESUITS BEAT PICAYUNE IN TOY FUND GAME, 8-0

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—New Orleans Jesuits today defeated the Picayune, Miss., Maroons, 8 to 0, in the annual Times-Picayune doll and toy fund benefit football game. The game was played in Tulane stadium.

WARMING UP FOR A WARM-UP

RALLY REQUIRES DOCTOR'S OKAY

Athletes Must Show Health Certificate In North Louisiana Tourney

RUSTON, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Health certificates will be required of participants in all athletics events of the North Louisiana High School rally conducted at Louisiana Tech, it is recorded in the minutes of a recent meeting of the rally officials just reported by M. H. Folk, Jr., secretary.

E. R. Hester of Arcadia, member of the executive committee, introduced a motion, seconded by C. L. Madden of Choudrant, reading as follows: "That the boys and girls who expect to participate in athletics events in the rally present certificates from a doctor stating that they have been examined within two days preceding the date of participation and are in good physical condition." The motion carried unanimously.

Such a requirement has been applicable only to boxing contestants of the rally here in the past, Mr. Folk stated.

Another motion, made by Mr. Hester and seconded by J. B. Thompson of Rayville, provides for the addition of girls' and boys' softball and a shuttle (football) relay to the program of the rally. The committee also voted to hold the volley ball and softball meets at the time of the tennis tournament, one week before the general rally, and that boys' and girls' softball teams play on 60-foot diamonds, using a 12-inch, smooth-seamed ball and wearing tennis or gymnasium shoes.

F. G. Johnston of Grayson moved "to have all principals interested in the rally to serve as a committee to give rally publicity." The motion was seconded by W. B. Glover of Winnsboro, and passed unanimously.

Other committee members attending the recent meeting were J. A. Garrett, Bonita, and Jack Hayes, Monroe.

MEHRE CONSIDERING SOUTH CAROLINA JOB

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Harry J. Mehre, who resigned recently as football coach at the University of Georgia, was reported today to have advised a group of alumni he would consider accepting the job of head coach at the University of South Carolina.

The Columbia Record said Mehre informed the group he would take the post if he is permitted to bring his entire coaching staff with him. A meeting of a special committee of the university athletic board has been called for Monday to make recommendations on the coaching situation.

Mehre, who watched his team defeat Miami last night in its last game under his direction, also was mentioned today in reports involving the coaching job at the University of Michigan. Rumors that Mehre had gone to Purdue university to discuss a possible connection were denied in Lafayette, Ind. Purdue officials said Mehre had not been there today.

The piano playing record is held by Mlle. Qanotha, who played from Mendelssohn, 5595 notes in 4 minutes and 5 seconds.

Graduating Grid Stars Have Varied Aspirations

Ambitions Range From Movie Stardom To Undertaking And Pro Wrestling

By Bill Boni

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Professional football's talent scouts undoubtedly will come up with their usual fine crop of candidates from the graduating list of college stars who finished their gridiron careers this fall.

But, at least on the boys' say-so as gathered in an annual Associated Press survey, many of the year's outstanding competitors will shun the cash-and-carry trade for other lines of post-graduate endeavour.

Byron (Whizzer) White, Colorado's great halfback and second all-American in the history of the Rocky Mountain conference, won't follow the brilliant pro grid trail blazed by his predecessor, Dutch Clark of Colorado college. The Whizzer has Rhodes scholarship aspirations and plans a law career "even though I may starve to death doing it."

Clint Frank of Yale and Sam Chapman of California, two other all-America backs, also have omitted pro football from their future plans. The Eli is aiming for a place in the business world. Chapman would like to crash professional sports, but on the diamond instead of the gridiron.

All-around man of the Bear backfield this fall, Chapman was outfielder and shortstop of the baseball team last spring, when he batted .420. He earned a rating as his school's best big-league prospect since Taylor Douthit went up to the St. Louis Cardinals.

In fact only one of the graduating Californians is interested in continuing his football playing career. That's End Perry Schwartz. Center Bob Herwig and Claude Evans, one of Stub Allison's fine guards, would like to coach. The other guard, Vard Stockton, has signed up for a two-year job as mining engineer in the Andes. Quarterback Johnny Meek, on the other hand, will take over the management of some of his father's citrus ranches in southern California.

Army's announcement of adoption of the three-year eligibility may have an effect on the career of Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt center. The south's best pivot man wants to go to West Point, but possibly not if he can't play football there. Perhaps he'll reconsider some of the movie offers he previously had turned down.

The movie lots already have attracted one star, Gene Hibbs, U. C. L. A. end. He has no Thespian dreams, but will join Brother Jess in technicolor production work.

Adventurous careers are luring a lot of the youngsters. Bernie Bloom, N. Y. U.'s crack passer, is going to study law in hopes of becoming a G-man. Joe Ruetz, Notre Dame guard, will continue his study of medicine but also would like to join up with exploring expeditions; Frank Mattes of Washington will enter foreign trade, and Hal Harrison and Paul Bates of Washington State are looking forward to forest service and army air corps posts.

Dairy manufacturing appeals to Joe Gray of Oregon State; professional wresting to Nick Frankovic of Texas, who is state amateur heavyweight champion, and Lou Carroll of George Washington will join his father in the undertaking business at Gresham, Ore.

Chapman is not alone in his baseball aspirations. Others are Joe Woitkowski of Fordham, Tom Burnette of North Carolina, Captain Joe Hagan of Kentucky, Jack Baer of Oklahoma and Ennio Arboit of Notre Dame, a pitcher.

Prospective coaching talent is plentiful in the class of 1938. Notre Dame alone will contribute Andy Puplis, Pat McCarty, Joe Kuharich, Bunny McCormick, and Chuck O'Reilly. Other stars who would like to pass on their gridiron skill to others are Rudy Gmitro, Andy Uram and Lou Midler of Minnesota; Ed Franco, Alex Wojciechowicz and Johnny Druze of Fordham; Charley Ewart of Yale, Andy Farkas of Detroit, Andy Bershak of North Carolina, Leroy Monsky and Joe Kilgrow of Alabama, Gene Moore of Colorado and Honey Hackney of Duke.

Yet there won't be any lack of pro gridiron material. Among the young hopefuls are such prominent players as Bob Davis of Kentucky, Boyd Brumbaugh, Duquesne; Al Babartsky; Fordham; Karl Schleckman, Utah; Jack Robbins, Dwight Sloan, Jim Benton and Ray Hamilton, Arkansas; Buford (Baby) Ray, Vanderbilt's alternate captain who stands 6 feet 7 and weighs 252; Fred Shirey, Nebraska; Bruiser Kinard, Mississippi; Mickey Parks, Oklahoma, and Eddie Berlinski, North Carolina State.

MORRISON VOTED LEADING MENTOR

Southeastern Sports Writers Pick Vanderbilt Veteran As 'Best Coach'

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Jesse Ray Morrison, who makes a living fooling the opposition, was selected today as the "best coach" in the Southeastern conference for 1937.

Conference coaches and Dixie sports writers decided he turned in the finest job of tutoring at Vanderbilt in a poll conducted by the Nashville Banner.

Morrison, a 52-year-old disciple of deception and the spectacular on the gridiron, earned the honor by taking a lightly-regarded group of Commodores through a hard schedule with only two defeats.

Georgia Tech battered Vanderbilt, 14 to 0, and Alabama turned Morrison's squad back with a fourth quarter field goal, 9-7.

The veteran coach received eight out of a possible 20 first place votes, Jack Meagher and Frank Thomas of Auburn and Alabama vieing with him for the top honor.

Thomas was given five votes for first place, Meagher two, but the latter also received several ballots for second place. Only Josh Cody of Florida, whose 'Gators made a good comeback; Bill Alexander of Tech and Bernie Moore of L. S. U. were given consideration by the voters.

In addition to trouncing Tennessee and Southern Methodist, Kentucky and Chicago, Morrison's eleven dropped Louisiana State for a 7-6 count with a brilliantly-executed trick play that left this section buzzing for weeks. The correct operation of the play never was divulged. It was L. S. U.'s first loop defeat since 1935 and knocked them out of a tie for the title.

CHICAGO FAVORED TO SHADE INDIANS IN CLOSE BATTLE

Crowd Of 40,000 Expected To See Spectacular Tilt On Frozen Gridiron

By Charles Dunkley

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The cocky Washington Redskins battle the tough Chicago Bears for the national professional football championship at Wrigley field tomorrow on a frozen gridiron.

Between 40,000 and 44,000 fans, a thousand or more from Washington alone, will see the title conflict, judging from the record advance sales, despite near zero weather which has prevailed all week, should the temperature return to normal of 30 degrees tomorrow, as indicated, a record breaking crowd is expected to be in the stands.

The winners will be in line for the big share of a $200,000 pot. The gate receipts tomorrow probably will reach $60,000. A winter tour to the southwest and Pacific coast and next year's all star game were expected to raise it to the larger figure. Of tomorrow's take, 50 per cent will go to the players—60 per cent of that amount to the winners and 40 per cent to the vanquished.

The kickoff will be at 1:15 p.m. to assure finishing the game before dusk.

Despite the spectacular rush of the Redskins to the eastern championship the Bears, with the toughest line in all football, will go into the game a slight favorite. They represent the west with 9 victories, one loss and one tie, while Washington, the hope of the east, won 8 and lost 3.

The outcome of the game appears to depend entirely on the ability of the powerful Bear line to check the runs of Cliff Battles, former West Virginia Wesleyan star halfback, and the slingshot right arm of Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the genius of tossing from Texas. Baugh and Battles are the Redskins' chief scalpers. Baugh has thrown 171 passes in the regular season, completing 81 for 1,127 yards. Battles, leading the league in ground gained for a second year, picked off 874 yards in 216 attempts, an average of slightly over four yards per carry.

The Bear attack, directed by Bernie Masterson, will place chief reliance and power on plunging Bronko Nagurski, Jack Manders and Ray Nolting. But, if the power fails, the Bears can fall back on the passing of Ray

BASEBALL BOOM

The local baseball situation took a decided turn for the better last week upon the return of Saul Adler from Milwaukee, where he attended the minor leagues meeting. Adler negotiated a hook-up with the Chicago White Sox, through the Dallas Steers, and from all indications, it's one of the most advantageous deals that could possibly be made.

The White Sox will furnish as many players as are needed here. In addition, they will make a cash contribution each month to help pay these players' salaries. In return, they get the pick of the local squad when the season's over. Otherwise, they have nothing whatever to do with the management of the club, that remaining in the hands of the Monroe owners.

The ill-fated deal at Vicksburg last year was entirely different. Dallas owned the Vicksburg club outright, they furnished the executives and ran the club from top to bottom. Vicksburg people promised to do certain things and Dallas lived up to its contract by putting a first division ball club there. When Vicksburg fell down, Dallas pulled out.

Under the agreement with the Monroe club, Dallas cannot remove a ball player until the end of the season, unless the local club owners consent. Furthermore, the White Sox submitted two propositions—furnish a guaranteed first division club and a certain amount of money, or send a club here that would be a doubtful contender and increase the amount of money to be paid each month. Local owners accepted the first proposition, thus assuring local fans of a team that will be in the thick of the pennant fight.

So far, Messrs. Adler, Bendel and Meredith have batted 1.000.

A HEFTY SCHEDULE

When Ouachita Parish High school's 1938 football schedule is completed, Coach "Lefty" Haynes will have arranged probably the stiffest card ever attempted by a local prep school eleven. Monroe fans will see some classy teams, although, of course, all of the "big games" will not be played here.

After the preliminary battles with such teams as Camden, Vivian, Tallulah, Delhi and maybe Fortier of New Orleans or Minden, the Lions will swing into action against Haynesville, Byrd, Fair Park, Lake Charles and Bolton. Not one of those teams, including the first six mentioned, is a setup. And when the Lions come to those last five, they'll need their claws sharpened plenty to cope with the opposition.

Ouachita, of course, isn't expected to win all those games. But at least they'll be playing teams in their own class and they'll be furnishing some high class football attractions for the fans of this section.

Coach Haynes and his associates at Ouachita are to be congratulated on that bang-up schedule.

Army's decision to install the three-year rule for athletes—a rule in effect at virtually every college in the nation—was a blow to the football ambitions of a pair of Ruston boys who seemed destined to become stars at West Point. Billy Mitchell and Jack Thigpen, outstanding members of the plebe eleven this season, were counted upon to bolster the varsity backfield squad next year.

The three-year rule, of course, simply means that an athlete who has completed three years of varsity football on any college team is ineligible to compete at Army. Heretofore, a football player, for instance, could play three years at any college and then enter West Point and play three years of varsity football there.

There seems to be a possibility that the rule recently put into effect may not affect the status of athletes already enrolled at The Point. The last story concerning the matter stated that the rule would bar several members of the current crop of players but other information indicated that point had not been settled.

The former Tech stars were praised in a recent issue of The Pointer, official publication at the academy. In the annual resume of the plebe grid season, The Pointer said:

"Mitchell, the number three back, has been the most consistent ground gainer all year. He kicks, passes and runs. Polk, Thigpen and Kelleher also stand out in the plebe backfield.

"All in all, Lieutenant Meehan is turning over a fine bunch of prospects to the varsity next fall."

The Army plebes, incidentally, won three of their four games last fall.

Schmeling Starts 'Comeback' Against Thomas Monday

German Rates 2-1 Favorite In Betting To Polish Off Chicago Slugger

By Eddie Brietz

Max Schmeling

Notwithstanding that it will be his first ring appearance since he stunned the fistic world by knocking out the present champion, Joe Louis, 18 months ago, "Der Schlager" was a 2 to 1 favorite in the Broadway spots tonight.

There are those who think the hard-hitting Thomas, who never has been knocked off is feet, has a chance to spring a surprise and upset the German, but not many are saying so with money.

Promoter Mike Jacobs predicted a crowd of 16,000 and a gate of $75,000 despite a boycott of the fight by an anti-Nazi society. Other sources estimated the gate would be around $50,000. A sellout would mean the crowd of 18,500 and receipts of close to $100,000.

Schmeling, who came here expecting a easy fight, apparently has taken the Thomas "build up" seriously. Those close to him say the Teuton has never worked harder preparing for a battle. Since pitching camp at Summit, N. J., 20 days ago, Max boxed 116 rounds and used up eight sparring partners. He wound up work today with four snappy rounds.

Thomas loafed Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he conditioned. He is in tip top shape and hasn't put on the gloves since Thursday. Both fighters will remain in their camps until Monday morning when they'll motor into town to weigh in before the New York State Athletic commission in the Garden.

Thomas has been fighting since 1932. He has had 56 fights. He won 43 of them by knockouts, eight by decisions, drew in two and lost only three. He can hit with either hand and in his workouts has demonstrated that he can absorb punishment as well as deal it out.

He knocked out Jorge Brescia of the Argentine in one of the preliminaries to the Braddock-Louis championship fight in Chicago last June. He has fought six times this year, losing only to Roscoe Toles.

If it were not for the memories, ever green, of the Braddock-Baer, Schmeling-Louis and Farr-Louis form reversals, the general public would take Monday night's fight between Thomas and Schmeling lightly. However, those three imbroglios have made the fistic clients wary and curious.

Tub-thumping which has boomed extraordinary new qualities in Thomas' ring repertoire must be ignored. If he were as great as some would have you believe he would have been fighting top bouts long ago. But the fact remains that Schmeling has chosen no second-rater for his first test since Louis. Thomas is a genuine tough article, ready and able to give the Teuton schlager a busy evening.

The bout will have a third competitor—the old guy with the scythe. Prime importance is attached to Schmeling's age and his 16 months of exile from the ring. Schmeling admits he is 32. Some say he is three years older.

Schmeling brings a war-worn but trusty armament into the ring. If he is tuned anywhere near the fighting pitch he was when he spattered the Louis legend in the Yankee stadium it would be no contest. But there is more than a hint that the Black Uhlan is far from his top form.

Max withstood the shots of one of the game's hardest punchers in Louis. Therefore, his friends say, he has nothing to fear from Thomas, whose punches cannot equal the steam the Louis maulies carry. But should Schmeling's legs show signs of age, it should be a long hard bout against a fighter young enough to go 15 rounds at top speed.

Schmeling has every technical advantage on his side except the springy legs of youth. But Thomas is hungry. He has been knocking around midwest fight clubs for a long time. He is hungry as Dempsey was against Willard, as Tunney was against Dempsey. Sometimes it makes a difference.

JESUITS BEAT PICAYUNE IN TOY FUND GAME, 8-0

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—New Orleans Jesuits today defeated the Picayune, Miss., Maroons, 8 to 0, in the annual Times-Picayune doll and toy fund benefit football game. The game was played in Tulane stadium.

WARMING UP FOR A WARM-UP

RALLY REQUIRES DOCTOR'S OKAY

Athletes Must Show Health Certificate In North Louisiana Tourney

RUSTON, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Health certificates will be required of participants in all athletics events of the North Louisiana High School rally conducted at Louisiana Tech, it is recorded in the minutes of a recent meeting of the rally officials just reported by M. H. Folk, Jr., secretary.

E. R. Hester of Arcadia, member of the executive committee, introduced a motion, seconded by C. L. Madden of Choudrant, reading as follows: "That the boys and girls who expect to participate in athletics events in the rally present certificates from a doctor stating that they have been examined within two days preceding the date of participation and are in good physical condition." The motion carried unanimously.

Such a requirement has been applicable only to boxing contestants of the rally here in the past, Mr. Folk stated.

Another motion, made by Mr. Hester and seconded by J. B. Thompson of Rayville, provides for the addition of girls' and boys' softball and a shuttle (football) relay to the program of the rally. The committee also voted to hold the volley ball and softball meets at the time of the tennis tournament, one week before the general rally, and that boys' and girls' softball teams play on 60-foot diamonds, using a 12-inch, smooth-seamed ball and wearing tennis or gymnasium shoes.

F. G. Johnston of Grayson moved "to have all principals interested in the rally to serve as a committee to give rally publicity." The motion was seconded by W. B. Glover of Winnsboro, and passed unanimously.

Other committee members attending the recent meeting were J. A. Garrett, Bonita, and Jack Hayes, Monroe.

MEHRE CONSIDERING SOUTH CAROLINA JOB

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Harry J. Mehre, who resigned recently as football coach at the University of Georgia, was reported today to have advised a group of alumni he would consider accepting the job of head coach at the University of South Carolina.

The Columbia Record said Mehre informed the group he would take the post if he is permitted to bring his entire coaching staff with him. A meeting of a special committee of the university athletic board has been called for Monday to make recommendations on the coaching situation.

Mehre, who watched his team defeat Miami last night in its last game under his direction, also was mentioned today in reports involving the coaching job at the University of Michigan. Rumors that Mehre had gone to Purdue university to discuss a possible connection were denied in Lafayette, Ind. Purdue officials said Mehre had not been there today.

The piano playing record is held by Mlle. Qanotha, who played from Mendelssohn, 5595 notes in 4 minutes and 5 seconds.

Graduating Grid Stars Have Varied Aspirations

By Bill Boni

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Professional football's talent scouts undoubtedly will come up with their usual fine crop of candidates from the graduating list of college stars who finished their gridiron careers this fall.

But, at least on the boys' say-so as gathered in an annual Associated Press survey, many of the year's outstanding competitors will shun the cash-and-carry trade for other lines of post-graduate endeavour.

Byron (Whizzer) White, Colorado's great halfback and second all-American in the history of the Rocky Mountain conference, won't follow the brilliant pro grid trail blazed by his predecessor, Dutch Clark of Colorado college. The Whizzer has Rhodes scholarship aspirations and plans a law career "even though I may starve to death doing it."

Clint Frank of Yale and Sam Chapman of California, two other all-America backs, also have omitted pro football from their future plans. The Eli is aiming for a place in the business world. Chapman would like to crash professional sports, but on the diamond instead of the gridiron.

All-around man of the Bear backfield this fall, Chapman was outfielder and shortstop of the baseball team last spring, when he batted .420. He earned a rating as his school's best big-league prospect since Taylor Douthit went up to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dairy manufacturing appeals to Joe Gray of Oregon State; professional wresting to Nick Frankovic of Texas, who is state amateur heavyweight champion, and Lou Carroll of George Washington will join his father in the undertaking business at Gresham, Ore.

Chapman is not alone in his baseball aspirations. Others are Joe Woltkowski of Fordham, Tom Burnette of North Carolina, Captain Joe Hagan of Kentucky, Jack Baer of Oklahoma and Ennio Arboit of Notre Dame, a pitcher.

Prospective coaching talent is plentiful in the class of 1938. Notre Dame alone will contribute Andy Puplis, Pat McCarty, Joe Kuharich, Bunny McCormick, and Chuck O'Reilly. Yet there won't be any lack of pro gridiron material. Among the young hopefuls are such prominent players as Bob Davis of Kentucky, Boyd Brumbaugh, Duquesne; Al Babartsky; Fordham; Karl Schleckman, Utah; Jack Robbins, Dwight Sloan, Jim Benton and Ray Hamilton, Arkansas; Buford (Baby) Ray, Vanderbilt's alternate captain who stands 6 feet 7 and weighs 252; Fred Shirey, Nebraska; Bruiser Kinard, Mississippi; Mickey Parks, Oklahoma, and Eddie Berlinski, North Carolina State.

CHICAGO FAVORED TO SHADE INDIANS IN CLOSE BATTLE

By Charles Dunkley

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The cocky Washington Redskins battle the tough Chicago Bears for the national professional football championship at Wrigley field tomorrow on a frozen gridiron.

Between 40,000 and 44,000 fans, a thousand or more from Washington alone, will see the title conflict, judging from the record advance sales, despite near zero weather which has prevailed all week, should the temperature return to normal of 30 degrees tomorrow, as indicated, a record breaking crowd is expected to be in the stands.

The winners will be in line for the big share of a $200,000 pot. The gate receipts tomorrow probably will reach $60,000. A winter tour to the southwest and Pacific coast and next year's all star game were expected to raise it to the larger figure. Of tomorrow's take, 50 per cent will go to the players—60 per cent of that amount to the winners and 40 per cent to the vanquished.

The kickoff will be at 1:15 p.m. to assure finishing the game before dusk.

Despite the spectacular rush of the Redskins to the eastern championship the Bears, with the toughest line in all football, will go into the game a slight favorite. They represent the west with 9 victories, one loss and one tie, while Washington, the hope of the east, won 8 and lost 3.

The outcome of the game appears to depend entirely on the ability of the powerful Bear line to check the runs of Cliff Battles, former West Virginia Wesleyan star halfback, and the sling-shot right arm of Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the genius of tossing from Texas. Baugh and Battles are the Redskins' chief scalpers. Baugh has thrown 171 passes in the regular season, completing 81 for 1,127 yards. Battles, leading the league in ground gained for a second year, picked off 774 yards in 216 attempts, an average of slightly over four yards per carry.

The Bear attack, directed by Bernie Masterson, will place chief reliance and power on plunging Bronko Nagurski, Jack Manders and Ray Nolting. But, if the power fails, the Bears can fall back on the passing of Ray

REVOLTA, SNEAD TIED FOR MIAMI OPEN LEAD

EX-P. G. A. CHAMP GETS SUB-PAR 70 TO CATCH LEADER

Smith And Turnesa One Stroke Back In $10,000 Tourney With 140's

By Larry Rollins

Revolta's deadly chipping kept him under par while the game of the big belter from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., fell apart on the second nine and he wound up with a one-over-par 72 for the second day.

Horton Smith of Chicago shot the lowest—and steadiest—round of the day for a 69, two under par, and projected himself very much in the running with a 140. Also one stroke back of the leaders was Jim Turnesa of Providence, R. I., who turned in his second 70.

Victor Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., and Tony Penna of Dayton, O., came next on the list with identical scores of 70-72—142 for the two rounds.

Dick Metz, young Chicago pro, added a 72 to his previous 71 for a 143.

Byron Nelson, Ryder Cup player from Reading, Pa., shot one of the finest scores of the day, a 70, to tie five others at the 144 notch. Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., another former P. G. A. champion, Ed Dudley of Philadelphia, James D. Fogertey of Boga Grande, Fla., and E. J. Harrison of Little Rock, Ark.

Seventy professionals, with scores of 151 or better, qualified for the last 36 holes. The third round will be played tomorrow with the finale Monday. Ten amateurs, headed by Bob Service of Dayton, O., who had a 147, also qualified.

Not a single big-name golfer failed to make the grade. Harry Cooper of Chicopee, Mass., low scorer for the year, shot a 74 today for a 146. Ralph Guldahl, National Open champion and winner of the 1936 Biltmore, was a stroke further back, along with Tony Manero of Peabody, Mass., National titleholder two years ago, and several others.

Revolta, who hails from Evanston, Ill., went out in 34, with two birdies, and picked up two more coming home. His worst lapse was on the 15th, where he sliced his third shot into a trap, exploded 12 feet short of the pin and took two putts for a six.

Smith, however, was the man to watch tonight. Winner of the Biltmore Open in 1935 and runner-up last year, he was the steadiest player in the field today.

College Stars Drawn By Pro Teams In Annual Draft

Older Coaches Heaved Those Sighs Of Relief

Stagg, Warner, Et Al Were Glad When Season Finally Came To End

By Dillon Graham
(Associated Press Feature Service Writer)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—You're wrong if you think the happiest football coaches are those whose teams attracted bowl bids.

The happiest are the old-timers, like Amos Alonzo Stagg, Glenn (Pop) Warner and Harry Hughes, who bumped into disaster almost continuously. They thought the season never would end and the final guns relaxed them all.

It was a tough campaign for those venerable chaps who were coaching football when many of the modern-day tutors wore knee pants. Some kept winning, such as Frank Dobson, Jock Sutherland and Ray Morrison but most of them needed crying towels.

Stagg, who has been coaching for more than 45 years, saw his College of the Pacific club win only three games, while losing five and tying two.

Pop Warner's Temple Owls played four scoreless ties, won three and lost two games. Villanova, their chief Pennsylvania rival, handed the Owls one of their worst defeats in years.

The Colorado Aggies turned in one of their poorest seasons since Harry Hughes—the coach with the longest consecutive service record at one institution—started there in 1911. The Aggies scored only one touchdown, won one game and lost seven.

The veteran Gil Dobie at Boston college won four, lost four and tied one, but two of those he lost were the unpardonable ones, against Boston university and Holy Cross.

There were only a few bright spots, such as beating Northwestern and tying Notre Dame, on the Illinois slate for Bob Zuppke's 25th anniversary year. The Illini won three, lost three and tied two.

Dana X. Bible got away to a slow start at Texas, with only two victories and a tie in nine starts. At Virginia Frank Murray, who built great teams at Marquette, lost seven of nine. Bill Spaulding at U. C. L. A., won two and tied one in nine engagements. Southern California's Howard Jones won four, lost four and tied two. Tuss McLaughry's Brown Bears won five while losing four.

On the other hand Jock Sutherland's Pittsburgh club was regarded by many as best in the U. S., with only a tie with Fordham against nine triumphs. Frank Dobson at Maryland won eight and lost two. Vanderbilt's Morrison had seven victories in nine starts, and Charley Bachman's Michigan State club—northern representative in Miami's Orange Bowl game—won eight and lost one.

Six wins in eight games is not a bad mark, but it was far below Bernie Bierman's usual pace at Minnesota. Francis Schmidt's Ohio State Buckeyes also won six of eight, while Bill Alexander's Georgia Tech Engineers won six, lost three and tied one.

Dick Harlow directed Harvard to one of the Crimson's best campaigns in late years, winning five, losing two and tying one. But, most important, the Harvards beat Yale and Princeton to capture the Big Three title.

OUACHITA TO HAVE BASKETBALL TEAM

Inexperienced Squad, First In Two Years, Reports To Coach Hartman

Ouachita Parish High school will again sponsor a basketball team after two years without a cage squad, it was announced last night by Coach Leo Hartman.

Coach Hartman is working with a small, inexperienced squad at present and has been spending the practice hours in teaching the boys to pass and shoot. The squad is composed chiefly of freshmen and sophomores and it has been necessary to teach the players the fundamentals from the ground up, Coach Hartman said.

The new Ouachita gym will be completed about the first of the year, it was said, and the squad will get more intensive training. Also, several new players will join the team after midterm. Some of the present members are out just for the physical education work, Coach Hartman said.

Better members of the present squad are Burl Little, Owel Halsell, Donald Kennedy and Billy Craighead, guards; Douglas Crews, Bill Reed and Dean Fields, forwards, and Thomas Colliers and Warren Sievers, centers. Boys expected to become eligible after midterm are Fred McMullen and Mitchell Sumrall, guards; Gulley Edwards and Francis Whitlock, forwards, and Tommy Evans, center.

The Lions already have played two practice games, losing both by close scores. Bonita shaded the locals 33 to 26, while Collinston also beat Ouachita, 44 to 36. So far, only two regular games have been scheduled, one with Bolton at Alexandria on January 8 and the other with Bonita here on January 11. Teams wishing to play the Lions are urged to communicate with Coach Hartman.

The new gym will provide a modern floor, 90 by 48, for the Ouachita cagers. Completion of the structure should prove an impetus to basketball here because it is centrally located and modern in every respect.

The Lions are expected to be in excellent shape by the time the schedule opens.

L. S. U. SQUAD TO REPORT TUESDAY

Tigers Start Preparations For Sugar Bowl Tilt With Santa Clara

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Forty-one Louisiana State university football players, a bit overweight as a result of two weeks of inactivity, will begin practice Tuesday afternoon for their Sugar Bowl game with Santa Clara at New Orleans New Year's day.

Coach Bernie Moore said the first few days of practice will be devoted to getting back in shape. The Tigers have managed to put on some surplus poundage during the two weeks since the Tulane game, when they were released from training.

The call for the opening of practice found the Tigers ready and anxious to get back to work.

"I certainly will be glad when we start practice again," asserted John Hugh Smith, regular guard. "I want to get rid of the four pounds I gained the last couple of weeks."

Quarterback Barrett Booth, himself the possessor of a few surplus pounds, echoed Smith's sentiments as did other members of the team.

CHICAGO ELEVEN TRIMS JACKSON

DeCorrevont Hurt As Austin High Scores 13-0 Intersectional Victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Chicago's Austin High champions completed an undefeated and untied season here today with an intersectional football triumph over the Jackson (Tenn.) Golden Bears, 13-0, in a game marred by the injury of "Wild Bill" de Correvont, sensational Austin back.

Five thousand spectators, chilled by below-freezing weather, looked on as de Correvont sped around his left end in the first period—the first time he was called upon to carry the ball—and raced 37 yards for a touchdown.

The game was sponsored by the Memphis Commercial Appeal for its Christmas fund.

De Correvont left the game with a shoulder injury near the close of the second period. He had carried the ball from the Jackson 23 to the 13 where a pile-up ensued. Officials banished Don Radke, substitute Chicago end, and penalized the Maroons 15 yards for roughness immediately after the play.

Dan Moore, fleet Austin back who replaced de Correvont, took Ross Long's punt in midfield in the closing minutes of the first half and ran to the Jackson 29. From this point Sebastian Parillo plunged through to the Bears' one-yard line and on the next play carried over for the second and final score. Alf Bauman's placement was bad.

PITTSBURGH AND CLEVELAND GIVEN TOP SELECTIONS

Pirates Get Chance To Sign White And Matisi; Rams Get Routt, Franco

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Pittsburgh's Pirates of the National Professional Football league were awarded the right to negotiate with Byron "Whizzer" White, Colorado's sensational all-American halfback, today at the annual draft meeting of the league.

The names of 113 players were posted for draft, some of whom may decide not to prolong their football careers in the interest of financial gains. Yale's Clint Frank, another member of the all-American backfield, who has flatly stated that he would not play professional football, was drawn by the Detroit Lions.

In addition to White, the Pirates were awarded Tony Matisi, Pittsburgh's all-American tackle. The Cleveland Rams, baby member of the league, also drew two all-America selections—Joe Routt, guard from Texas A. and M., and Joe Franco, Fordham tackle.

The other eligible all-Americas were disposed as follows: Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt, center, Philadelphia; Leroy Monsky, Alabama guard, Brooklyn; Chuck Sweeney, Notre Dame end, Green Bay; and Sam Chapman, California fullback, Washington.

The farm system question, so familiar in major league baseball, made its appearance in the pro gridiron game when the club owners suggested that a rule be adopted to give each club the right to place a maximum of three men, provided they are first year players, on farms with the understanding they shall not be subject to the waiver list and may be recalled at any moment. Such players must either become permanent members of the club or be granted their releases after one year.

Philadelphia: Hinkle, Vanderbilt, center.

Brooklyn: Kilgrow, Alabama, back; Kinard, Mississippi, tackle; Monsky, Alabama, guard; Sivell, Auburn, guard.

Pittsburgh: White, Colorado, back; Matisi, Pittsburgh, tackle; King, Minnesota, end.

Detroit: Wojciechowicz, Fordham, center; Bershak, North Carolina, end; Frank, Yale, back.

Green Bay: Sweeney, Notre Dame, end.

New York: Konemann, Georgia Tech, back; Souchak, Pittsburgh, end; Hackney, Duke, back.

Washington: Chapman, California, back; Price, Mississippi State, center; Hartman, Georgia, back.

Chicago Bears: Sims, Georgia Tech, back.

BICKERSTAFF CHAIRMAN OF OLE MISS ATHLETICS

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Professor T. A. Bickerstaff, registrar, became chairman of the University of Mississippi Athletic association today, succeeding Dean J. W. Bell.

The athletic association is to meet Thursday. There were rumors about the campus, but no confirmation, that Edgar L. Walker, head coach and athletic director since 1930, would not make application for a renewal of his contract.

To be rehired, he must gain approval by the athletic committee, Chancellor A. B. Butts and the board of trustees of state-endowed institutions.

Chancellor Butts said today no thought was being given to the possible hiring of a new coach until after the athletic association passed on Walker at the Thursday meeting. Alumni organizations have sought Walker's ouster, students said today, but the student body supported retention of the coach.

FERRIDAY GIRLS NOSE OUT BLOCK HIGH TEAM, 16-14

FERRIDAY, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—The Ferriday High school girls' basketball team defeated the Block High girls of Jonesville 16 to 14 in a close game played at Ferriday Friday. The score was tied at the end of the half, but Captain Era and Vera Drane, the goal tossing twins of the Ferriday team, put on a rally which netted victory for the local lassies.

The defensive performance of Ruth Chauvin, Mickey Honea, Christine Daniels and Frances DeLoach was outstanding for the winners. Frances Fedric and Wesses Lee Stevens also turned in good passing games and aided the Drane twins in scoring the winning markers for Ferriday. The team will play several more games before the holidays.

'WOLVES' LIKELY TO HOWL IN VAIN AT MOST COACHES

Southwest, Big Six And Rocky Mountain To Stand Pat On Present Setup

By Sid Feder

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—The football wolves, who start howling about this time every year for nice juicy portions of coaches' scalps, don't figure to do much eating this winter.

They're enjoying a full meal, at the moment, in Harry Kipke, Michigan's "Ex", but aside from him, and possibly a few others, such as Harry Mehre, who already has resigned at Georgia, the "choice" morsels probably will be few and far between.

The general impression around and about seems to be that if the Wolves want to howl—well, let 'em. Take Clark Shaughnessy at Chicago for instance. It's been many a day since the Maroon made any kind of showing against big time gridiron rivals. But no one at Chicago is making any passes at Clark. He appears as safe as the Bank of England.

Three of the major conferences, the Southwest, Big Six and Rocky Mountain, so far are standing pat on what they have. And in the Big Ten, aside from Kipke, the pilots have no immediate cause for worry. There are few, if any, rumors afloat.

Michigan may follow up by swinging the ax at Kipke's staff of assistants, notably Line Coach Hunk Anderson, provided the next mentor, whoever he may be, says so. General conjecture as to Kipke's successor mentions Gus Dorais, Detroit's highly successful pilot; Irwin Uteriz, former Michigan quarterback, now assisting at California, and (as a dark horse) Benny Friedman, Michigan's former passing great, who has just wound up a satisfactory season at City college of New York.

On the Pacific coast, no immediate changes appear in prospect, but there's talk galore. The reports have to do with Oregon, where Prince Callison's contract has not yet been renewed; Southern California, where you hear rumors of a possible shakeup involving Howard Jones, and U. C. L. A., where Bill Spaulding's outfit won only two games of a nine-game schedule. Spaulding's contract, however,

Seventy professionals, with scores of 151 or better, qualified for the last 36 holes. The third round will be played tomorrow with the finale Monday. Ten amateurs, headed by Bob Service of Dayton, O., who had a 147, also qualified.

OUACHITA TO HAVE BASKETBALL TEAM

Inexperienced Squad, First In Two Years, Reports To Coach Hartman

Ouachita Parish High school will again sponsor a basketball team after two years without a cage squad, it was announced last night by Coach Leo Hartman.

Coach Hartman is working with a small, inexperienced squad at present and has been spending the practice hours in teaching the boys to pass and shoot. The squad is composed chiefly of freshmen and sophomores and it has been necessary to teach the players the fundamentals from the ground up, Coach Hartman said.

The new Ouachita gym will be completed about the first of the year, it was said, and the squad will get more intensive training. Also, several new players will join the team after mid-term. Some of the present members are out just for the physical education work, Coach Hartman said.

Better members of the present squad are Burl Little, Owel Halsell, Donald Kennedy and Billy Craighead, guards; Douglas Crews, Bill Reed and Dean Fields, forwards, and Thomas Colliers and Warren Sievers, centers. Boys expected to become eligible after mid-term are Fred McMullen and Mitchell Sumrall, guards; Gulley Edwards and Francis Whitlock, forwards, and Tommy Evans, center.

The Lions already have played two practice games, losing both by close scores. Bonita shaded the locals 33 to 26, while Collinston also beat Ouachita, 44 to 36. So far, only two regular games have been scheduled, one with Bolton at Alexandria on January 8 and the other with Bonita here on January 11. Teams wishing to play the Lions are urged to communicate with Coach Hartman.

The new gym will provide a modern floor, 90 by 48, for the Ouachita cagers. Completion of the structure should prove an impetus to basketball here because it is centrally located and modern in every respect.

The Lions are expected to be in excellent shape by the time the schedule opens.

L. S. U. SQUAD TO REPORT TUESDAY

Tigers Start Preparations For Sugar Bowl Tilt With Santa Clara

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 11—(Special)—Forty-one Louisiana State university football players, a bit overweight as a result of two weeks of inactivity, will begin practice Tuesday afternoon for their Sugar Bowl game with Santa Clara at New Orleans New Year's day.

Coach Bernie Moore said the first few days of practice will be devoted to getting back in shape. The Tigers have managed to put on some surplus poundage during the two weeks since the Tulane game, when they were released from training.

The call for the opening of practice found the Tigers ready and anxious to get back to work.

"I certainly will be glad when we start practice again," asserted John Hugh Smith, regular guard. "I want to get rid of the four pounds I gained the last couple of weeks."

Quarterback Barrett Booth, himself the possessor of a few surplus pounds, echoed Smith's sentiments as did other members of the team.

CHICAGO ELEVEN TRIMS JACKSON

DeCorrevont Hurt As Austin High Scores 13-0 Intersectional Victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 11—(AP)—Chicago's Austin High champions completed an undefeated and untied season here today with an intersectional football triumph over the Jackson (Tenn.) Golden Bears, 13-0, in a game marred by the injury of "Wild Bill" de Correvont, sensational Austin back.

Five thousand spectators, chilled by below-freezing weather, looked on as de Correvont sped around his left end in the first period—the first time he was called upon to carry the ball—and raced 37 yards for a touchdown.

The game was sponsored by the Memphis Commercial Appeal for its Christmas fund.

De Correvont left the game with a shoulder injury near the close of the second period. He had carried the ball from the Jackson 23 to the 13 where a pile-up ensued. Officials banished Don Radke, substitute Chicago end, and penalized the Maroons 15 yards for roughness immediately after the play.

Dan Moore, fleet Austin back who replaced de Correvont, took Ross Long's punt in midfield in the closing minutes of the first half and ran to the Jackson 29. From this point Sebastian Parillo plunged through to the Bears' one-yard line and on the next play carried over for the second and final score. Alf Bauman's placement was bad.

BICKERSTAFF CHAIRMAN OF OLE MISS ATHLETICS

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Dec. 11—(AP)—Professor T. A. Bickerstaff, registrar, became chairman of the University of Mississippi Athletic association today, succeeding Dean J. W. Bell.

The athletic association is to meet Thursday. There were rumors about the campus, but no confirmation, that Edgar L. Walker, head coach and athletic director since 1930, would not make application for a renewal of his contract.

To be rehired, he must gain approval by the athletic committee, Chancellor A. B. Butts and the board of trustees of state-endowed institutions.

Chancellor Butts said today no thought was being given to the possible hiring of a new coach until after the athletic association passed on Walker at the Thursday meeting. Alumni organizations have sought Walker's ouster, students said today, but the student body supported retention of the coach.

FERRIDAY GIRLS NOSE OUT BLOCK HIGH TEAM, 16-14

FERRIDAY, La., Dec. 11—(Special)—The Ferriday High school girls' basketball team defeated the Block High girls of Jonesville 16 to 14 in a close game played at Ferriday Friday. The score was tied at the end of the half, but Captain Era and Vera Drane, the goal tossing twins of the Ferriday team, put on a rally which netted victory for the local lassies.

The defensive performance of [illegible] Clayton, Mickey Honea, Christine Daniels and Frances DeLoach was outstanding for the winners. Frances Fenner and Wessie Lee Stevens also turned in good passing games and aided the Drane twins in scoring the winning points for Ferriday. The team will play several more games before the holidays.

'WOLVES' LIKELY TO HOWL IN VAIN AT MOST COACHES

By Sid Feder

NEW YORK, Dec. 11—(AP)—The football wolves, who start howling about this time every year for nice juicy portions of coaches' scalps, don't figure to do much eating this winter.

They're enjoying a full meal, at the moment, in Harry Kipke, Michigan's [illegible] but aside from him, and possibly a few others, such as Harry Mehre, who already has resigned at Georgia, the "juicy" morsels probably will be few and far between.

The general impression around and about seems to be that if the Wolves want to howl, well, let 'em. Take Clark Shaughnessy at Chicago for instance. It's been many a day since the Maroons made any kind of showing against big time gridiron rivals. But no one at Chicago is making any passes at Clark. He appears as safe as the Bank of England.

Three of the major conferences, the Southwest, Big Six and Rocky Mountain, so far are standing pat on what they have. And in the Big Ten, aside from Kipke, the pilots have no immediate cause for worry. There are few, if any, rumors afloat.

Michigan may follow up by swinging the ax at Kipke's staff of assistants, [illegible] Line Coach Hunk Anderson [illegible] the next mentor, whoever he may be, says so. General conjecture as to Kipke's successor mentions Gus Dorais, Detroit's highly successful pilot; Irwin Uteritz, former Michigan quarterback, now assisting at California, and (as a dark horse) Benny Friedman, Michigan's former passing great, who has just wound up a [illegible] season at City college of New York.

On the Pacific coast, no immediate changes appear in prospect, but there's talk galore. The reports have to do with Oregon, where Prince Callison's contract has not yet been renewed; Southern California, where you hear rumors of a possible shakeup involving Howard Jones, and U. C. L. A., where Bill Spaulding's outfit won only two games of a nine-game schedule. Spaulding's contract, however,

BOXING RETURNS TO STADIUM MONDAY NIGHT

Monroe Boy Meets Barksdale Field Star In Feature; Danna On Card

Boxing returns to Twin City stadium tomorrow night when a card of five bouts will be presented under the promotion of T. F. Mason, of Homer. The show, which gets under way at 8 o'clock, consists of an eight-round main event, a six-round semi-windup, two four-rounders and a three-round opener.

Mason has been highly successful in promoting boxing at Homer and at Barksdale field, and several of the boys who have been big drawing cards on shows at those places will be brought here for the opening card. Mason said he plans to give boxing a thorough trial here and has announced that he will stage at least 12 weekly shows at the stadium.

Two well known local fighters will appear on the initial program Monday night. Sam Jones, star lightweight, meets "Red" Roberts, outstanding 134-pounder from Barksdale field, in the main event, and Nick Danna, hard hitting 156 pound Monroe lad, tangles with "Smokey Joe" Spillars, also of Barksdale field. Both Jones and Danna are former Neville High school boxing stars. Jones took up amateur boxing when he finished his high school career and won several tournament championships. Danna was a district titleholder when in high school.

Roberts and Spillars are said to be two of the best fighters ever developed at Barksdale field, noted for its "battling airmen." Both have impressive records and Promoter Mason believes the two main matches, particularly, will be crowd pleasers. All four four boys are willing mixers and each packs a good punch.

Jones, who has been out of action for a number of months, has been training regularly for the past two weeks and yesterday was reported in good shape for his battle with Roberts. The other principals also have been working out regularly, Mason said.

In one four-rounder, Young Witherspoon, 136, of Homer, meets Jimmy Lee, 135, of Bossier City. The other four round bout brings together Milton Martin, 132, of Homer, formerly of Columbia, and Johnny Ryan, 133, clever Arcadia boy.

Officials who will handle the program have not been announced.

Promoter Mason said popular prices will be charged.

There will be no wrestling show at the stadium Wednesday.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Donald Budge, American national singles champion, today won the Victoria singles championship by defeating Jack Bromwich of Australia in the final match in straight sets, 8-6, 6-3, 9-7.

KNOXVILLE CLUB BUYS BATTERY FROM DALLAS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Secretary Edgar Allen of the Knoxville baseball club announced today the purchase of Pitcher Jim Parker and Catcher Benny Warren from Dallas of the Texas league.

Allen said Parker, a right-hander, pitched for Rayne, La., of the Evangeline league last summer, winning 15 games and losing 11. Warren was on the suspended list last season.

Spectacular Plays Made By All-America Gridders

Frank, Sweeney And White Stood Out With Sparkling Performances

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—America's favorite all-Americans, elected to their honor posts on the basis of all-around accomplishments, also greatly contributed to the 1937 scrap-book of spectacular plays—long runs from scrimmage, dazzling runbacks of kicks and intercepted passes, kicks blocked at crucial moments, and other items of brilliantly-blazing individual fireworks.

Of the eleven players chosen for the Associated Press first team, three particularly stand out in the annual survey of crowd-thrilling feats. Reading from east to west, they are: Clinton Edward Frank of Yale, Charles Alexander Sweeney of Notre Dame, and Byron (Whizzer) White of Colorado.

Frank's deeds were so many and meritorious that the simplest weeding-out process would be to list the "long-gainers." His longest dash from scrimmage was the 79-yard touchdown sprint against Princeton on the first scrimmage play of the game; his longest pass, a 61-yard heave to Flick Hoxton on the goal-line against Maine; his most thrilling series, the two passes he tossed to Al Hessing that enabled the Elis to tie Dartmouth in the final half-minute of play.

Sweeney's eye-catching performances were of a different nature. Without making a single offensive move, the truly Irish end won three games for Notre Dame. He smeared a Middy in the end zone to top Navy, 9-7; blocked Minnesota's extra-point kick to nose out the Gophers, 7-6, and plucked a blocked punt out of the air and carried it over the last chalk stripe for the touchdown that downed Northwestern, 7-0.

All-winning Colorado's White was the real whizzer of the Rockies. Against Utah, Byron caught a punt on his 15, faded back to the 5 to allow his interference to form, then came back the full 95 yards for a touchdown. His 83-yard punt to Missouri's 1 yard line kept the Big Six eleven bottled up for almost half the game, and against Colorado college he reeled off the Rockies' longest scoring run from scrimmage, a 78-yard jaunt.

But there were many—almost too many—others who also helped make the 1937 collection of spectacular plays a brilliant addition to those of other years.

High up in the race for long-distance honors were Ray Hapes of Mississippi and Dick Riffle, Albright's "little all-American." Hapes made 103 yards with a pass interception against Ouachita; Riffle, 102 yards on a similar play against City College of New York. Ken Kavanaugh, Louisiana State end, snared a Rice goal-line fumble out of the air and sprinted the length of the field to help L. S. U. to its 13-0 victory. Army's Art Frontczak reeled off one of the year's longest non-scoring runs when he took a Columbia aerial on his own 2 and finally was brought down on the Lion 4, 94 yards away.

Nor was the foot entirely missing from the football picture. Two brilliant defensive gestures occurred on the same afternoon in New York. At Columbia's Baker field Pete Fay of Stanford, hemmed in his end zone by on-rushing Lions, made a running "Rugby" punt that saved the day and a scoreless tie for the coast team. At Yankee Stadium Howard Dunney of N. Y. U., receiving Fordham's second-half kickoff, punted the ball back 80 yards to keep the Rams in check for a full period.

One of the season's longer field goals, a 46-yarder, was planted between the Oklahoma A. & M. uprights by Oklahoma Quarterback Jack Bear, who later struck the cross-bar on a 54-yard try. Among the other crucial boots were "Sandy" Sanford's last period placements that kept Alabama unbeaten against Tulane and Vanderbilt.

WINNING GOLF

by LAWSON LITTLE

MIAMI, Lla., Dec. 11.—It is dapper little Paul Runyan, usually called "Little Poison" by his brother professionals, who will be interviewed today in this column.

Runyan, when asked if he had anything to say that he thought would help all golfers, knitted his brows in thought for a moment, then said: "Yes, to the three classes of golfers, the novice, the good player who breaks 90 and the near championship player who has a fine swing and plays great rounds in practice games but fails when the bell rings in tournaments. I will try to discuss the biggest problem confronting each class."

"That's great, Paul," I answered. "Let us have some of the golfing instruction you have given the members at your club in White Plains (N. Y.) which has made that club famous for its number of class A golfers."

"Well, Lawson, first dealing with the novice, it is his hands that cause most of the trouble. The novice is one who has taken few if any lessons and 99 times out of a hundred has an improper grip. If the player has his hands placed on the club in a poor position, it is impossible for him to return the club to the ball with the clubface facing squarely to the intended direction. So in order to get any sort of a shot that he would consider good, he has to manipulate the face of the club with his hands. This takes so much concentration that the swing itself and the movements of the body must be neglected.

With a poor grip and this necessary manipulation of the club, it is impossible for a player to become relaxed and swing the club with control and power. Frequently I have seen this manipulation of the club manifested in other parts of a player's swing, such as pulling away from the ball with the left foot as the golfer swings into the ball. The poor grip will put the player's wrists in such a position, when he is at the top of his swing, that the smooth acceleration of power, that should come from the wrists, is turned into a jerky turnover, a weak effort to get the clubface back to the ball in a square position."

"That's certainly interesting, Paul," I ventured. "Now tell us how to properly grip the club."

"Very well, Lawson. The left hand is the guide and control of the club throughout the swing so we begin this discussion by considering the left hand first. With the head of the club on the ground in the normal golfing manner, the left hand is placed slightly over the top of the shaft in a manner that will allow the inverted "V" formed between the thumb and index finger to point diagonally across the body and over the right shoulder.

"Due to the angle formed by the shaft of the club and the left arm, the club will run diagonally across the fingers and lower palm of the hand, forming what I call a combination palm and finger grip. The main gripping pressure is maintained in the last three fingers of the hand and the thumb acts as a convenient rest and guide for the club.

The right hand, if held in the normal manner, when open with the fingers extended, will face squarely toward the line of play. When closed the inverted "V" formed between the thumb and index finger should point to the player's face. The grip with the right hand is more of a finger grip than that of the left hand. The little finger of the right hand is lapped over the second knuckle of the index finger of the left hand, forming what is commonly called the overlapping grip. The left hand is used to guide and control the club while the right hand furnishes the power—the hit. Generally speaking, the more the right hand climbs over the top of the shaft to the player's left, the more chance there is for a slice and the more it turns under the shaft to the player's right the more it caters to a hook. It is of utmost importance, however, that a player who has a proper grip should never alter the grip because he may be hooking or slicing—look for the trouble elsewhere."

"Thank you, Paul. Your explanations are so clear it is no wonder that you have so many good players at your club."

The next release will be Runyan's analysis of the ninety player and the near champion.

St. Louis Browns Rated Best Traders In Major Loops

CELLARITES GET BACK OLD STARS AND RETAIN CASH

Review Of Deals Indicates Ability To Out-Talk American League Foes

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—There's a growing suspicion around the hot stove league that some member of the St. Louis Browns organization can out-Harum practically any noted trader in baseball.

His ability doesn't show up much in any particular trade, but when the Browns went to the winter market recently and pulled off about the biggest deal of them all, the curious began to investigate. Especially interesting was the fact that when they bartered Joe Vosmik to Boston for Buck Newsom, Red Kress and Buster Mills, they got back two players they previously had sold without giving up any of the cash they had received for them. And in the case of Newsom, they had collected $40,000 when he went to Washington in 1935.

Obviously that's quite a feat, but it's just one of many pulled off by the Browns' unknown trader since he disposed of Kress back in 1932. At that time the Browns started a series of deals with four players. They added five others, none especially costly, and have built their ball clubs for five years largely around the men secured in trades. They have realized something like $75,000 in cash from the deals and have six good players left to use on the field or in further trades.

It all goes back to the two big deals of 1932. Kress, who had come up from Tulsa to play shortstop for several seasons, was shipped to Chicago for Irving (Bump) Hadley and Bruce Campbell. About the same time Goose Goslin and Pitcher Walter Stewart went to Washington and the Browns received Sam West, Carl Reynolds, Lloyd Brown and $20,000 to boot.

West still is playing for the Browns, although they've turned down several good offers for him. He is regarded as one of the best outfielders in the American league. The original St. Louis outlay was whatever it may have cost to buy Kress, Schulte and Stewart from the minors and get Goslin in an earlier deal.

In 1933 Reynolds was traded to Boston for Ivy Paul Andrews and Smead Jolley. Then Jolley, along with Wallace Hebert and Jim Levey, both of whom had come from the minors, went to Hollywood in exchange for Alan Strange, theoretically a very expensive piece of minor-league ivory.

Rick Ferrell, star catcher who had been signed as a free agent a few years before, was traded to Boston the same season. The Browns received Catcher Marvin Shea and a sum of cash which was not specified but must have been sizeable.

The next year Hadley was traded to Washington for Catcher Luke Sewell, who was promptly sold to Chicago, and Campbell was sent to Cleveland for Johnny Burnett, Bob Weiland and more cash to boot.

In addition to the Newsom sale in 1935, the Browns decided Strange wasn't going to make good in St. Louis and bartered him off to Washington for Lyn Lary. Then Oscar Melillo, another player who came from the minors to be a Brownie star, went to Boston and Julius (Moose) Solters and another pocketful of money were recorded on the credit side of the St. Louis ledger.

In 1936, Burnett was traded off to Cincinnati for Sunny Jim Bottomley, who did considerable first basing and managed the Browns through the latter part of the past season.

The big deal last winter sent Solters, Lary and Andrews to Cleveland for Vosmik, Billy Knickerbocker and Oral Hildebrand. Now Vosmik is gone, but remaining from a trading turnover of more than 20 players are Mills, West, Knickerbocker, Hildebrand, Newsom and Kress. Then Melillo, released by the Red Sox, has been signed as a Brown coach. And so far as the records show, the Browns still have the cash.

REBELS READY TO HIRE NEW COACH

Walker Reported Sought By Georgia And Southwestern Of Memphis

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Sports circles here buzzed today with talk of football "new deals" for Mississippi's two Southeastern conference members—Mississippi State college and the University of Mississippi.

Football affairs at State college definitely will be reshaped under a tutor yet to be selected. Colonel Ralph Sasse, who took over the head coachship three years ago, resigned before the end of the season and the team finished out its schedule under his assistants.

Maroon alumni and officials gathered here Thursday in a secret conference to discuss Sasse's successor and reports circulated freely after the pow-wow that an effort would be made to lure Bernie Bierman back to Starkville from his Minnesota post.

It was reliably learned that the State college group had decided to send a representative to Minneapolis armed with an attractive offer.

Should Bierman reject the invitation it was rumored Duty Noble, State's freshman coach, was next in line for the job.

At Ole Miss the wolves have been howling loudly at the heels of Coach Ed Walker after the Rebels finished a disappointing season climaxed by Mississippi State's upset victory and thumpings at the hands of Arkansas and Tennessee.

Walker, attending the Southeastern conference meeting here, was reported to have been approached by representatives of Southwestern at Memphis. That he did not deny, nor did he deny that he had been felt out by University of Georgia representatives to succeed Harry Mehre, who tendered his resignation recently.

S'EASTERN MEET CLOSES WITHOUT FURTHER ACTION

Approval Of Orange Bowl Game For Auburn Most Important Item Passed

By Kenneth Gregory

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The annual Southeastern conference law-making sessions closed today after one of the most harmonious gatherings since the group formed its athletic alliance in 1932.

No major action was taken on the final day of the meeting. The executive committee held a brief session, but said at the conclusion it merely reviewed some of the accomplishments of Friday.

Approval of Auburn's participation in the Orange Bowl classic against Michigan State on New Year's day was one of the major moves of the meeting. This renewed the question of post-season games, with a decided divergence of opinion prevailing.

Out of this move there developed a demand among certain officials that the conference arrive soon at a definite stand. To this end it was believed that the next annual gathering in Gainsville, Fla., would place in the by-laws a provision limiting post-season football games.

Many coaches and athletic directors went into huddles in hotel lobbies today, completing football, boxing and basketball schedules for 1938.

The recognition of the Orange Bowl game for Auburn gave the conference representation in the nation's three major post-season contests to be played on New Year's day. Alabama will invade Pasadena for the Rose Bowl game for the fifth time and Louisiana State will play in the Sugar Bowl for the third straight year.

There was a strong hint that the conference in the future would recognize only these three games. Some of the staunch opponents of the "bowl" games said, however, they might vote for outlawing all post-season affairs.

Aside from the "bowl" discussions, which were made in executive session, the conference's major action was barring its teams from engaging in scrimmage of practice games with outside schools. It also established September 1 as the date for freshman football players to report.

G. D. Humphrey, president of Mississippi State who, it was rumored would fly to Minneapolis to discuss with Coach Bernie Bierman of Minnesota the possibility of coming to Mississippi State as head coach, cancelled a plane reservation today. He declined to comment on immediate possibilities.

BOXING RETURNS TO STADIUM MONDAY NIGHT

Monroe Boy Meets Barksdale Field Star In Feature; Danna On Card

Boxing returns to Twin City stadium tomorrow night when a card of five bouts will be presented under the promotion of T. F. Mason, of Homer. The show, which gets under way at 8 o'clock, consists of an eight-round main event, a six-round semi-windup, two four-rounders and a three-round opener.

Mason has been highly successful in promoting boxing at Homer and at Barksdale field, and several of the boys who have been big drawing cards on shows at those places will be brought here for the opening card. Mason said he plans to give boxing a thorough trial here and has announced that he will stage at least 12 weekly shows at the stadium.

Two well known local fighters will appear on the initial program Monday night. Sam Jones, star lightweight, meets "Red" Roberts, outstanding 134-pounder from Barksdale field, in the main event, and Nick Danna, hard hitting 156 pound Monroe lad, tangles with "Smokey Joe" Spillars, also of Barksdale field. Both Jones and Danna are former Neville High school boxing stars. Jones took up amateur boxing when he finished his high school career and won several tournament championships. Danna was a district titleholder when in high school.

Roberts and Spillars are said to be two of the best fighters ever developed at Barksdale field, noted for its "battling airmen." Both have impressive records and Promoter Mason believes the two main matches, particularly, will be crowd pleasers. All four four boys are willing mixers and each packs a good punch.

Jones, who has been out of action for a number of months, has been training regularly for the past two weeks and yesterday was reported in good shape for his battle with Roberts. The other principals also have been working out regularly, Mason said.

In one four-rounder, Young Witherspoon, 136, of Homer, meets Jimmy Lee, 135, of Bossier City. The other four round bout brings together Milton Martin, 132, of Homer, formerly of Columbia, and Johnny Ryan, 133, clever Arcadia boy.

Officials who will handle the program have not been announced.

Promoter Mason said popular prices will be charged.

There will be no wrestling show at the stadium Wednesday.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Donald Budge, American national singles champion, today won the Victoria singles championship by defeating Jack Bromwich of Australia in the final match in straight sets, 8-6, 6-3, 9-7.

KNOXVILLE CLUB BUYS BATTERY FROM DALLAS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Secretary Edgar Allen of the Knoxville baseball club announced today the purchase of Pitcher Jim Parker and Catcher Benny Warren from Dallas of the Texas league.

Allen said Parker, a right-hander, pitched for Rayne, La., of the Evangeline league last summer, winning 15 games and losing 11. Warren was on the suspended list last season.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—America's favorite all-Americans, elected to their honor posts on the basis of all-around accomplishments, also greatly contributed to the 1937 scrap-book of spectacular plays—long runs from scrimmage, dazzling runbacks of kicks and intercepted passes, kicks blocked at crucial moments, and other items of brilliantly-blazing individual fireworks.

Of the eleven players chosen for the Associated Press first team, three particularly stand out in the annual survey of crowd-thrilling feats. Reading from east to west, they are: Clinton Edward Frank of Yale, Charles Alexander Sweeney of Notre Dame, and Byron (Whizzer) White of Colorado.

Frank's deeds were so many and meritorious that the simplest weeding-out process would be to list the "long-gainers." His longest dash from scrimmage was the 79-yard touchdown sprint against Princeton on the first scrimmage play of the game; his longest pass, a 61-yard heave to Flick Hoxton on the goal-line against Maine; his most thrilling series, the two passes he tossed to Al Hessing that enabled the Elis to tie Dartmouth in the final half-minute of play.

Sweeney's eye-catching performances were of a different nature. Without making a single offensive move, the truly Irish end won three games for Notre Dame. He smeared a Middy in the end zone to top Navy, 9-7; blocked Minnesota's extra-point kick to nose out the Gophers, 7-6, and plucked a blocked punt out of the air and carried it over the last chalk stripe for the touchdown that downed Northwestern, 7-0.

All-winning Colorado's White was the real whizzer of the Rockies. Against Utah, Byron caught a punt on his 15, faded back to the 5 to allow his interference to form, then came back the full 95 yards for a touchdown. His 83-yard punt to Missouri's 1 yard line kept the Big Six eleven bottled up for almost half the game, and against Colorado college he reeled off the Rockies' longest scoring run from scrimmage, a 78-yard jaunt.

But there were many—almost too many—others who also helped make the 1937 collection of spectacular plays a brilliant addition to those of other years.

High up in the race for long-distance honors were Ray Hapes of Mississippi and Dick Riffle, Albright's "little all-American." Hapes made 103 yards with a pass interception against Ouachita; Riffle, 102 yards on a similar play against City College of New York. Ken Kavanaugh, Louisiana State end, snared a Rice goal-line fumble out of the air and sprinted the length of the field to help L. S. U. to its 13-0 victory. Army's Art Frontczak reeled off one of the year's longest non-scoring runs when he took a Columbia aerial on his own 2 and finally was brought down on the Lion 4, 94 yards away.

Nor was the foot entirely missing from the football picture. Two brilliant defensive gestures occurred on the same afternoon in New York. At Columbia's Baker field Pete Fay of Stanford, hemmed in his end zone by on-rushing Lions, made a running "Rugby" punt that saved the day and a scoreless tie for the coast team. At Yankee Stadium Howard Dunney of N. Y. U., receiving Fordham's second-half kickoff, punted the ball back 80 yards to keep the Rams in check for a full period.

One of the season's longer field goals, a 46-yarder, was planted between the Oklahoma A. & M. uprights by Oklahoma Quarterback Jack Bear, who later struck the cross-bar on a 54-yard try. Among the other crucial boots were "Sandy" Sanford's last period placements that kept Alabama unbeaten against Tulane and Vanderbilt.

WINNING GOLF

By LAWSON LITTLE

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 11.—It is dapper little Paul Runyan, usually called "Little Poison" by his brother professionals, who will be interviewed today in this column.

Runyan, when asked if he had anything to say that he thought would help all golfers, knitted his brows in thought for a moment, then said: "Yes, to the three classes of golfers, the novice, the good player who breaks 90 and the near championship player who has a fine swing and plays great rounds in practice games but fails when the bell rings in tournaments. I will try to discuss the biggest problem confronting each class."

"That's great, Paul," I answered. "Let us have some of the golfing instruction you have given the members at your club in White Plains (N. Y.) which has made that club famous for its number of class A golfers."

"Well, Lawson, first dealing with the novice, it is his hands that cause most of the trouble. The novice is one who has taken few if any lessons and 99 times out of a hundred has an improper grip. If the player has his hands placed on the club in a poor position, it is impossible for him to return the club to the ball with the clubface facing squarely to the intended direction. So in order to get any sort of a shot that he would consider good, he has to manipulate the face of the club with his hands. This takes so much concentration that the swing itself and the movements of the body must be neglected.

With a poor grip and this necessary manipulation of the club, it is impossible for a player to become relaxed and swing the club with control and power. Frequently I have seen this manipulation of the club manifested in other parts of a player's swing, such as pulling away from the ball with the left foot as the golfer swings into the ball. The poor grip will put the player's wrists in such a position, when he is at the top of his swing, that the smooth acceleration of power, that should come from the wrists, is turned into a jerky turnover, a weak effort to get the clubface back to the ball in a square position."

"That's certainly interesting, Paul," I ventured. "Now tell us how to properly grip the club."

"Very well, Lawson. The left hand is the guide and control of the club throughout the swing so we begin this discussion by considering the left hand first. With the head of the club on the ground in the normal golfing manner, the left hand is placed slightly over the top of the shaft in a manner that will allow the inverted "V" formed between the thumb and index finger to point diagonally across the body and over the right shoulder.

"Due to the angle formed by the shaft of the club and the left arm, the club will run diagonally across the fingers and lower palm of the hand, forming what I call a combination palm and finger grip. The main gripping pressure is maintained in the last three fingers of the hand and the thumb acts as a convenient rest and guide for the club.

The right hand, if held in the normal manner, when open with the fingers extended, will face squarely toward the line of play. When closed the inverted "V" formed between the thumb and index finger should point to the player's face. The grip with the right hand is more of a finger grip than that of the left hand. The little finger of the right hand is lapped over the second knuckle of the index finger of the left hand, forming what is commonly called the overlapping grip. The left hand is used to guide and control the club while the right hand furnishes the power—the hit. Generally speaking, the more the right hand climbs over the top of the shaft to the player's left, the more chance there is for a slice and the more it turns under the shaft to the player's right the more it caters to a hook. It is of utmost importance, however, that a player who has a proper grip should never alter the grip because he may be hooking or slicing—look for the trouble elsewhere."

"Thank you, Paul. Your explanations are so clear it is no wonder that you have so many good players at your club."

The next release will be Runyan's analysis of the ninety player and the near champion.

CELLARITES GET BACK OLD STARS AND RETAIN CASH

Review Of Deals Indicates Ability To Out-Talk American League Foes

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—There's a growing suspicion around the hot stove league that some member of the St. Louis Browns organization can out-Harum practically any noted trader in baseball.

His ability doesn't show up much in any particular trade, but when the Browns went to the winter market recently and pulled off about the biggest deal of them all, the curious began to investigate. Especially interesting was the fact that when they bartered Joe Vosmik to Boston for Buck Newsom, Red Kress and Buster Mills, they got back two players they previously had sold without giving up any of the cash they had received for them. And in the case of Newsom, they had collected $40,000 when he went to Washington in 1935.

Obviously that's quite a feat, but it's just one of many pulled off by the Browns' unknown trader since he disposed of Kress back in 1932. At that time the Browns started a series of deals with four players. They added five others, none especially costly, and have built their ball clubs for five years largely around the men secured in trades. They have realized something like $75,000 in cash from the deals and have six good players left to use on the field or in further trades.

It all goes back to the two big deals of 1932. Kress, who had come up from Tulsa to play shortstop for several seasons, was shipped to Chicago for Irving (Bump) Hadley and Bruce Campbell. About the same time Goose Goslin and Pitcher Walter Stewart went to Washington and the Browns received Sam West, Carl Reynolds, Lloyd Brown and $20,000 to boot.

West still is playing for the Browns, although they've turned down several good offers for him. He is regarded as one of the best outfielders in the American league. The original St. Louis outlay was whatever it may have cost to buy Kress, Schulte and Stewart from the minors and get Goslin in an earlier deal.

In 1933 Reynolds was traded to Boston for Ivy Paul Andrews and Smead Jolley. Then Jolley, along with Wallace Hebert and Jim Levey, both of whom had come from the minors, went to Hollywood in exchange for Alan Strange, theoretically a very expensive piece of minor-league ivory.

Rick Ferrell, star catcher who had been signed as a free agent a few years before, was traded to Boston the same season. The Browns received Catcher Marvin Shea and a sum of cash which was not specified but must have been sizeable.

The next year Hadley was traded to Washington for Catcher Luke Sewell, who was promptly sold to Chicago, and Campbell was sent to Cleveland for Johnny Burnett, Bob Weiland and more cash to boot.

In addition to the Newsom sale in 1935, the Browns decided Strange wasn't going to make good in St. Louis and bartered him off to Washington for Lyn Lary. Then Oscar Melillo, another player who came from the minors to be a Brownie star, went to Boston and Julius (Moose) Solters and another pocketful of money were recorded on the credit side of the St. Louis ledger.

In 1936, Burnett was traded off to Cincinnati for Sunny Jim Bottomley, who did considerable first basing and managed the Browns through the latter part of the past season.

The big deal last winter sent Solters, Lary and Andrews to Cleveland for Vosmik, Billy Knickerbocker and Oral Hildebrand. Now Vosmik is gone, but remaining from a trading turnover of more than 20 players are Mills, West, Knickerbocker, Hildebrand, Newsom and Kress. Then Melillo, released by the Red Sox, has been signed as a Brown coach. And so far as the records show, the Browns still have the cash.

REBELS READY TO HIRE NEW COACH

Walker Reported Sought By Georgia And Southwestern Of Memphis

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 11.—(AP)—Sports circles here buzzed today with talk of football "new deals" for Mississippi's two Southeastern conference members—Mississippi State college and the University of Mississippi.

Football affairs at State college definitely will be reshaped under a tutor yet to be selected. Colonel Ralph Sasse, who took over the head coachship three years ago, resigned before the end of the season and the team finished out its schedule under his assistants.

Maroon alumni and officials gathered here Thursday in a secret conference to discuss Sasse's successor and reports circulated freely after the pow-wow that an effort would be made to lure Bernie Bierman back to Starkville from his Minnesota post.

It was reliably learned that the State college group had decided to send a representative to Minneapolis armed with an attractive offer.

Should Bierman reject the invitation it was rumored Duty Noble, State's freshman coach, was next in line for the job.

At Ole Miss the wolves have been howling loudly at the heels of Coach Ed Walker after the Rebels finished a disappointing season climaxed by Mississippi State's upset victory and thumpings at the hands of Arkansas and Tennessee.

Walker, attending the Southeastern conference meeting here, was reported to have been approached by representatives of Southwestern at Memphis. That he did not deny, nor did he deny that he had been felt out by University of Georgia representatives to succeed Harry Mehre, who tendered his resignation recently.

S'EASTERN MEET CLOSES WITHOUT FURTHER ACTION

By Kenneth Gregory

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The annual Southeastern conference law-making sessions closed today after one of the most harmonious gatherings since the group formed its athletic alliance in 1932.

No major action was taken on the final day of the meeting. The executive committee held a brief session, but said at the conclusion it merely reviewed some of the accomplishments of Friday.

Approval of Auburn's participation in the Orange Bowl classic against Michigan State on New Year's day was one of the major moves of the meeting. This renewed the question of post-season games, with a decided divergence of opinion prevailing.

Out of this move there developed a demand among certain officials that the conference arrive soon at a definite stand. To this end it was believed that the next annual gathering in Gainsville, Fla., would place in the by-laws a provision limiting post-season football games.

Many coaches and athletic directors went into huddles in hotel lobbies today, completing football, boxing and basketball schedules for 1938.

The recognition of the Orange Bowl game for Auburn gave the conference representation in the nation's three major post-season contests to be played on New Year's day. Alabama will invade Pasadena for the Rose Bowl game for the fifth time and Louisiana State will play in the Sugar Bowl for the third straight year.

There was a strong hint that the conference in the future would recognize only these three games. Some of the staunch opponents of the "bowl" games said, however, they might vote for outlawing all post-season affairs.

Aside from the "bowl" discussions, which were made in executive session, the conference's major action was barring its teams from engaging in scrimmage of practice games with outside schools. It also established September 1 as the date for freshman football players to report.

G. D. Humphrey, president of Mississippi State who, it was rumored would fly to Minneapolis to discuss with Coach Bernie Bierman of Minnesota the possibility of coming to Mississippi State as head coach, cancelled a plane reservation today. He declined to comment on immediate possibilities.

Alabama, Auburn and Louisiana State coaches departed early today for their schools to continue preparations of their squads for the New Year's day games. Although there was no frank statement, each coach hinted he expected to win the classic contests.

has two more years to run. Student factions on the Oregon campus recently have been criticizing the poor showings of Callison's teams during the last two or three seasons, while at Southern California, the talk persists that changes are in prospect after Jones' contract expires in March.

Jimmy Phelan at Washington came in for lots of red-hot criticism early this season, but all have been beer and skittles since the Huskies tied Californias' Rose Bowl Bears.

In the deep south, three resignations already have been handed in. At Georgia, the athletic board accepted Mehre's quitting notice, ending his ten-year head coaching term with the Bulldogs. His former backfield coach, Rex Enright, is prominently mentioned as his successor.

Most interest at the moment centers on Mississippi State, where alumni and faculty leaders were reported as reaching a decision to offer Bernie Bierman, head man of Minnesota's mighty Gophers, the coaching job. The berth was vacated when Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Sasse was forced to resign because of ill health. Also resigning in Dixie was Shorty Propst, from Southwestern of Tennessee.

In the east, Boston college holds the spotlight. Gloomy Gil Dobie hasn't been a howling success with the Eagles, and you hear talk his tenure may end. But Gloomy Gil has another year remaining on a three-year $10,000 contract, and it's doubtful it will be terminated. Fritz Crisler at Princeton and Harvey Harman at Pennsylvania have come in for plenty of criticism for their weak 1937 showings, but there'll be no moves to replace them.

Army has lost Gar Davidson through the system which limits coaches to a single tour of duty at the point. He is replaced by Bill Wood. Among the minor colleges Tom Sullivan is out at St. Lawrence but his successor has not yet been named.

CHICAGO FAVORED TO SHADE INDIANS

Buivid, former Marquette star, who has revealed himself as a tosser taking rank with the best.

Both teams go into the game in fine physical condition. Eddie Kawal, center for the Redskins, had an injured shoulder, but is ready for tomorrow's game. Keith Molesworth, reserve Bear quarterback, has a broken nose, but he will wear a specially built noseguard. Coaches of the rival teams were cautious in pre-game statements.

Said Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins:

"Give us a break in the weather and we'll show them a lot of stuff. But we got tough opposition and know it."

Coach and Owner George Halas of the Bears, merely said:

"They won't handle us like they massacred the Giants. We're tough and will be ready."

Halas is putting a big pile of chips on his second string line.

With the Gears and the Redskins as ready as they ever will be for the engagement, Halas was more than ever convinced today that his forwards, particularly the reserve set, represent the Bruins' chances for victory. In erecting a defense to cope with Baugh, Battles and the rest of the Washington attack, Halas and Line Coach Luke Johnson have emphasized that the Bear linemen must be in the Redskin backfield without delay on every play.

They aren't so sure that the first Bear line is so much tougher than Washington's number one wall—but they figure that no team in the league should be able to handle two Chicago lines of equal strength, which is where the second stringers come in. Switching the two sets of giants, Halas hopes, will keep Baugh and his talented mates from getting too far out of hand. And he doesn't think Washington's reserve linemen will be quite that effective.

Both teams were devoting a lot of time worrying over weather conditions. They all expect to have to hustle enough to keep warm, but the footing is something else again. Halas was particularly concerned over the going, for the Bear forwards must have something solid underfoot in order to accomplish the fast-charging defensive maneuvers outlined.

EAST VS. WEST

With all the ballyhoo about the various bowl games occupying so much space, one New Year's day "classic" so far has been neglected to a certain extent. It's the East vs. West game at San Francisco, staged annually for the benefit of the Shriner's hospital for crippled children.

Frankly, this annual all-star game is more deserving of public support than many of the bowl games. It's for a great cause. After expenses are deducted, the proceeds go to the hospital and not to a couple of football teams whose athletic officials have had their ears tuned to the click of the turnstile.

Incidentally, this year's game will carry special interest for Louisiana fans. Once again "Biff" Jones and Bernie Bierman will be on opposing benches matching strategy. The Biffer, with Babe Hollingberry of Washington State, will coach the West team, while Bernie will team up with Andy Kerr, of Colgate, to tutor the East.

Also, this year grid fans throughout the nation will have an opportunity to listen to a description of the game over a MBC hook-up of 21 stations.

The charity game is assuming more importance each year, and there's every indication that it's rapidly gaining the support it deserves.

TROUPER FIRST IN $2,000 JEFFERSON PARK HANDICAP

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. A. R. Smith's Trouper, which scored his last victory early in November, captured the $2,000 added Jefferson park handicap at the Fair Grounds today in a three-horse blanket finish.

Finishing strongly under Jockey H. Krovitz's urging, Trouper nosed out another field horse, Butsy Hernandez' Woodlander, while the favored Waxwing, from the Coward and Coffey stable, was third, only a neck behind. Trouper returned $19.20 on a $2 win ticket while Woodlander paid $11.60 to place.

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Spurred by a call for bids on a new fleet of huge trans-Atlantic passenger planes, airplane stocks held most of the buying attention in today's brief market.

Boeing, Douglas, Consolidated, United and Glenn Martin stepped up as much as 2 points or so on the belief several million dollars would be spent in building the ocean flyers.

While a few steels, rails and specialties displayed mild recovery tendencies, many leaders were unable to get into forward stride and there was a wide assortment of fractional losers at the close.

Dealings were quiet throughout, transfers approximating 400,000 shares.

Buoying steels were forecasts of an upturn in mill operations at Youngstown next week and a better tone in scrap metal, the American metal trade publication said finished steel demand showed modest gains in various directions.

Carriers, while unable to get very far in front, generally held their own as the I. C. C. moved up its schedule of rate hearings so that a final ruling may be expedited by about 40 days.

Motors, utilities, rubbers and mail orders tagged along indifferently. Coppers also lacked vitality.

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Week-end evening up mixed fluctuations in the cotton market here today. The close was steady at net declines of 1 to 3 points.

Little enthusiasm followed passage of the farm bill by the house and ring circles attributed this feeling to uncertainty of senate action.

Hedge selling showed a slight increase over recent sessions but the sales were not confined to any one position and were absorbed at nominal declines.

Foreign markets were better than due but did not exert any influence on prices here. Incentive was lacking and trading was confined to narrow channels.

December closed at 8.14, January at 8.15, March 8.19, May 8.21, July at 8.23 and October 8.26.

Exports today were 7,743 bales.

Cotton futures closed steady at net declines of 3 points.

THREE NEGRO HOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire of undetermined origin which broke out shortly before 12 o'clock last night destroyed three negro houses in the 1000 block of Stone avenue in Newtown and resulted in a two-alarm call, which was answered by three companies from central fire station.

The blaze attracted a large crowd to the scene who watched the firemen fight the conflagration and successfully localize it.

The fire is reported to have originated in a house occupied by Mattie Hentrell. A crippled negro woman, Siler Decatur, was rescued from one of the houses by firemen who heard her screams and rushed into the blazing house. The woman was in bed at the time and had to be carried to safety.

'WOLVES' LIKELY TO HOWL IN VAIN

has two more years to run. Student factions on the Oregon campus recently have been criticizing the poor showings of Callison's teams during the last two or three seasons, while at Southern California, the talk persists that changes are in prospect after Jones' contract expires in March.

Jimmy Phelan at Washington came in for lots of red-hot criticism early this season, but all have been beer and skittles since the Huskies tied Californias' Rose Bowl Bears.

In the deep south, three resignations already have been handed in. At Georgia, the athletic board accepted Mehre's quitting notice, ending his ten-year head coaching term with the Bulldogs. His former backfield coach, Rex Enright, is prominently mentioned as his successor.

Most interest at the moment centers on Mississippi State, where alumni and faculty leaders were reported as reaching a decision to offer Bernie Bierman, head man of Minnesota's mighty Gophers, the coaching job. The berth was vacated when Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Sasse was forced to resign because of ill health. Also resigning in Dixie was Shorty Propst, from Southwestern of Tennessee.

In the east, Boston college holds the spotlight. Gloomy Gil Dobie hasn't been a howling success with the Eagles, and you hear talk his tenure may end. But Gloomy Gil has another year remaining on a three-year $10,000 contract, and it's doubtful it will be terminated. Fritz Crisler at Princeton and Harvey Harman at Pennsylvania have come in for plenty of criticism for their weak 1937 showings, but there'll be no moves to replace them.

Army has lost Gar Davidson through the system which limits coaches to a single tour of duty at the point. He is replaced by Bill Wood. Among the minor colleges Tom Sullivan is out at St. Lawrence but his successor has not yet been named.

Buivid, former Marquette star, who has revealed himself as a tosser taking rank with the best.

Both teams go into the game in fine physical condition. Eddie Kawal, center for the Redskins, had an injured shoulder, but is ready for tomorrow's game. Keith Molesworth, reserve Bear quarterback, has a broken nose, but he will wear a specially built noseguard. Coaches of the rival teams were cautious in pre-game statements.

Said Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins:

"Give us a break in the weather and we'll show them a lot of stuff. But we got tough opposition and know it."

Coach and Owner George Halas of the Bears, merely said:

"They won't handle us like they massacred the Giants. We're tough and will be ready."

Halas is putting a big pile of chips on his second string line.

With the Gears and the Redskins as ready as they ever will be for the engagement, Halas was more than ever convinced today that his forwards, particularly the reserve set, represent the Bruins' chances for victory. In erecting a defense to cope with Baugh, Battles and the rest of the Washington attack, Halas and Line Coach Luke Johnson have emphasized that the Bear linemen must be in the Redskin backfield without delay on every play.

They aren't so sure that the first Bear line is so much tougher than Washington's number one wall—but they figure that no team in the league should be able to handle two Chicago lines of equal strength, which is where the second stringers come in. Switching the two sets of giants, Halas hopes, will keep Baugh and his talented mates from getting too far out of hand. And he doesn't think Washington's reserve linemen will be quite that effective.

Both teams were devoting a lot of time worrying over weather conditions. They all expect to have to hustle enough to keep warm, but the footing is something else again. Halas was particularly concerned over the going, for the Bear forwards must have something solid underfoot in order to accomplish the fast-charging defensive maneuvers outlined.

EAST VS. WEST

With all the ballyhoo about the various bowl games occupying so much space, one New Year's day "classic" so far has been neglected to a certain extent. It's the East vs. West game at San Francisco, staged annually for the benefit of the Shriner's hospital for crippled children.

Frankly, this annual all-star game is more deserving of public support than many of the bowl games. It's for a great cause. After expenses are deducted, the proceeds go to the hospital and not to a couple of football teams whose athletic officials have had their ears tuned to the click of the turnstile.

Incidentally, this year's game will carry special interest for Louisiana fans. Once again "Biff" Jones and Bernie Bierman will be on opposing benches matching strategy. The Biffer, with Babe Hollingberry of Washington State, will coach the West team, while Bernie will team up with Andy Kerr, of Colgate, to tutor the East.

Also, this year grid fans throughout the nation will have an opportunity to listen to a description of the game over a MBC hook-up of 21 stations.

The charity game is assuming more importance each year, and there's every indication that it's rapidly gaining the support it deserves.

TROUPER FIRST IN $2,000 JEFFERSON PARK HANDICAP

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. A. R. Smith's Trouper, which scored his last victory early in November, captured the $2,000 added Jefferson park handicap at the Fair Grounds today in a three-horse blanket finish.

Finishing strongly under Jockey H. Krovitz's urging, Trouper nosed out another field horse, Butsy Hernandez' Woodlander, while the favored Waxwing, from the Coward and Coffey stable, was third, only a neck behind. Trouper returned $19.20 on a $2 win ticket while Woodlander paid $11.60 to place.

While a few steels, rails and specialties displayed mild recovery tendencies, many leaders were unable to get into forward stride and there was a wide assortment of fractional losers at the close.

Dealings were quiet throughout, transfers approximating 400,000 shares.

Buoying steels were forecasts of an upturn in mill operations at Youngstown next week and a better tone in scrap metal, the American metal trade publication said finished steel demand showed modest gains in various directions.

Carriers while unable to get very far in front, generally held their own as the I. C. C. moved up its schedule of rate hearings so that a final ruling may be expedited by about 40 days.

Motors, utilities, rubbers and mail orders tagged along indifferently. Coppers also lacked vitality.

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—(AP)—Week-end evening up mixed fluctuations in the cotton market here today. The close was steady at net declines of 1 to 7 points.

Little enthusiasm followed passage of the farm bill by the house and ring circles attributed this feeling to uncertainty of senate action.

Hedge selling showed a slight increase over recent sessions but the sales were not confined to any one position and were absorbed at nominal declines.

Foreign markets were better than due but did not exert any influence on prices here. Incentive was lacking and trading was confined to narrow channels.

December closed at 8.14, January at 8.15, March 8.19, May 8.21, July at 8.23 and October 8.26.

Exports today were 7,743 bales.

CLARKSON URGES MORE SEAL SALES

Head Of T. B. Campaign Makes Appeal For Use Of Christmas Emblem

Urging a prompt response from individuals and families which have been in receipt the past week of sets of Christmas seals for aid in the campaign against tuberculosis, A. B. Clarkson, general chairman of the seal campaign, Saturday night emphasized the importance of the effort of the people of Ouachita parish.

"The people of this parish," he said, "should be especially concerned in this effort to stamp out a disease that takes at least 36 lives a year amongst our own people, and leaves a trail of nearly 400 others affected by the plague."

Mr. Clarkson said that the committee on special gifts to the association's budget has made excellent progress in the past week, but "the seal sale is developing only slowly."

"It is highly important," he said, "that our people shall take active part in the use of the seals, because this is one of the most effective means to help acquaint the public with the purposes of the campaign. The seals should be used on letters and packages, and every seal, in giving a Christmas greeting, also is a reminder that Christmas time can be made more happy for hundreds when ultimately tuberculosis is under adequate and complete control."

The number of persons who died from tuberculosis in the United States in the past thirty years totalled more than 3,500,000 men, women and children, equalling the total population of Denmark, and nearly twice the population of Louisiana. An additional 2,500,000 would have died in that time had the death rate remained what it was thirty years ago, Mr. Clarkson said. It is only because of the efforts that have been made in this country by the tuberculosis associations that the death rate has decreased.

NEW EMPLOYMENT OFFICE PLANNED

Ferriday To Be Headquarters For Concordia, Catahoula And Tensas

Offices of the Louisiana state employment service and the unemployment compensation division of the department of labor, serving Concordia, Catahoula, and Tensas parishes, will be opened soon in Ferriday, according to an announcement made yesterday by H. S. Turner, division chief of the state employment service.

The building at 319 Louisiana avenue in Ferriday is being remodeled for the offices. Private interviewing rooms, well-lighted comfortable waiting rooms for white and colored, and modern up-to-date office equipment will be among features in the remodeling of the building. The new location of the office was selected because of its easy accessibility to the general public in Ferriday and the interior of the office is being arranged to provide the maximum of comfort and convenience to patrons and at the same time to permit the maximum of efficiency in attending their needs.

This change is a part of the general expansion of the employment service throughout Louisiana. Six new offices are being opened, making a total of 27 offices operating in the major industrial centers of the state. The expansion has become necessary due to the added duties of the employment service in the administration of unemployment compensation after January 1, 1938.

The personnel of the office includes Mr. Turner, division chief, and Mrs. Maloy Williams, receptionist and stenographer.

The Louisiana stat eemployment service is financed jointly by the state and federal governments and places at the disposal of the public, free of charge, an efficient clearing house for labor and employment opportunities and a source of reliable information relative to labor and employment conditions throughout the country, Mr. Turner said.

The most important function of the employment service is that of bringing together the jobless man and manless job whenever openings and men that fit them are called to its attention. It was pointed out by Mr. Turner that the employment service cannot create jobs for the jobless. Its purpose is to conduct a modern efficient system for the mutual benefit of employers and those seeking work.

The ability to do the required work is the only basis on which applicants are selected for jobs, be they professional people, technical workers, young people, veterans or physically handicapped.

The new Ferriday division office will be open to the public daily from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., excepting Saturday, when it will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. For the convenience of residents of Catahoula and Tensas parishes, a representative of the Ferriday office will be in the courthouse at Harrisonburg from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Tuesday of each week, and in the courthouse at St. Joseph from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Thursday of each week.

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The Central Southwest Greeters' association today elected Roy A. Behan, New Orleans, president of the association. Delegates from Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi and Oklahoma attended the two-day convention.

The association decided to hold its next convention at Hot Springs, Ark.

Other officers elected were John Williams, Dallas, first vice-president; Howard Collins, Fort Worth, second vice-president; Tony Perez, Mexico City, third vice-president; Howard Suesz, Oklahoma City, secretary-treasurer, and Graham Hall, Houston, sergeant-at-arms.

Gorman Webb, Durant, Okla., and Frank M. Fannin, Little Rock, Ark., were elected to the association's board of governors.

The women's auxiliary elected Constance Plemons, Dallas, president; Mrs. Al Quinn of Houston, Mrs. Bernice Stitt of Blytheville, Ark., and Mrs. Emola Tomes of New Orleans, vice-presidents; Mrs. Frieda Skawgs, San Antonio, Tex., secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Mary E. Cooper, Houston, sergeant-at-arms.

The auxiliary elected Mrs. F. V. Record, Fort Worth, chairman of its board of governors, and the following board members: Mrs. Jewel Hansen of Dallas, Mrs. Ella Dalton McGee of Oklahoma City, Mrs. Billy Dean of Tulsa and Mrs. Sol Fineberg of Texarkana, Ark.

Walter Casey III, Beaumont, Tex., hotel operator, in a speech prepared for delivery at the association's annual banquet tonight said that the hotel industry should have representatives at meetings of congress and state legislatures to "analyze the bills as presented to determine their effect upon the hotel industry."

"Otherwise," he said, "the demands of the 'idealists' may choke off the few revenue departments of our business which remain."

Casey said the hotel business has "kept abreast of the times" in service and living conditions.

PLAN FOR COTTON COUNCIL ENDORSED

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The board of directors of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange unanimously adopted today a resolution endorsing the plan of Governor Richard Leche to form a cotton industry council.

The exchange was the first to take action on the proposal which is designed to unite all groups in the cotton trade to bring about cooperative rather than a competitive action on matters effecting the industry as a whole.

TOYS REQUESTED

Mrs. Jonas Selig, chairman of the Council of Social Agencies, is urging that discarded toys and those needing repairs which will be donated to the Good Fellows be brought at once to the toy shop, 219 South Fifth street, at once. Mrs. Selig stated that there is need for many more toys, dolls and other playthings and that it is necessary that they be contributed at once so that time will permit their reconstruction before Christmas.

Thought There Was Nothing To Help Him; Then Gly-Cas Easily Gave New Health; Poisons Eliminated; Stomach Troubles Corrected

"Gly-Cas is without question the most wonderful medicine I have ever had any experience with," said Mr. W. S. DePriest, P. O. Box 58, Georgetown, La. (near Alexandria). "I would bloat so badly after eating I could hardly breathe and indigestion was almost unbearable. My entire system was filled with poisons, limbs swelled until I could hardly walk. My blood was so impure that any time I would get a scratch it would inflame and fester, going for weeks without healing. I was confined to bed half the time and grew worse each day. I could not do any work at all for I was in constant misery. Finally I was persuaded to give Gly-Cas a trial and found it really different.

"Gly-Cas eliminated the poisons from my system almost at once," continued Mr. DePriest, "and it was no time until I was feeling like a new person. My stomach has been regulated and no longer bothers me regardless of what I eat. My strength has been restored, the swelling has gone from my limbs and I am able to work every day. I unhesitatingly recommend Gly-Cas to all similar sufferers for I know from my personal experience just what wonders this new Gly-Cas can do."

CLARKSON URGES MORE SEAL SALES

Head Of T. B. Campaign Makes Appeal For Use Of Christmas Emblem

Urging a prompt response from individuals and families which have been in receipt the past week of sets of Christmas seals for aid in the campaign against tuberculosis, A. B. Clarkson, general chairman of the seal campaign, Saturday night emphasized the importance of the effort of the people of Ouachita parish.

"The people of this parish," he said, "should be especially concerned in this effort to stamp out a disease that takes at least 36 lives a year amongst our own people, and leaves a trail of nearly 400 others affected by the plague."

Mr. Clarkson said that the committee on special gifts to the association's budget has made excellent progress in the past week, but "the seal sale is developing only slowly."

"It is highly important," he said, "that our people shall take active part in the use of the seals, because this is one of the most effective means to help acquaint the public with the purposes of the campaign. The seals should be used on letters and packages, and every seal, in giving a Christmas greeting, also is a reminder that Christmas time can be made more happy for hundreds when ultimately tuberculosis is under adequate and complete control."

The number of persons who died from tuberculosis in the United States in the past thirty years totalled more than 3,500,000 men, women and children, equalling the total population of Denmark, and nearly twice the population of Louisiana. An additional 2,500,000 would have died in that time had the death rate remained what it was thirty years ago, Mr. Clarkson said. It is only because of the efforts that have been made in this country by the tuberculosis associations that the death rate has decreased.

Ferriday To Be Headquarters For Concordia, Catahoula And Tensas

Offices of the Louisiana state employment service and the unemployment compensation division of the department of labor, serving Concordia, Catahoula, and Tensas parishes, will be opened soon in Ferriday, according to an announcement made yesterday by H. S. Turner, division chief of the state employment service.

The building at 319 Louisiana avenue in Ferriday is being remodeled for the offices. Private interviewing rooms, well-lighted comfortable waiting rooms for white and colored, and modern up-to-date office equipment will be among features in the remodeling of the building. The new location of the office was selected because of its easy accessibility to the general public in Ferriday and the interior of the office is being arranged to provide the maximum of comfort and convenience to patrons and at the same time to permit the maximum of efficiency in attending their needs.

This change is a part of the general expansion of the employment service throughout Louisiana. Six new offices are being opened, making a total of 27 offices operating in the major industrial centers of the state. The expansion has become necessary due to the added duties of the employment service in the administration of unemployment compensation after January 1, 1938.

The personnel of the office includes Mr. Turner, division chief, and Mrs. Maloy Williams, receptionist and stenographer.

The Louisiana stat eemployment service is financed jointly by the state and federal governments and places at the disposal of the public, free of charge, an efficient clearing house for labor and employment opportunities and a source of reliable information relative to labor and employment conditions throughout the country, Mr. Turner said.

The most important function of the employment service is that of bringing together the jobless man and manless job whenever openings and men that fit them are called to its attention. It was pointed out by Mr. Turner that the employment service cannot create jobs for the jobless. Its purpose is to conduct a modern efficient system for the mutual benefit of employers and those seeking work.

The ability to do the required work is the only basis on which applicants are selected for jobs, be they professional people, technical workers, young people, veterans or physically handicapped.

The new Ferriday division office will be open to the public daily from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., excepting Saturday, when it will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. For the convenience of residents of Catahoula and Tensas parishes, a representative of the Ferriday office will be in the courthouse at Harrisonburg from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Tuesday of each week, and in the courthouse at St. Joseph from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Thursday of each week.

GREETERS ELECT BEHAN PRESIDENT

Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi And Oklahoma Delegates Attend

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 11.—(AP)—The Central Southwest Greeters' association today elected Roy A. Behan, New Orleans, president of the association. Delegates from Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi and Oklahoma attended the two-day convention.

The association decided to hold its next convention at Hot Springs, Ark.

Other officers elected were John Williams, Dallas, first vice-president; Howard Collins, Fort Worth, second vice-president; Tony Perez, Mexico City, third vice-president; Howard Suesz, Oklahoma City, secretary-treasurer, and Graham Hall, Houston, sergeant-at-arms.

Gorman Webb, Durant, Okla., and Frank M. Fannin, Little Rock, Ark., were elected to the association's board of governors.

The women's auxiliary elected Constance Plemons, Dallas, president; Mrs. Al Quinn of Houston, Mrs. Bernice Stitt of Blytheville, Ark., and Mrs. Emola Tomes of New Orleans, vice-presidents; Mrs. Frieda Skawgs, San Antonio, Tex., secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Mary E. Cooper, Houston, sergeant-at-arms.

The auxiliary elected Mrs. F. V. Record, Fort Worth, chairman of its board of governors, and the following board members: Mrs. Jewel Hansen of Dallas, Mrs. Ella Dalton McGee of Oklahoma City, Mrs. Billy Dean of Tulsa and Mrs. Sol Fineberg of Texarkana, Ark.

Walter Casey III, Beaumont, Tex., hotel operator, in a speech prepared for delivery at the association's annual banquet tonight said that the hotel industry should have representatives at meetings of congress and state legislatures to "analyze the bills as presented to determine their effect upon the hotel industry."

"Otherwise," he said, "the demands of the 'idealists' may choke off the few revenue departments of our business which remain."

Casey said the hotel business has "kept abreast of the times" in service and living conditions.

PLAN FOR COTTON COUNCIL ENDORSED

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The board of directors of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange unanimously adopted today a resolution endorsing the plan of Governor Richard Leche to form a cotton industry council.

The exchange was the first to take action on the proposal which is designed to unite all groups in the cotton trade to bring about cooperative rather than a competitive action on matters effecting the industry as a whole.

TOYS REQUESTED

Mrs. Jonas Selig, chairman of the Council of Social Agencies, is urging that discarded toys and those needing repairs which will be donated to the Good Fellows be brought at once to the toy shop, 219 South Fifth street, at once. Mrs. Selig stated that there is need for many more toys, dolls and other playthings and that it is necessary that they be contributed at once so that time will permit their reconstruction before Christmas.

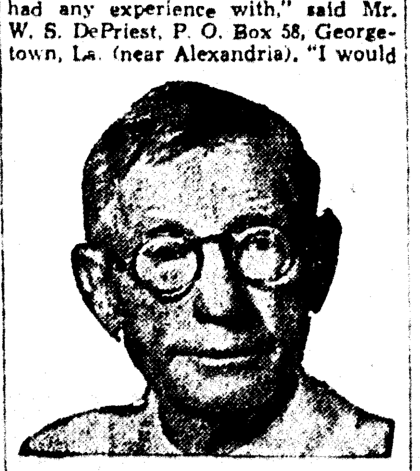
Was Discouraged Over Results Of Other Medicines

Thought There Was Nothing To Help Him; Then Gly-Cas Easily Gave New Health; Poisons Eliminated; Stomach Troubles Corrected

"Gly-Cas is without question the most wonderful medicine I have ever had any experience with," said Mr. W. S. DePriest, P. O. Box 58, Georgetown, La. (near Alexandria). "I would bloat so badly after eating I could hardly breathe and indigestion was almost unbearable. My entire system was filled with poisons, limbs swelled until I could hardly walk. My blood was so impure that any time I would get a scratch it would inflame and fester, going for weeks without healing. I was confined to bed half the time and grew worse each day. I could not do any work at all for I was in constant misery. Finally I was persuaded to give Gly-Cas a trial and found it really different.



MR. W. S. DePRIEST

"Gly-Cas eliminated the poisons from my system almost at once," continued Mr. DePriest, "and it was no time until I was feeling like a new person. My stomach has been regulated and no longer bothers me regardless of what I eat. My strength has been restored, the swelling has gone from my limbs and I am able to work every day. I unhesitatingly recommend Gly-Cas to all similar sufferers for I know from my personal experience just what wonders this new Gly-Cas can do."

Monroe Plunges Into Whirl Of Activities As Christmas Holidays Draw Near

College Crowd Will Reach Home Shortly

Balls At Lakeside Country Club Will Be Outstanding Events Of Yule Season

By Eve Bradford

EACH December day ticks off the minutes until Christmas with all its joys and pleasures arrives. For some reason this has been rather a breathless year with everyone growing even more breathless as 1937 waxes and wanes.

The prelude to Christmas is almost as exciting as the day itself. For a week or more we have been enjoying the beauty of the shops, the illumination of the streets and the anticipatory thrill over the arrival of guests. Plans for holiday balls were made far in advance and the only thing necessary now is the arrival of the college boys and girls. Some of them will hardly have time to unpack their trunks and bags before they are drawn into the whirl of good times.

Those who arrive before the 16th will be able to attend the ball for Mabel Cole at Lakeside Country club planned by Frances and Amos Smelser. From then on there will be a perfect deluge of balls, tea dances and supper parties. Martha Jane Hill has planned a midnight snack at Bridger and Katie Mae Thornhill's home for her two attractive house guests, Marion Blanchard and Mary Jane Querbes of Shreveport, during the intermission hour of the ball honoring Gloria Frances Major, Marguerite McHenry, Martha Wilton McHenry and A. G. McHenry, Jr., on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel.

For no reason at all except to have a royal good time, did Georgia and Richard Kellogg, Lela and Steve Stevens and Anna and Clyde Brown plan their dance for the night of the 23rd at Lakeside Country club. With three such beautiful hostesses every feminine guest, we venture to say, will try to look her dead level best. That means of course that from a sartorial standpoint this brilliant affair will pass off with greater zip than any other social event of the season.

There will be no excuse for a long stag line at this year's balls. More beautiful girls than you can shake a stick at will be dancing into town for the holidays. Laura Grace Kendall will arrive home from Ursuline college with a young and lovely classmate in tow. She is Martha Elmer of New Orleans and will be one of the reigning belles, we predict.

Fortunate the girl who has Arthur Miller for a dancing partner. He has mastered the "Big Apple" if one can judge from the picture appearing in the social section of a New Orleans paper recently. He was seen at the Orleans club with his dancing partner, Mary Sinclair, stepping high, wide and handsome.

Some job for a mere columnist to keep tab on this moving population of ours! With this ever increasing interest in "Boots" Ewing who recently came to brighten the social horizon of Monroe, we found a flattering little squib in a chat column in the New Orleans Item-Tribune the other day. Here it is:

"'Bootie' Ewing never fails to draw a sigh of envy from the femmes over her clothes and the way she wears them . . . last seen in luscious dull green crepe afternoon outfit with a gold embroidered top cut down to here and the sassiest black velvet cap on the back of her head with a huge butterfly bow perched top-front and a long lacy veil from ear to ear . . . 'Bootie' insists it's not too rakish but every one else wanted it for that reason, so why?"

Eilene and George Wright will pile the yule logs high in the old-fashioned fireplace in that attractice living room of theirs for the return of Billy from Culver. This room is alive with memories for Eilene and George—memories of the days when Billy and his pals tossed the rugs aside and danced the happy hours away. Billy's home, by common consent, seemed to be the favorite rendezvous for that exuberant little clique of high school boys and girls.

The William Washburn fireside will be brightened this year by every member of their family including Genevra, who will come racing in from New York in time to hang up her stocking on Christmas eve.

Have you seen that cunning Boston bull pup Georgine Holmes tucks under her arm when she goes shopping? So fearful was she that her pet might catch pneumonia, or whatever it is that dogs catch, during that cold snap last week, the very first purchase she made when she arrived in town was a big warm dog blanket.

The lightening of romance has struck a certain Monroe home—the marriage, characterized by lovely simplicity, will take place next Saturday. Sorry, no announcements until after the bride and groom have slipped away on their honeymoon with the mountainous luggage containing the most delectable trousseau we have seen in many a day. The ceremony will be by candlelight and the room will be made lovelier by white flowers everywhere. Voices will harmonize with violin music.

Friends of Rowena and Abe Arent will have to be content this year with memories of those happy Christmas days spent in their hospitable home year after year as they have decided to spend the day in the bosom of their own family. Open house at the Arents has become a tradition in Monroe but like everything good, there is always an end. The spacious drawing rooms and dining room will be just as attractive on Christmas day as it has always been, but the throngs of friends who were fed opulently with choice morsels, will be missing. The great bowls of eggnogg, for which the Arents were famous, will be missing as will the frosted aperitifs passed unceasingly among the guests throughout the day. The gigantic task of preparing for such a jam was a labor of love for Rowena but this year she has resolved to rest quietly by her own fireside, welcoming the intimate friends who will continue to call even though the feast is lacking.

The social calendar is brimming and preparations for feasting are going on apace. But don't forget to accent the real meaning of Christmas. The quiet pause after the hurry of preparation, in the mysterious afterdark of Christmas eve, will bring rest and spiritual peace. Children have a long road to travel and no one knows what life holds for them of good and bad. One memory will cling through the years when others are forgotten—the memory of home, the soft lights, the songs above all else as music and memory are almost interchangeable. The stories that mother read when she paused to take breath on Christmas eve, will never be forgotten. Dicken's "Christmas Carol," we all know. Yet Tiny Tim is new each year. We cannot let him go—splendid little Tim.

Review Club Holds Meeting

The Review club was privileged to hear the novels "Sparkenbroke" by Charles Morgan reviewed by Mrs. Chester Nenny and "South Riding" by Winifred Holtby reviewed by Mrs. W. R. Hatchell. Both books portray an English scene and are in the English tradition. Both are deeply concerned with death, but one is defeatist, the other affirmative; one denies life, the other accepts it in all its fullness.

Few recent novels have been received with more widely divergent critical opinions than "Sparkenbroke." The novel approaches the fundamental human problems of love and death, but because of a certain spurious glamor, it never seems to touch reality. Mr. Morgan has attempted a very difficult task in creating a superlative character; we are asked to believe in the overwhelming magnetism and beauty of "Sparkenbroke," the hero and his genius, none of which qualities ever become convencing.

"Sparkenbroke" may be enjoyed for the incidental beauty of its setting, the idyllic life in the rectory, and for its occasional penetrating and delicate sidelights on the problems of love. When its basic ideas are stripped of the glamor with which Mr. Morgan's style invests them, they are revealed as artificial.

"South Riding" as contrasted with "Sparkenbroke" is full of a genuine understanding of humanity. "South Riding" was written just before the death of the author. It is unusual in that it has humor, poetry and tragedy. Its essential pattern springs from the multiple activities of a county council in the fictitious "South Riding" of Yorkshire; through this the reader comes to know and understand all the human beings whose lives are touched by the council. Each one of the many characters lives unforgettably; and the interplay of their lives gives rise to authentic drama, which ends in serene and hopeful beauty. Here is the real stuff of life, instead of thinly spun cobwebs of theory about it. "South Riding" is full of courage which makes cowards out of all characters in "Sparkenbrake."

Mrs. Ewing Honored At Several Affairs

Members of Monroe society have manifested their pleasure over the arrival of Mrs. James Ewing in their midst, by entertaining in her honor with luncheons, teas and bridge affairs.

Informality marked the smartly appointed luncheon arranged for Mrs. Ewing last week by Mrs. Clark Duncan in her home in Fairview. Crimson poinsettias overflowing from a classic shaped urn, formed the central decor of the perfectly appointed luncheon table where covers were laid for Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Jack Rogers, Mrs. John Sherrouse, Mrs. Morris Haas, Mrs. T. H. Ewing, Mrs. John Foreacre, Mrs. Shepherd Girault and the hostess.

Several games of contract bridge were enjoyed during the afternoon.

Mrs. Edward Seymour's compliment to Mrs. Ewing was a luncheon Saturday at 1 o'clock. The luncheon decor, a low mound of fruit, was exceedingly artistic and harmonized delightfully with the Mexican pottery luncheon service in the vivid shades of green, blue, crimson and yellow.

A three-course luncheon was served to Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Joseph Isaacman, Mrs. John Sherrouse, Mrs. James A. Noe, Mrs. Morris Haas, Mrs. T. H. Ewing, Miss Margaret Ewing and the hostess.

Miss Polly Payne And James F. Ryder Marry

Wedding Performed At Rectory Of New Orleans Church On Seventh Of December

Miss Polly Payne, whose engagement days were filled with charming pre-nuptial courtesies arranged by friends in this city, became the bride of Mr. James F. Ryder at an impressive ceremony performed by Rev. Thomas Atherton in the rectory of the Holy Name church in New Orleans on the seventh of December.

A few intimate friends were present to witness the ceremony, including Miss Juanita Hogge of this city, who was the bride's only attendant. Miss Hogge wore a handsome dubonnet velvet model with turban and veil and a corsage of orchids.

Calla lilies against a background of luxuriant palms formed a dignified background for the ceremony.

Before leaving for a honeymoon in Mexico, the bride and bridegroom were entertained with a wedding breakfast in a private dining room at Antoine's. Mrs. Ryder traveled in a smart brown tweed tailleur with fox furs and all accessories of brown. Upon their return they will be at home in New Orleans where Mr. Ryder is associated with the West Publishing company.

For the past several years Mrs. Ryder has made her home in this city and worked in a secretarial capacity at the Brown Paper mill. Following announcement of her betrothal many charming affairs were given in her honor by friends who regret exceedingly her departure from this city.

Mr. Ryder, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Ryder of Minneapolis, Minn., is a graduate from the law department of the University of Minnesota.

College Crowd Will Reach Home Shortly

Balls At Lakeside Country Club Will Be Outstanding Events Of Yule Season

By Eve Bradford

EACH December day ticks off the minutes until Christmas with all its joys and pleasures arrives. For some reason this has been rather a breathless year with everyone growing even more breathless as 1937 waxes and wanes.

The prelude to Christmas is almost as exciting as the day itself. For a week or more we have been enjoying the beauty of the shops, the illumination of the streets and the anticipatory thrill over the arrival of guests. Plans for holiday balls were made far in advance and the only thing necessary now is the arrival of the college boys and girls. Some of them will hardly have time to unpack their trunks and bags before they are drawn into the whirl of good times.

Those who arrive before the 16th will be able to attend the ball for Mabel Cole at Lakeside Country club planned by Frances and Amos Smelser. From then on there will be a perfect deluge of balls, tea dances and supper parties. Martha Jane Hill has planned a midnight snack at Bridger and Katie Mae Thornhill's home for her two attractive house guests, Marion Blanchard and Mary Jane Querbes of Shreveport, during the intermission hour of the ball honoring Gloria Frances Major, Marguerite McHenry, Martha Wilton McHenry and A. G. McHenry, Jr., on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel.

For no reason at all except to have a royal good time, did Georgia and Richard Kellogg, Lela and Steve Stevens and Anna and Clyde Brown plan their dance for the night of the 23rd at Lakeside Country club. With three such beautiful hostesses every feminine guest, we venture to say, will try to look her dead level best. That means of course that from a sartorial standpoint this brilliant affair will pass off with greater zip than any other social event of the season.

There will be no excuse for a long stag line at this year's balls. More beautiful girls than you can shake a stick at will be dancing into town for the holidays. Laura Grace Kendall will arrive home from Ursuline college with a young and lovely classmate in tow. She is Martha Elmer of New Orleans and will be one of the reigning belles, we predict.

Fortunate the girl who has Arthur Miller for a dancing partner. He has mastered the "Big Apple" if one can judge from the picture appearing in the social section of a New Orleans paper recently. He was seen at the Orleans club with his dancing partner, Mary Sinclair, stepping high, wide and handsome.

Some job for a mere columnist to keep tab on this moving population of ours! With this ever increasing interest in "Boots" Ewing who recently came to brighten the social horizon of Monroe, we found a flattering little squib in a chat column in the New Orleans Item-Tribune the other day. Here it is:

"'Bootie' Ewing never fails to draw a sigh of envy from the femmes over her clothes and the way she wears them . . . last seen in luscious dull green crepe afternoon outfit with a gold embroidered top cut down to here and the sassiest black velvet cap on the back of her head with a huge butterfly bow perched top-front and a long lacy veil from ear to ear . . . 'Bootie' insists it's not too rakish but every one else wanted it for that reason, so why?"

Eilene and George Wright will pile the yule logs high in the old-fashioned fireplace in that attractice living room of theirs for the return of Billy from Culver. This room is alive with memories for Eilene and George—memories of the days when Billy and his pals tossed the rugs aside and danced the happy hours away. Billy's home, by common consent, seemed to be the favorite rendezvous for that exuberant little clique of high school boys and girls.

The William Washburn fireside will be brightened this year by every member of their family including Genevra, who will come racing in from New York in time to hang up her stocking on Christmas eve.

Have you seen that cunning Boston bull pup Georgine Holmes tucks under her arm when she goes shopping? So fearful was she that her pet might catch pneumonia, or whatever it is that dogs catch, during that cold snap last week, the very first purchase she made when she arrived in town was a big warm dog blanket.

The lightening of romance has struck a certain Monroe home—the marriage, characterized by lovely simplicity, will take place next Saturday. Sorry, no announcements until after the bride and groom have slipped away on their honeymoon with the mountainous luggage containing the most delectable trousseau we have seen in many a day. The ceremony will be by candlelight and the room will be made lovelier by white flowers everywhere. Voices will harmonize with violin music.

Friends of Rowena and Abe Arent will have to be content this year with memories of those happy Christmas days spent in their hospitable home year after year as they have decided to spend the day in the bosom of their own family. Open house at the Arents has become a tradition in Monroe but like everything good, there is always an end. The spacious drawing rooms and dining room will be just as attractive on Christmas day as it has always been, but the throngs of friends who were fed opulently with choice morsels, will be missing. The great bowls of eggnogg, for which the Arents were famous, will be missing as will the frosted aperitifs passed unceasingly among the guests throughout the day. The gigantic task of preparing for such a jam was a labor of love for Rowena but this year she has resolved to rest quietly by her own fireside, welcoming the intimate friends who will continue to call even though the feast is lacking.

The social calendar is brimming and preparations for feasting are going on apace. But don't forget to accent the real meaning of Christmas. The quiet pause after the hurry of preparation, in the mysterious afterdark of Christmas eve, will bring rest and spiritual peace. Children have a long road to travel and no one knows what life holds for them of good and bad. One memory will cling through the years when others are forgotten—the memory of home, the soft lights, the songs above all else as music and memory are almost interchangeable. The stories that mother read when she paused to take breath on Christmas eve, will never be forgotten. Dicken's "Christmas Carol," we all know. Yet Tiny Tim is new each year. We cannot let him go—splendid little Tim.

Review Club Holds Meeting

The Review club was privileged to hear the novels "Sparkenbroke" by Charles Morgan reviewed by Mrs. Chester Nenny and "South Riding" by Winifred Holtby reviewed by Mrs. W. R. Hatchell. Both books portray an English scene and are in the English tradition. Both are deeply concerned with death, but one is defeatist, the other affirmative; one denies life, the other accepts it in all its fullness.

Few recent novels have been received with more widely divergent critical opinions than "Sparkenbroke." The novel approaches the fundamental human problems of love and death, but because of a certain spurious glamor, it never seems to touch reality. Mr. Morgan has attempted a very difficult task in creating a superlative character; we are asked to believe in the overwhelming magnetism and beauty of "Sparkenbroke," the hero and his genius, none of which qualities ever become convencing.

"Sparkenbroke" may be enjoyed for the incidental beauty of its setting, the idyllic life in the rectory, and for its occasional penetrating and delicate sidelights on the problems of love. When its basic ideas are stripped of the glamor with which Mr. Morgan's style invests them, they are revealed as artificial.

"South Riding" as contrasted with "Sparkenbroke" is full of a genuine understanding of humanity. "South Riding" was written just before the death of the author. It is unusual in that it has humor, poetry and tragedy. Its essential pattern springs from the multiple activities of a county council in the fictitious "South Riding" of Yorkshire; through this the reader comes to know and understand all the human beings whose lives are touched by the council. Each one of the many characters lives unforgetably; and the interplay of their lives gives rise to authentic drama, which ends in serene and hopeful beauty. Here is the real stuff of life, instead of thinly spun cobwebs of theory about it. "South Riding" is full of courage which makes cowards out of all characters in "Sparkenbrake."

Mrs. Ewing Honored At Several Affairs

Informality marked the smartly appointed luncheon arranged for Mrs. Ewing last week by Mrs. Clark Duncan in her home in Fairview. Crimson poinsettias overflowing from a classic shaped urn, formed the central decor of the perfectly appointed luncheon table where covers were laid for Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Jack Rogers, Mrs. John Sherrouse, Mrs. Morris Haas, Mrs. T. H. Ewing, Mrs. John Foreacre, Mrs. Shepherd Girault and the hostess.

Several games of contract bridge were enjoyed during the afternoon.

Mrs. Edward Seymour's compliment to Mrs. Ewing was a luncheon Saturday at 1 o'clock. The luncheon decor, a low mound of fruit, was exceedingly artistic and harmonized delightfully with the Mexican pottery luncheon service in the vivid shades of green, blue, crimson and yellow.

A three-course luncheon was served to Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Joseph Isaacman, Mrs. John Sherrouse, Mrs. James A. Noe, Mrs. Morris Haas, Mrs. T. H. Ewing, Miss Margaret Ewing and the hostess.

The bride wore a beautiful model of Wallis blue with accessories of the same shade and a corsage of bride's roses and valley lilies. For something old she carried a rose point lace handkerchief carried by her grandmother on her wedding day.

Miss Julia Moore, the bride's attendant, wore a rust colored model with brown accessories. Mr. Gene Granberry acted as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held.

Christmas Toys More Attractive Than Ever

Santa Claus and his helpers have come down from their North Pole hideaway this year bringing toys so lovely that even grown-ups will have to believe in the fabulous tales of elves and brownies at work in their northern workshops.

It would take the cunning of an elf to evolve all the gay and unusual toys and games appearing in the shops every day. Fuzzy Teddy bears that eat animal crackers rub shoulders with dainty ladies out of fairy tales, and streamlined trailers flaunt their chromium trimmings under the noses of glassy-eyed rocking horses.

Little girls are going to have a really memorable Christmas with all the dolls and pieces of furniture designed just for them. The felt character doll will thrill any girl. She has silky blonde hair done up in a large bun in the back and held in place low on her neck by a hairnet, like ladies wore theirs a long time ago. Her dress is a gay plaid and there are hoops to hold her skirt out just enough to give a tantalizing peek at the pantaloons beneath. Last but not least, she has big dark eyes and she rolls them!

The doll situation is quite bewildering. Every one seems lovelier than the last. The same manufacturer that made the old-fashioned lady has made dozens of character dolls, in all sizes and prices, and all of felt. There are several kinds of baby dolls that can be washed and fed and cared for like real babies.

While much of the furniture is primarily for girls, there are pieces both girls and boys can enjoy. The guardhouse phonograph with its stolid wooden soldier guarding the door, will provide hours of amusement and instruction. The machinery is good and average size records may be played, so that it will long outlast the nursery age. Its red and white stripes would add a gay and festive note under a sparkling tree on Christmas morning.

The tea cart, large enough to carry a quite large set of dishes and with a removable tray, will inspire many tea parties.

Trains have been improved in many ways. There is a replica of a French narrow gage railway which will fit into a smaller space than a regular sized train. Many feet of track can be placed comfortably on two card tables set together. There is also a train that runs by electricity, and has automatic coupling. The operator pushes a button and whichever cars he has chosen are detached from the train.

There are innumerable other toys for you to discover on your shopping tours, too. For instance the doll buggy with the pastel figures of peasants painted on it which plays a lullaby when you roll it. Or the miraculous little car, which starts and stops by command, on account of a mechanism in its top which is affected by your breath. It is not too large to slip into quite a small stocking.

Music Guild Meets At Holden Residence

The Music guild met at the home of Mrs. F. C. Holden. The president, Mrs. Raymond Spence, conducted the usual business session, after which the following program on Chopin was given: Talk on life of Chopin, by Mrs. Raymond Spence; vocal solo, "Madchens Wunsch," by Mrs. Chester Greene; piano solo, "Waltz," by Mrs. F. C. Holden; piano solo, "Prelude," by Mrs. Dallas Goss. At the close of the program, the hostess served delicious refreshments to the following members: Mrs. Raymond Spence, Mrs. Louise Averett, Mrs. J. Norman Coon, Mrs. Charles Gaushell, Mrs. Dallas Goss, Mrs. Wilfred K. Scroggin, Mrs. Chester Greene and Mrs. H. M. James.

Rev. Nobe Talks To University Women

Rev. Clifford Nobe, an interesting visitor in the city from the Philippine Islands, addressed members of the Monroe branch of the American Association of University Women, when they met for their regular December program in the home of Mrs. Ned Leigh. Rev. Nobe was introduced by Dr. Julia Hunter. His subject for the evening was "Status of Women of the Orient."

He said in part: "The lot of the Oriental women is not enviable. They have no place outside of their home and the custom is for them to work and suffer. In China it is a familiar sight to see women dragging carts, loading coal, weeding and planting, harvesting and house building. A familiar sight in the Philippines is a woman carrying her baby while at work.

"Due to the spread of Christianity, the lot of women has improved considerably during the past few years. The missionary program is solely responsible for the vast changes taking place."

Mrs. Elmer Slagle gave an interesting talk at this time on the ideals and purposes of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Allen West announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her sister, Miss Dorothy Davenport, to Mr. W. H. Baker. The wedding will take place on December 23.

Members of the Garden club are enjoying an anticipatory thrill over the illustrated lecture to be given Monday afternoon and evening in the Heirloom shops of the Monroe Furniture company. "The Art of Table Arrangements" will be the theme of the lecture. Questions pertaining to individuality, placing of silver, folding of napkins and correct usage of flowers and candles will be answered at this time.

The flower shops of Monroe and West Monroe will arrange tables showing the correct placement of flowers.

The public is extended an invitation to attend these lectures and to enjoy the colored illustrations shown in connection with them.

Miss Laura Grace Kendall, charming member of the younger set, will arrive later in the week to spend the holiday season with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Calvert. Miss Kendall will be accompanied home by an attractive classmate, Miss Martha Elmer, of New Orleans.

House guests of Miss Martha Jane Hill during the holidays will be Miss Marion Blanchard and Miss Mary Jane Querbes of Shreveport. Miss Hill's compliment to her guests will be an informal supper party on the night of December 23. The supper will take place during the midnight intermission of the dancing party on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel, honoring Miss Gloria Frances Major, Miss Marguerite McHenry, Miss Martha Wilton McHenry and A. G. McHenry, Jr.

Miss Hazel York Weds R. G. Sample

The interest of friends is centered in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Hazel York and Mr. Rudolph Gilbert Sample December 4 at the home of Mr. Sample's mother, Mrs. L. M. Sample of West Monroe, with Rev. I. A. Patten officiating in the presence of a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a beautiful model of Wallis blue with accessories of the same shade and a corsage of bride's roses and valley lilies. For something old she carried a rose point lace handkerchief carried by her grandmother on her wedding day.

Beta Chapter Of Delphians Meets

The Beta chapter of the Delphians met at the home of Mrs. H. M. James. The subject, "Romantic Art in France," was discussed, showing how much France has contributed to all forms of art and how she estabished herself as a leader during the nineteenth and early part of the twentieth century. After the program the hostess served refreshments to the following members: Mrs. J. T. Eubanks, Mrs. R. F. Roberts, Mrs. W. E. Sandel, Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, Mrs. R. B. Henry, Mrs. A. M. Guerrerio, Mrs. S. J. Blower.

Christmas Toys More Attractive Than Ever

Santa Claus and his helpers have come down from their North Pole hideaway this year bringing toys so lovely that even grown-ups will have to believe in the fabulous tales of elves and brownies at work in their northern workshops.

It would take the cunning of an elf to evolve all the gay and unusual toys and games appearing in the shops every day. Fuzzy Teddy bears that eat animal crackers rub shoulders with dainty ladies out of fairy tales, and streamlined trailers flaunt their chromium trimmings under the noses of glassy-eyed rocking horses.

Little girls are going to have a really memorable Christmas with all the dolls and pieces of furniture designed just for them. The felt character doll will thrill any girl. She has silky blonde hair done up in a large bun in the back and held in place low on her neck by a hairnet, like ladies wore theirs a long time ago. Her dress is a gay plaid and there are hoops to hold her skirt out just enough to give a tantalizing peek at the pantaloons beneath. Last but not least, she has big dark eyes and she rolls them!

The doll situation is quite bewildering. Every one seems lovelier than the last. The same manufacturer that made the old-fashioned lady has made dozens of character dolls, in all sizes and prices, and all of felt. There are several kinds of baby dolls that can be washed and fed and cared for like real babies.

While much of the furniture is primarily for girls, there are pieces both girls and boys can enjoy. The guardhouse phonograph with its stolid wooden soldier guarding the door, will provide hours of amusement and instruction. The machinery is good and average size records may be played, so that it will long outlast the nursery age. Its red and white stripes would add a gay and festive note under a sparkling tree on Christmas morning.

The tea cart, large enough to carry a quite large set of dishes and with a removable tray, will inspire many tea parties.

Trains have been improved in many ways. There is a replica of a French narrow gage railway which will fit into a smaller space than a regular sized train. Many feet of track can be placed comfortably on two card tables set together. There is also a train that runs by electricity, and has automatic coupling. The operator pushes a button and whichever cars he has chosen are detached from the train.

There are innumerable other toys for you to discover on your shopping tours, too. For instance the doll buggy with the pastel figures of peasants painted on it which plays a lullaby when you roll it. Or the miraculous little car, which starts and stops by command, on account of a mechanism in its top which is affected by your breath. It is not too large to slip into quite a small stocking.

Norman Coon, Mrs. Charles Gansheil, Mrs. Dallas Goss, Mrs. Wilfred K. Scroggin, Mrs. Chester Greene and Mrs. H. M. James.

Rev. Nobe Talks To University Women

Rev. Clifford Nobe, an interesting visitor in the city from the Philippine Islands, addressed members of the Monroe branch of the American Association of University Women when they met for their regular December program in the home of Mrs. Ned Leith. Rev. Nobe was introduced by Dr. Julia Hunter. His subject for the evening was "Status of Women of the Orient."

He said in part: "The lot of the Oriental women is not enviable. They have no place outside of their home and the custom is for them to work and suffer. In China it is a familiar sight to see women dragging carts, loading coal, weeding and planting, harvesting and house building. A familiar sight in the Philippines is a woman carrying her baby while at work.

"Due to the spread of Christianity, the lot of women has improved considerably during the past few years. The missionary program is solely responsible for the vast changes taking place."

Mrs. Elmer Slagle gave an interesting talk at this time on the ideals and purposes of the American Association of University Women.

The Christmas stockings to be used for the program planned by the auxiliary were reported nearing completion and things well in order for filling and delivery Christmas eve.

Committees were appointed to contact schools and charitable organizations for names and addresses of children who will be given gifts. Committees were also appointed for the Christmas party and shower of fruits, candy, nuts and chewing gum to be given by the auxiliary Thursday night, December 23. All members of post and auxiliary, with their wives and husbands, are urged to attend this party and shower. The refreshment committee comprises Aline B. Hunt, Christine G. Brown and Sleety B. Plans Ready For Little Theater's Production

'The Torch-Bearers' To Be Staged Soon

Monroe Group Makes Opportune Selection Of Gay Comedy For Christmas Season

Most opportune, at this particular time when the world is in gay, holiday need, is the presentation of "The Torch-Bearers," by the Monroe Little Theater, next Thursday night at the Northeast Center auditorium.

In "The Torch-Bearers," George Kelly's comedy scheduled as the first Little Theater presentation of the 1937-38 season, the Little Theater laughs heartily at itself, and that, psychologists tell us, is a very heatful exercise for an individual or for a group.

The play is a satire which gives the audience, in the first act, a rehearsal "just for lines." Witnessing the "rehearsal" may be a little painful for those who have suffered often through the real thing—the lady prompter always a line or two behind the players, and more in need of prompting than any of the others, even "Mr. Hossefrosse" with his frequent "mind-blanks"; the "indispensable Mr. Spindler" who attends to "all the rappings, all the ringings, and the curtains," but who, alas, usually attends to them just a little off schedule; and the cultured lady director, more concerned with having her cast master the "bird's wing gesture" than the prosaic memorizing of lines.

In the second act, "The Torch-Bearers" reaches a climax. The scene is back-stage during a performance. The actors get "up in their lines"; "Mr. Twiller's" mustache proves a little undependable; a refractory door sends the players scurrying from one entrance to another; the stage door-strips ruin the entrances and exits of the leading lady; the scenery sways and totters menacingly; and "Mrs. Pampanelli" is thwarted in her curtain call by the final snapping of a discouraged guy-rope, worn and frayed in the service. But throughout these mishaps, an amazing optimism prevails: "I don't think the audience noticed."

The third act brings the leading lady to her big decision: to be or not to be an actress. Her progress to a sane conclusion is a tearful one, but one satisfactory to the audience.

"The Torch-Bearers" will be given at Northeast Center at 8 p.m. The cast includes Eleona Brinsmade, Myrtle Killian, Polly Cole, De De Arnold, Ruthe Hood, Pargie Hudson, Courtney Ryland, Stanley Reid, Joe Craig, Bill Byrd, Weldon Hood and Dr. Paul Herron. Olive Lusk has the not inconsequential job of seeing that the bells ring off stage, that the cuckoo-clock performs at the right moment, and that an imaginary crowd applauds and laughs convincingly.

In "The Torch-Bearers," George Kelly's comedy scheduled as the first Little Theater presentation of the 1937-38 season, the Little Theater laughs heartily at itself, and that, psychologists tell us, is a very heatful exercise for an individual or for a group.

The play is a satire which gives the audience, in the first act, a rehearsal "just for lines." Witnessing the "rehearsal" may be a little painful for those who have suffered often through the real thing—the lady prompter always a line or two behind the players, and more in need of prompting than any of the others, even "Mr. Hossefrosse" with his frequent "mind-blanks"; the "indispensable Mr. Spindler" who attends to "all the rappings, all the ringings, and the curtains," but who, alas, usually attends to them just a little off schedule; and the cultured lady director, more concerned with having her cast master the "bird's wing gesture" than the prosaic memorizing of lines.

In the second act, "The Torch-Bearers" reaches a climax. The scene is back-stage during a performance. The actors get "up in their lines"; "Mr. Twiller's" mustache proves a little undependable; a refractory door sends the players scurrying from one entrance to another; the stage door-strips ruin the entrances and exits of the leading lady; the scenery sways and totters menacingly; and "Mrs. Pampanelli" is thwarted in her curtain call by the final snapping of a discouraged guy-rope, worn and frayed in the service. But throughout these mishaps, an amazing optimism prevails: "I don't think the audience noticed."

The third act brings the leading lady to her big decision: to be or not to be an actress. Her progress to a sane conclusion is a tearful one, but one satisfactory to the audience.

"The Torch-Bearers" will be given at Northeast Center at 8 p.m. The cast includes Eleona Brinsmade, Myrtle Kilhan, Polly Cole, De De Arnold, Ruthe Hood, Pargie Hudson, Courtney Ryland, Stanley Reid, Joe Craig, Bill Byrd, Weldon Hood and Dr. Paul Herron. Olive Lusk has the not inconsequential job of seeing that the bells ring off stage, that the cuckoo-clock performs at the right moment, and that an imaginary crowd applauds and laughs convincingly.

Curriculum Study Theme Of Meeting

At a regular meeting held Thursday at the Barkdull Faulk school, members of the school's Parent-Teacher association observed a program on the theme: "Study of Curriculum in the Grammar Grades." Mrs. R. G. Stewart was in charge of the program.

A panel discussion of the subject, "Curriculum," was led by Miss Majorie Oliver.

Mrs. Margaret Baker discussed "The Constants in the Curriculum." She pointed out that although methods may change, there remain the "tool subjects" which will be given the child and in which he will acquire abilities.

Miss Julia Wossman, principal of the school, discussed the value of the natural sciences as secondary learning along with the social sciences. She told of how children of modern schools have become acquainted with nature through direct study and observation.

Entertainment features presented at the meeting included a Christmas selection rendered by the boys' choir of the school, under direction of Miss Katherine May and Miss Genieve Castle, and selections rendered by the school's band, under the direction of Charles Gaushell.

A count of the mothers present resulted in Miss Castle's sixth grade receiving a prize for having the most mothers present.

Following the meeting, those present adjourned to the school cafeteria where refreshments were served.

Curriculum Study Theme Of Meeting

At a regular meeting held Thursday at the Barkdull Faulk school, members of the school's Parent-Teacher association observed a program on the theme: "Study of Curriculum in the Grammar Grades." Mrs. R. G. Stewart was in charge of the program.

A panel discussion of the subject, "Curriculum," was led by Miss Majorie Oliver.

Mrs. Margaret Baker discussed "The Constants in the Curriculum." She pointed out that although methods may change, there remain the "tool subjects" which will be given the child and in which he will acquire abilities.

Miss Julia Wossman, principal of the school, discussed the value of the natural sciences as secondary learning along with the social sciences. She told of how children of modern schools have become acquainted with nature through direct study and observation.

Entertainment features presented at the meeting included a Christmas selection rendered by the boys' choir of the school, under direction of Miss Katherine May and Miss Genieve Castle, and selections rendered by the school's band, under the direction of Charles Gaushell.

A count of the mothers present resulted in Miss Castle's sixth grade receiving a prize for having the most mothers present.

It was reported at the assembly that the Barkdull Faulk P.-T. A. has 109 members.

Following the meeting, those present adjourned to the school cafeteria where refreshments were served.

A meeting of the Barkdull-Faulk P.-T. A. executive council was held recently when plans for a Christmas party were discussed. The party will be held at the school next Thursday.

Motion Picture Chairman Named

Mrs. E. Fay Walter of Winnsboro, state president of the Louisiana Congress of Parent-Teacher associations, has announced the appointment of Mrs. Ralph Levey, 307 Audubon boulevard, New Orleans, as state chairman of the motion picture department of the state organization.

Mrs. Levey is president of the Audubon unit of the New Orleans council of Parent-Teacher associations, which is one of the largest and most active local groups in the entire state. She has been prominently identified in the activities of the P.-T. A. for several years, and a state appointment is recognition of her ability and value to the organization's objectives in child welfare work.

The appointment of Mrs. Malcolm Helm as state publicity chairman, to succeed Mrs. R. L. McHenry of Monroe, who was obliged to resign because of illness, was also announced by Mrs. Walter. Mrs. Helm served as state publicity director from 1932 through 1935, during the presidency of the state group of Mrs. L. A. Mailhes of Shreveport. Winnsboro P.-T. A. To Hear Lecture

WINNSBORO, La., Dec. 11.—(Special)—Dr. Carolyn Tiebout will present Monday before the Winnsboro P.-T. A. the third of a series of lectures. Following Dr. Tiebout's fourth and final address of the series, the parent education program will be continued with lectures delivered by other educators, including C. C. Colvert, dean of the Northeast Center of L. S. U., and Dr. Gustaf Freden of Louisiana Tech.

At a recent meeting of the Winnsboro P.-T. A., Mrs. Charles Nelson, Franklin parish supervisor of elementary education, presented a review of the curriculum of the elementary grades. She explained the curriculum changes planned by the state board of education, and told how the plans were being followed in Franklin parish.

"Teachers will soon be given more definite aid in using the new methods, as the state is to send out a bulletin with the new try-out projects and plans," Mrs. Nelson said. Changes in teaching will come gradually, she said, and she urged parents to keep themselves informed of the changes as they are effected.

It was reported at the meeting, by Mrs. H. I. Hill, that the membership of the Winnsboro P.-T. A. had reached 218.

STYLISH BUT UNSEASONABLE

For dancing under the light of a tropical moon and to wear at northern resorts next summer, nothing could be lovelier than this gown of hyacinth blue chiffon, a feature of the Miami Biltmore fashion show, held at the Waldorf Astoria. The matching bolero is of sleek slipper satin, the corsage in shades of rose, blue and white. The full skirt hangs from a closely fitted bodice.

Miss Ingledue Wins Acclaim In Presentation Of Play At Northeast Center

'You Can't Take It With You' Affords Excellent Vehicle For Display Of Artistry

Miss Grace Ingledue, dramatist, wore a handsome gown of royal blue velvet trimmed with sparkling paillettes when she was presented in "You Can't Take It With You" by members of the Speech club of Northeast Center of Louisiana State university in the main auditorium Thursday night. Miss Ingledue, who gave a remarkable interpretation of each character in the play, was introduced by Miss Evelyn Griffis, president of the Speech club.

The representative audience was seated by a coterie of lovely girls in evening models. They were Mary Elizabeth Mahr, Jean Hale, Mildred Johnson, Margaret Mosely, Mary Wilba McKee, Ellen Hale, Tad Tippit, Dorothy Williamson and Norma Mayo. They were assisted by Boyd Beadles, Phillip Embanato, Maurice Smith, Louis Pecastaing and Snyder Parham.

Considerable admiration was manifested by the audience for Miss Ingledue's remarkable performance. Her voice, fine in texture, impressive in word, subdued and dignified in the characterization of even the most melodramatic lines, is ideally suited to the wide range necessary in portraying 16 characters simultaneously. The quavering voice of the grandfather, Martha Vanderhof, the high-pitched voice of his daughter, Penny, and the Russian accent necessary to portray the part of Boris Kolenkhov, permitted Miss Ingledue to demonstrate great virtuosity.

Other characters played by the speaker were Paul Sycamore, Essie Carmichael, Rheba the colored servant, Henderson the income tax collector, Gay Wellington, Alyce Sycamore, Mr. De Pinna, Tony Kirby and several ohters.

Through the medium of speech, Miss Ingledue was enabled to accomplish something few dramatists would attempt. As actress alone on the stage and with the benefit of only the simplest of scenic accessories, she played the 16 essential characters of "You Can't Take It With You," making each of them in turn a real, capable, creditable, living being.

The evening ended in a charming soiree in the library where coffee was poured from handsome silver services and tid-bits were passed by Miss Frances Smith and Miss Mary Esther Brown, members of the reception committee. The presence of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Colvert added considerable eclat.

England has nearly 300 miles of canals in use.

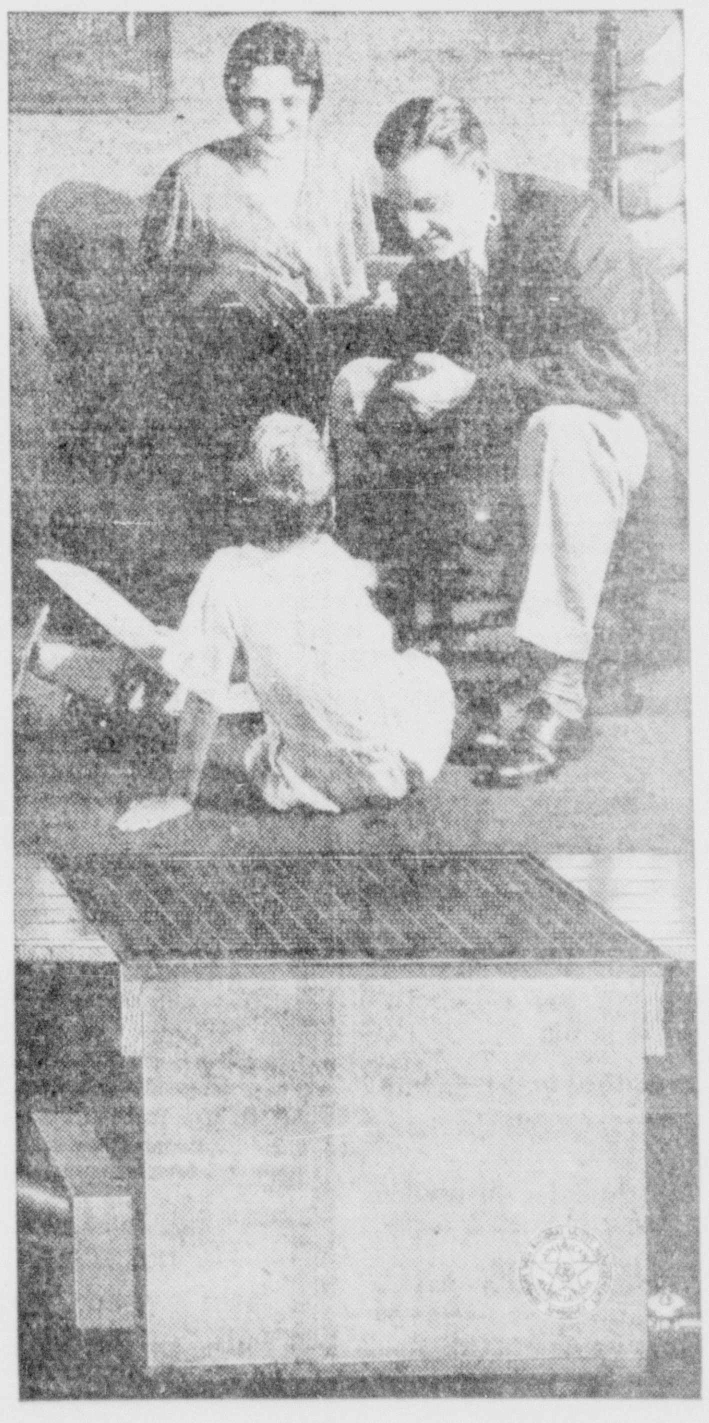
FRESH, CLEAN, HEALTHFUL HEAT, LIKE A SUNLIT SUMMER BREEZE
Sakes alive! I've never seen such clean, healthful warmth as is circulated by the Coleman Floor Furnace. It's just like a balmy sunlit breeze. It's as clean and healthful and carefree. It gives us fresh, pure, trouble-free heat at less cost.

AIR COMPLETELY CIRCULATES THREE TIMES AN HOUR
As a doctor, I like the Coleman because it completely circulates a tremendous volume of pure, fresh air throughout the room. That means dead air pockets and layers of cold air are broken up. Many of the causes of common colds are eliminated.

GOODBYE SHOVEL! SO LONG ASHES
Hot ziggety! They can stop making shovels and buckets s'far as I'm concerned. Since Dad put in a Coleman Floor Furnace, our heating troubles are over. No more wood to chop, coal to shovel, or ashes to carry. Hello, fun—here I come!



Ask Today for Full Details and Low Cost!

FREE AT LAST FROM SWEATY WALLS AND FOGGY WINDOWS
Goodness knows I ought to appreciate our Coleman Floor Furnace! The way I used to scrub sooty woodwork, walls and curtains was a caution. But I'm free at last. There's not a bit of dirt in our house since we installed our Coleman. Sweaty walls and foggy windows are gone forever.

I PLAY ON THE FLOOR WITHOUT GETTING COLD
Our teacher says little girls like me shouldn't play on the floor, because there's a layer of cold air that's always next to it. But she's wrong about our house. We have a Coleman Floor Furnace. The floor is kept just as warm as toast.

Miss Ingledue Wins Acclaim In Presentation Of Play At Northeast Center

'You Can't Take It With You' Affords Excellent Vehicle For Display Of Artistry

Miss Grace Ingledue, dramatist, wore a handsome gown of royal blue velvet trimmed with sparkling paillettes when she was presented in "You Can't Take It With You" by members of the Speech club of Northeast Center of Louisiana State university in the main auditorium Thursday night. Miss Ingledue, who gave a remarkable interpretation of each character in the play, was introduced by Miss Evelyn Griffis, president of the Speech club.

The representative audience was seated by a coterie of lovely girls in evening models. They were Mary Elizabeth Mahr, Jean Hale, Mildred Johnson, Margaret Mosely, Mary Wilba McKee, Ellen Hale, Tad Tippit, Dorothy Williamson and Norma Mayo. They were assisted by Boyd Beadles, Phillip Embanato, Maurice Smith, Louis Pecastaing and Snyder Parham.

Considerable admiration was manifested by the audience for Miss Ingledue's remarkable performance. Her voice, fine in texture, impressive in word, subdued and dignified in the characterization of even the most melodramatic lines, is ideally suited to the wide range necessary in portraying 16 characters simultaneously. The quavering voice of the grandfather, Martha Vanderhof, the high-pitched voice of his daughter, Penny, and the Russian accent necessary to portray the part of Boris Kolenkhov, permitted Miss Ingledue to demonstrate great virtuosity.

Other characters played by the speaker were Paul Sycamore, Essie Carmichael, Rheba the colored servant, Henderson the income tax collector, Gay Wellington, Alyce Sycamore, Mr. De Pinna, Tony Kirby and several ohters.

Through the medium of speech, Miss Ingledue was enabled to accomplish something few dramatists would attempt. As actress alone on the stage and with the benefit of only the simplest of scenic accessories, she played the 16 essential characters of "You Can't Take It With You," making each of them in turn a real, capable, creditable, living being.

The evening ended in a charming soiree in the library where coffee was poured from handsome silver services and tid-bits were passed by Miss Frances Smith and Miss Mary Esther Brown, members of the reception committee. The presence of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Colvert added considerable eclat.

INDUSTRIAL AND BUSINESS REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES NORTH LOUISIANA'S COMMERCIAL CENTER

CHESTER SOUCEK ACCURACY CHAMP

The writer never knew there was music in a typewriter until he heard Chester Soucek of New York City, world's accuracy typewriting champion for the past three years, play his two-and-a-half-year-old Underwood standard, under the auspices of Monroe Office Equipment in Monroe recently. Touring the south, he conducted two demonstrations in this city, one at Monroe Commercial school and the other at Ouachita Parish High school.

So rhythmical is his typing that it possesses something akin to melody. It is fascinating to hear the keys rattle and the spacing bar thud beneath his deft touch.

In winning the accuracy championship for the third consecutive year at the International Typewriting contest, held August 28 in Toronto, Canada, under the auspices of the Canadian National exhibition, Mr. Soucek established a record of 134 net five-stroke words per minute for one hour's writing. During that period, he struck 41,485 keys, misstriking only 23. This gave him an accuracy percentage of better than 99.

Although Mr. Soucek is only 26 years old, he has had an interesting career. In 1927 he won the world's school novice championship, establishing a record of 81 words per minute after but one year of typewriting training in high school. Two years later he won the world's amateur championship, writing at the rate of 118 words per minute for 30 minutes.

In his demonstrations in Monroe, he stressed accuracy, concentration, rhythm, posture and avoidance of lost motion and showed how he accomplishes his lightning change of paper during contests. He attains his amazing speed on the typewriter by coordination of mind and hands and by rapid finger movement.

Throughout his demonstrations, Mr. Soucek did not mis-strike a key. This performance featured each exhibition: While writing a memory exercise at the rate of 230 words a minute, he carried on a conversation and spelled various words suggested by the audience.

Mr. Soucek received his early education in Coraopolis (Pennsylvania) High school, and later attended Duquesne university at Pittsburgh. He is now affiliated with the educational department of Underwood Elliott Fisher company, manufacturers of Underwood typewriters.

Mr. Soucek said the Underwood is the typewriter of champions. He established all his records on that make of machine, which is handled in northeast Louisiana by Monroe Office Equipment, 510 Walnut street. Although it has been subjected to abnormal use, the two-and-a-half-year-old Underwood used by Soucek performs in a faultless manner. He has had it adjusted only once, he said.

REED ADVOCATES AUTO COVERAGE

Of all types of coverage, an automobile owner should have public liability and property damage insurance, according to Luther Reed of Luther Reed Insurance agency.

"If you, through any fault of yours, should injure a person or a person's property with your automobile," he said, "you would like, as far as possible, to make amends.

"Property damage and public liability enables you to make amends," he continued. "It enables you to restore damaged property to its original condition. It enables you to provide hospitalization and medical care for a person injured by your car. Moreover, to recompense the person for loss of time, suffering and so on.

"In case your automobile should burn or in case it should be stolen, you know the extent of your loss. But you can never foretell the limit of your liability when you become involved in an accident. If you crash into a man or his property, you would feel terrible the rest of your life unless you were in a position to do something in his behalf—rehabilitate him, restore his property to its original condition.

"No motorist should be without public liability and property damage insurance."

Luther Reed Insurance agency has offices on the second floor of the old Central Savings Bank building on South Grand street—Nos. 207, 208 and 209. It offers every kind of automobile, commercial and household coverage.

TRAILERS, BODIES BUILT BY FROST

If you are in need of an industrial trailer or stake body for your truck, you can get one right here in the Twin Cities. Either stock models or those tailored to order may be had.

They are built by Frost Trailer and Supply company, 1214 Cypress street, West Monroe. The firm, the telephone number of which is 4526, has specialized for the past two years in all-steel logging trailers. Now, however, it is also building farm and boat trailers and stake bodies for every model truck.

Logging trailers built by the firm are in use throughout northeast Louisiana and southeast Arkansas. And logging contractors swear by them.

The owner of the trailer and supply company, A. S. Frost, was formerly in the sawmill business and he took into consideration all of the requirements of the logging industry when he designed his trailers. They are built to "take it," as are all the trailers and bodies made by the concern.

Besides manufacturing trailers and bodies, Frost Trailer and Supply company is equipped to repair all types of industrial trailers. It handles a complete stock of trailer parts. Moreover, the firm is distributor for Midland vacuum brakes for automobiles, trucks and trailers.

YULE SHOPPING PROBLEM SOLVED

"Shopping from your car" is a new convenience offered Monroe and West Monroe motorists. It is offered by Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store, corner of Washington and North Third streets. There is plenty of free parking space at the store, which prides itself on quick, courteous service. "Shopping from your car" is an easy way to avoid crowds during the Christmas rush. A few of the hundreds of gifts on display at Firestone Auto Supply and Service store are shown above. "We have practical, enjoyable gifts for every member of the family," says M. J. Kehoe, manager.

33 SUPPORTED BY GREGG & M'KENZIE

This interdependence grew out of specialization through the ages. Specialization resulted from the ability of individuals to do particular things better than others.

This specialization set in with the advent of communities, when men began to band together for protection.

The Twin Cities are like other communities. Every individual is dependent on every other individual. The same is true of the industries and businesses of Monroe and West Monroe.

Each firm, as well as each individual, makes some daily contribution to the well-being of the two cities.

Take Gregg and McKenzie, local insurance agency doing business at 313 Harrison street, in Monroe, for instance.

Besides rendering its invaluable service of general insurance protection, it provides a living for 33 persons and maintains eight homes in this community.

All of the employes of the firm live in Monroe. They expend their salaries in the city. They pay municipal, state and federal taxes, either direct or indirect, or both.

Thus, in maintaining themselves and their families and homes, they are assisting in keeping the wheels of industry turning, the current of commerce moving; in maintaining local, state and federal governments, which provide protection for all.

The firm of Gregg and McKenzie, like every individual living in the communities and every concern located in them, is bound to Monroe and West Monroe by hundreds of ties. It is dependent upon the two cities and its residents. The cities and its residents are dependent on it.

MULE-HIDE SHINGLES DURABLE AND BEAUTIFUL

Manufactured by the Lehon company of Chicago, makers of quality roof material for 32 years, the shingles are sold in Monroe and vicinity by J. G. Bell Roofing and Sheet Metal Works, 410 Walnut street.

Mr. Bell, proprietor of the firm, the telephone number of which is 132, said the shingles were made from the best composition materials, including Trinidad asphalt. There are no other composition shingles, he declared, in the class with Mule-Hide.

Here's why Mule-Hide is superior, according to Mr. Bell: 1. Their rich, colorful texture, with distinctive contrasting shadow lines, give rare new beauty to roofs; 2. the Cor-Du-Roy texture adds rigidity and strength and gives greater wind and storm resistance; 3. the Cor-Du-Roy surface gives quicker rain drainage and, consequently, greater protection; 4. the corrugations act like expansion joints, greatly increasing the life and wear of the shingles.

MILLS' PARKING CARES FOR CARS

A parking space is only one source of harassment to many motorists, however. After finally bumping their automobiles into position along the curb, their worries have just begun.

First of all, there is the one-hour parking limit. Then there is the possibility of bent fenders and damaged running boards and bodies. Then fear of packages being stolen from the cars, if not the machines themselves.

All of this can be easily avoided. Simply by parking at Mills' Downtown Parking, 201 North Second street. For 25 cents, you can park there—within one block of the heart of the business district—for the entire day.

But that is only one of the conveniences. You can take your car from the lot and re-park it there any time during the same day at no extra cost. Moreover, if you desire, you may have your purchases delivered at the service station on the lot. There they will be carefully guarded until you call for them. Or if you wish, you may have your car brought to you anywhere you may be.

If you purchase as much as five gallons of gasoline or its equivalent from the service station at the time you leave your automobile at the lot, you get all of this service free. So do regular customers of the establishment.

And while you are getting all this service, you are enjoying peace of mind. Besides knowing your packages are safe—either in the service station or in your car—you know there is no possibility of a thief's making away with your vehicle, that the fenders are not being dented, that you won't return to find its body marred.

During wet weather, Mills Downtown Parking will send an automobile left on its lot to any place the owner designates. Innumerable motorists are already availing themselves of the unexcelled services offered by the establishment.

In addition to operating a parking lot, Mills' Downtown Parking handles gasoline, oils, anti-freeze and numerous automobile accessories, repairs tires and engages in washing and lubricating cars. It also maintains a road service.

MAKINGS OF ANY DRINK HANDLED BY SPATAFORA

Christmas time means party time. And party time means eggnog, hot Tom and Jerry, high balls, cocktails. And all these mean "mixings." And "mixings" means Spatafora's Pharmacy, 801 DeSiard street.

Spatafora's has the ingredients for anything you'll find in your recipe book. The pharmacy handles, among other things, every kind of whisky, domestic and imported wine, rum, liqueur and what have you. And, above every other consideration, the price is right.

But in addition to being the makings of convivial concoctions, whisky, rum, wine and the like make excellent and appreciated Christmas presents. Spatafora's has all kinds of bottled goods done up in holiday packages.

Moreover, it has other appropriate gifts galore. For instance: perfume, powder, cosmetics, candy, tobacco, cigarettes and cigars.

So remember, if you are in need of a Christmas gift or if you are planning a party, call Spatafora's and the present or the makings of your favorite drink will be delivered at your home at the time you designate.

Co-Operative Now Selling Eggnog Mix

Come closer, folks! Gather round! You are going to hear about something new. Something new that will enable you to celebrate Christmas and New Year's in the good old-fashioned way—with a minimum of preparation.

It used to take quite a while to stir up an eggnog. But now you can do it in a jiffy—thanks to Co-operative Dairies, 2407 South Grand street.

Now, for 60 cents a quart, you can get Eggnog Mix. And all you have to do is add the quantity of whisky you desire. Or if you prefer a nogless eggnog, you just leave the whisky out.

Rich with cream and eggs, Eggnog Mix may be obtained from either Co-operative Dairies or any of the establishments it supplies with its products. The telephone numbers of Co-operative Dairies are 2600 and 2601.

With or without whisky, Eggnog Mix is a delicious and nutritious beverage. Minus the spiking, it is a great liquid food for the kids.

Eggnog Mix, which not only saves time and energy but expense, as well, has never been sold in the Twin Cities before. Perfected only recently, it was tried out in the larger communities of the United States the past Thanksgiving. And went over with a bang!

Now is your chance to avoid worry and save money. Put in a supply of Eggnog Mix. Keep a quart or two in your refrigerator and be ready at all times to greet both your wet and your dry friends with good cheer when they call at your home.

NEON SIGN COMPANY CAN REVIVE OLD TUBES

To be of maximum value to you, your Neon sign should be bright. Vivid illumination compels attention.

Therefore—especially at this season of the year, when night comes early and you should be getting the ultimate service from your display—if the color in your sign is faded, you should have it revived.

And what it takes to revive the color in your Neon display, Neon Sign Manufacturing company, 504 Walnut street, has. It treats old tubes with a solution that intensifies the colors seven-fold.

The cost of this operation is moderate and can be accomplished within 24 to 48 hours on medium-sized displays.

One of the most vivid colors now being utilized by the manufacturing company, the telephone number of which is 3510, is Super-Green, seven times more brilliant than ordinary green. The hue is used in a sign recently installed for Monroe Office Equipment on Walnut street and in window displays at Unique Grill on DeSiard street.

COMPETENT MEN AT HELM OF FIRM

If you want your electrical work done by a firm that is completely equipped and headed by men with technical training as well as practical experience, get in touch with Flournoy and McElroy, electrical contractors, 704 Trenton street, West Monroe. The telephone number is 2817.

The firm is composed of E. K. Flournoy and C. G. McElroy, the former an electrical engineer and the latter a crack electrician. Both have been in their present line of work virtually all of their lives.

Associated in electrical contracting in the Twin Cities for approximately 11 years, they have, for the past four, been partners.

The firm has been in its present location, just north of the new highway bridge across Ouachita river, only a short while. But it has, since it was organized, handled innumerable important jobs in northeast Louisiana.

Besides being unexcelled in wiring and in installing electrical fixtures in buildings of every description, the concern handles fixtures of all kinds. The proprietors say they are in a position to quote the very lowest prices, both on their services and their merchandise.

It enables you to provide hospitalization and medical care for a person injured by your car. Moreover, to recompense the person for loss of time, suffering and so on.

"In case your automobile should burn or in case it should be stolen, you know the extent of your loss. But you can never foretell the limit of your liability when you become involved in an accident. If you crash into a man or his property, you would feel terrible the rest of your life unless you were in a position to do something in his behalf—rehabilitate him, restore his property to its original condition.

"No motorist should be without public liability and property damage insurance."

Luther Reed Insurance agency has offices on the second floor of the old Central Savings Bank building on South Grand street—Nos. 207, 208 and 209. It offers every kind of automobile, commercial and household coverage.

TRAILERS, BODIES BUILT BY FROST

If you are in need of an industrial trailer or stake body for your truck, you can get one right here in the Twin Cities. Either stock models or those tailored to order may be had.

They are built by Frost Trailer and Supply company, 1214 Cypress street, West Monroe. The firm, the telephone number of which is 4526, has specialized for the past two years in all-steel logging trailers. Now, however, it is also building farm and boat trailers and stake bodies for every model truck.

Logging trailers built by the firm are in use throughout northeast Louisiana and southeast Arkansas. And logging contractors swear by them.

The owner of the trailer and supply company, A. S. Frost, was formerly in the sawmill business and he took into consideration all of the requirements of the logging industry when he designed his trailers. They are built to "take it," as are all the trailers and bodies made by the concern.

Besides manufacturing trailers and bodies, Frost Trailer and Supply company is equipped to repair all types of industrial trailers. It handles a complete stock of trailer parts. Moreover, the firm is distributor for Midland vacuum brakes for automobiles, trucks and trailers.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FINE CHRISTMAS GIFTS

You want to make your young son or daughter supremely happy this Christmas, don't you? Well, give him or her, as the case may be, a musical instrument. Nothing will evoke more unadulterated joy.

Where should you buy the instruments? Why, have you ever visited F. G. Butcher Music company at 101 1-2 North Grand street? It has a wide selection.

The firm handles every kind of new and used band instrument: cornets, trumpets, clarinets, saxophones, trombones, drums and the like. Priced remarkably low, the used instruments have been completely reconditioned by F. G. Butcher, proprietor of the concern and an expert repairsman with years of experience.

The repair department is equipped to recondition any kind of musical instrument. It has mandrels for removing dents from every variety of brass horn.

It also handles a complete line of supplies for musical instruments. These include reeds and mutes of every description. Moreover, music stands are carried in stock.

F. G. Butcher Music company offers all reeds for 5 cents less than they are obtainable elsewhere.

YULE SHOPPING PROBLEM SOLVED

"Shopping from your car" is a new convenience offered Monroe and West Monroe motorists. It is offered by Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store, corner of Washington and North Third streets. There is plenty of free parking space at the store, which prides itself on quick, courteous service. "Shopping from your car" is an easy way to avoid crowds during the Christmas rush. A few of the hundreds of gifts on display at Firestone Auto Supply and Service store are shown above. "We have practical, enjoyable gifts for every member of the family," says M. J. Kehoe, manager.

33 SUPPORTED BY GREGG & M'KENZIE

The prime characteristic of modern life, particularly in communities, is interdependence—interdependence of industries and businesses, interdependence of individuals.

This interdependence grew out of specialization through the ages. Specialization resulted from the ability of individuals to do particular things better than others.

This specialization set in with the advent of communities, when men began to band together for protection.

The Twin Cities are like other communities. Every individual is dependent on every other individual. The same is true of the industries and businesses of Monroe and West Monroe.

Each firm, as well as each individual, makes some daily contribution to the well-being of the two cities.

Take Gregg and McKenzie, local insurance agency doing business at 313 Harrison street, in Monroe, for instance.

Besides rendering its invaluable service of general insurance protection, it provides a living for 33 persons and maintains eight homes in this community.

All of the employes of the firm live in Monroe. They expend their salaries in the city. They pay municipal, state and federal taxes, either direct or indirect, or both.

Thus, in maintaining themselves and their families and homes, they are assisting in keeping the wheels of industry turning, the current of commerce moving; in maintaining local, state and federal governments, which provide protection for all.

The firm of Gregg and McKenzie, like every individual living in the communities and every concern located in them, is bound to Monroe and West Monroe by hundreds of ties. It is dependent upon the two cities and its residents. The cities and its residents are dependent on it.

The United States public health service is an activity of the treasury department.

ARMATURE WORKS SELLS USED ELECTRIC DEVICES

If you are in the market for an electric motor, a starter for a motor or switch-board equipment for either alternating or direct current generators, you would do well to get in touch with Monroe Armature Works, 2019 DeSiard street. The telephone number is 98.

The firm can save you money. Used electrical mechanisms handled by it include motors of every description (from a quarter to 100 horse-power), starters for all kinds of motors and made-to-order switch-boards for both alternating and direct current generators.

All of these, before they are sold, are thoroughly reconditioned in the modern repair shop operated by the concern. Rebuilt by experienced craftsmen, they are as good as new.

Besides buying and selling used electrical devices of all kinds, Monroe Armature Works engages in every kind of work pertaining to electrical mechanisms. However, it specializes in repairing and maintaining industrial equipment. It prides itself on its rapid service and on the excellence of its workmanship and materials.

MULE-HIDE SHINGLES DURABLE AND BEAUTIFUL

If you are looking for durability and beauty in a roof, you'll find the combination in Mule-Hide Cor-Du-Roy shingles.

Manufactured by the Lehon company of Chicago, makers of quality roof material for 32 years, the shingles are sold in Monroe and vicinity by J. G. Bell Roofing and Sheet Metal Works, 410 Walnut street.

Mr. Bell, proprietor of the firm, the telephone number of which is 132, said the shingles were made from the best composition materials, including Trinidad asphalt. There are no other composition shingles, he declared, in the class with Mule-Hide.

Here's why Mule-Hide is superior, according to Mr. Bell: 1. Their rich, colorful texture, with distinctive contrasting shadow lines, give rare new beauty to roofs; 2. the Cor-Du-Roy texture adds rigidity and strength and gives greater wind and storm resistance; 3. the Cor-Du-Roy surface gives quicker rain drainage and, consequently, greater protection; 4. the corrugations act like expansion joints, greatly increasing the life and wear of the shingles.

MILLS' PARKING CARES FOR CARS

The Christmas shopping season is on hand and, as a consequence, parking space is at a premium throughout the business district of Monroe.

A parking space is only one source of harassment to many motorists, however. After finally bumping their automobiles into position along the curb, their worries have just begun.

First of all, there is the one-hour parking limit. Then there is the possibility of bent fenders and damaged running boards and bodies. Then fear of packages being stolen from the cars, if not the machines themselves.

All of this can be easily avoided. Simply by parking at Mills' Downtown Parking, 201 North Second street. For 25 cents, you can park there—within one block of the heart of the business district—for the entire day.

But that is only one of the conveniences. You can take your car from the lot and re-park it there any time during the same day at no extra cost. Moreover, if you desire, you may have your purchases delivered at the service station on the lot. There they will be carefully guarded until you call for them. Or if you wish, you may have your car brought to you anywhere you may be.

If you purchase as much as five gallons of gasoline or its equivalent from the service station at the time you leave your automobile at the lot, you get all of this service free. So do regular customers of the establishment.

And while you are getting all this service, you are enjoying peace of mind. Besides knowing your packages are safe—either in the service station or in your car—you know there is no possibility of a thief's making away with your vehicle, that the fenders are not being dented, that you won't return to find its body marred.

During wet weather, Mills Downtown Parking will send an automobile left on its lot to any place the owner designates. Innumerable motorists are already availing themselves of the unexcelled services offered by the establishment.

In addition to operating a parking lot, Mills' Downtown Parking handles gasoline, oils, anti-freeze and numerous automobile accessories, repairs tires and engages in washing and lubricating cars. It also maintains a road service.

MAKINGS OF ANY DRINK HANDLED BY SPATAFORA

Christmas time means party time. And party time means eggnog, hot Tom and Jerry, high balls, cocktails. And all these mean "mixings." And "mixings" means Spatafora's Pharmacy, 801 DeSiard street.

Spatafora's has the ingredients for anything you'll find in your recipe book. The pharmacy handles, among other things, every kind of whisky, domestic and imported wine, rum, liqueur and what have you. And, above every other consideration, the price is right.

But in addition to being the makings of convivial concoctions, whisky, rum, wine and the like make excellent and appreciated Christmas presents. Spatafora's has all kinds of bottled goods done up in holiday packages.

Moreover, it has other appropriate gifts galore. For instance: perfume, powder, cosmetics, candy, tobacco, cigarettes and cigars.

So remember, if you are in need of a Christmas gift or if you are planning a party, call Spatafora's and the present or the makings of your favorite drink will be delivered at your home at the time you designate.

Co-Operative Now Selling Eggnog Mix

Come closer, folks! Gather round! You are going to hear about something new. Something new that will enable you to celebrate Christmas and New Year's in the good old-fashioned way—with a minimum of preparation.

It used to take quite a while to stir up an eggnog. But now you can do it in a jiffy—thanks to Co-operative Dairies, 2407 South Grand street.

Now, for 60 cents a quart, you can get Eggnog Mix. And all you have to do is add the quantity of whisky you desire. Or if you prefer a nogless eggnog, you just leave the whisky out.

Rich with cream and eggs, Eggnog Mix may be obtained from either Co-operative Dairies or any of the establishments it supplies with its products. The telephone numbers of Co-operative Dairies are 2600 and 2601.

With or without whisky, Eggnog Mix is a delicious and nutritious beverage. Minus the spiking, it is a great liquid food for the kids.

Eggnog Mix, which not only saves time and energy but expense, as well, has never been sold in the Twin Cities before. Perfected only recently, it was tried out in the larger communities of the United States the past Thanksgiving. And went over with a bang!

Now is your chance to avoid worry and save money. Put in a supply of Eggnog Mix. Keep a quart or two in your refrigerator and be ready at all times to greet both your wet and your dry friends with good cheer when they call at your home.

NEON SIGN COMPANY CAN REVIVE OLD TUBES

To be of maximum value to you, your Neon sign should be bright. Vivid illumination compels attention.

Therefore—especially at this season of the year, when night comes early and you should be getting the ultimate service from your display—if the color in your sign is faded, you should have it revived.

And what it takes to revive the color in your Neon display, Neon Sign Manufacturing company, 504 Walnut street, has. It treats old tubes with a solution that intensifies the colors seven-fold.

The cost of this operation is moderate and can be accomplished within 24 to 48 hours on medium-sized displays.

One of the most vivid colors now being utilized by the manufacturing company, the telephone number of which is 3510, is Super-Green, seven times more brilliant than ordinary green. The hue is used in a sign recently installed for Monroe Office Equipment on Walnut street and in window displays at Unique Grill on DeSiard street.

COMPETENT MEN AT HELM OF FIRM

If you want your electrical work done by a firm that is completely equipped and headed by men with technical training as well as practical experience, get in touch with Flournoy and McElroy, electrical contractors, 704 Trenton street, West Monroe. The telephone number is 2817.

The firm is composed of E. K. Flournoy and C. G. McElroy, the former an electrical engineer and the latter a crack electrician. Both have been in their present line of work virtually all of their lives.

Associated in electrical contracting in the Twin Cities for approximately 11 years, they have, for the past four, been partners.

The firm has been in its present location, just north of the new highway bridge across Ouachita river, only a short while. But it has, since it was organized, handled innumerable important jobs in northeast Louisiana.

Besides being unexcelled in wiring and in installing electrical fixtures in buildings of every description, the concern handles fixtures of all kinds. The proprietors say they are in a position to quote the very lowest prices, both on their services and their merchandise.

The National Jewish Welfare board was organized in 1917 and has its headquarters in New York.

MONROE YOUTH DESCRIBES WAR

Noel Marine Stationed Aboard American Ship On Duty In Spanish Area

Home for a furlough of 18 days from his duties as second class fireman on the U. S. S. Quincy, of the navy, Noel Marine, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Marine, 4206 DeSiard road, Saturday talked interestingly of scenes connected with the present war in Spain. The shelling of Tangiers, Africa (opposite Gibraltar) and the destruction of the waterfront and especially oil tanks at Malaga were the chief scenes of warfare which he witnessed from the nearby deck of the Quincy.

The reason that he did not get a closer view of war-torn Spain was because men from his boat were not allowed to land in that country, only officers of the navy being permitted to go ashore to effect rescue of foreigners who desired to escape from scenes of bloody carnage.

The Quincy rescued a total of 500, comprising Americans and those of other nationalities, who were landed for the most part in ports of southern France. The nations represented by those who were thus rescued, besides Amercans, were Argentinos, Brazilians, British citizens, Cubans, Danes, Dutch, Filipinos, Finns, French, Germans, Guatemalans, Hungarians, Italians, Mexicans, Moroccans, Norwegians and Poles.

Mr. Marine said that in his opinion the rebels seemed to be in the right and that they were evidently fighting in behalf of the church, while the loyalists were ostensibly fighting against the continuance of the established church.

Mr. Marine enlisted in the navy August 7, 1935. His present enlistment will expire in August, 1939. He was assigned to the Quincy when it was placed in commission June 9, 1937, at the Boston navy yard. On July 22, the so-called "shake-down" cruise, to make a thorough test of the vessel, was initiated and it was scheduled to visit ports in Norway and Sweden. But war broke out in Spain and emergency orders were issued to proceed with all possible speed, which was 32 to 36 knots per hour, to Spain and the Mediterranean. Gibraltar was reached July 27, and the boat was refueled and steamed ahead to carry out the work of removing refugees from places in Spain that were under attack or were about to be attacked.

In the work of removal, anything from the family canary bird, baby buggy to an automobile was taken on board. In the latter case, a member of the diplomatic service in Spain sought to remove his automobile from the war scene to France. But the tariff was so great in France that the car was transported back to Spain.

During the tour of duty in the Mediterranean, Marine said that the men became well acquainted with men from many countries who were stationed on ships of their nations grouped off Spanish ports. They came aboard the Quincy at night to witness the latest releases in motion pictures with which the ship was supplied, and which were not shown on boats of other nations. The men were all genial, and through use of signs and words, more or less garbled, they were able to converse after a fashion, Marine said.

Three months were spent in the Mediterranean and the Quincy returned to the Boston drydock October 5, 1936, and remained there until April 1937, when it proceeded with the crew to Cuba, the Panama canal and Hawaii, returning to California to participate last May in the ceremonies consequent upon the dedication of the Golden Gate bridge at San Francisco, when 300 ships of the United States navy were present.

A spring cruise was taken to Seattle, after which the ship returned to its base at San Pedro, Calif., where it is now stationed. Marine made the trip from there to Monroe by bus. He will return Wednesday.

Marine assured that he enjoyed life in the navy and found it highly educational and conducive to rugged health and as a foundation for later life work.

MONROE YOUTH DESCRIBES WAR

Noel Marine Stationed Aboard American Ship On Duty In Spanish Area

Home for a furlough of 18 days from his duties as second class fireman on the U. S. S. Quincy, of the navy, Noel Marine, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Marine, 4206 DeSiard road, Saturday talked interestingly of scenes connected with the present war in Spain. The shelling of Tangiers, Africa (opposite Gibraltar) and the destruction of the waterfront and especially oil tanks at Malaga were the chief scenes of warfare which he witnessed from the nearby deck of the Quincy.

The reason that he did not get a closer view of war-torn Spain was because men from his boat were not allowed to land in that country, only officers of the navy being permitted to go ashore to effect rescue of foreigners who desired to escape from scenes of bloody carnage.

The Quincy rescued a total of 500, comprising Americans and those of other nationalities, who were landed for the most part in ports of southern France. The nations represented by those who were thus rescued, besides Americans, were Argentinos, Brazilians, British citizens, Cubans, Danes, Dutch, Filipinos, Finns, French, Germans, Guatemalans, Hungarians, Italians, Mexicans, Moroccans, Norwegians and Poles.

Mr. Marine said that in his opinion the rebels seemed to be in the right and that they were evidently fighting in behalf of the church, while the loyalists were ostensibly fighting against the continuance of the established church.

Mr. Marine enlisted in the navy August 7, 1935. His present enlistment will expire in August, 1939. He was assigned to the Quincy when it was placed in commission June 9, 1937, at the Boston navy yard. On July 22, the so-called "shake-down" cruise, to make a thorough test of the vessel, was initiated and it was scheduled to visit ports in Norway and Sweden. But war broke out in Spain and emergency orders were issued to proceed with all possible speed, which was 32 to 36 knots per hour, to Spain and the Mediterranean. Gibraltar was reached July 27, and the boat was refueled and steamed ahead to carry out the work of removing refugees from places in Spain that were under attack or were about to be attacked.

In the work of removal, anything from the family canary bird, baby buggy to an automobile was taken on board. In the latter case, a member of the diplomatic service in Spain sought to remove his automobile from the war scene to France. But the tariff was so great in France that the car was transported back to Spain.

During the tour of duty in the Mediterranean, Marine said that the men became well acquainted with men from many countries who were stationed on ships of their nations grouped off Spanish ports. They came aboard the Quincy at night to witness the latest releases in motion pictures with which the ship was supplied, and which were not shown on boats of other nations. The men were all genial and through use of signs and words, more or less garbled, they were able to converse after a fashion, Marine said.

Three months were spent in the Mediterranean and the Quincy returned to the Boston drydock October 5, 1936, and remained there until April 1937, when it proceeded with the crew to Cuba, the Panama canal and Hawaii, returning to California to participate last May in the ceremonies consequent upon the dedication of the Golden Gate bridge at San Francisco, when 300 ships of the United States navy were present.

A spring cruise was taken to Seattle, after which the ship returned to its base at San Pedro, Calif., where it is now stationed. Marine made the trip from there to Monroe by bus. He will return Wednesday.

Marine assured that he enjoyed life in the navy and found it highly educational and conducive to rugged health and as a foundation for later life work.

Prison Film Opens Today At Capitol

John Litel And Ann Sheridan Head Star Cast In 'Alcatraz Island'

"ALCATRAZ ISLAND," a Warner Brothers melodrama, is to have its first local showing today at the Capitol theater, at the Capital theater.

It is said the story isn't merely one of life behind the stone walls of the Pacific-washed prison. There's plenty of action on the mainland, both before and after the protagonist—one Gat Brady, played by John Litel—is confined for income-tax evasion.

The story itself deals with a powerful racketeer, (John Litel), who is forced to remove his daughter (Mary Maguire), from an exclusive boarding school, and take her to live with him. When he is imprisoned for income tax evasion, his one wish is to get out as soon as his term is up to rejoin his daughter, now in love with a district attorney, (Gordon Oliver) and his own sweetheart (Ann Sheridan).

How this desire is thwarted time and again by a former mobman seeking revenge brings us through the various prisons in the story, thus forming as powerful a background as has been seen in a long while. The double romance in the story keeps the film from being grim and thus well up in the realm of excellent entertainment.

The film is excellently cast. John Litel, who played Patrick Henry in the academy award-winning short, "Give Me Liberty," is Gat Brady. He was also in "The Life of Emile Zola" as was Vladimir Sokoloff, who played Cezanne the artist in that film. In "Alcatraz Island," Sokoloff plays a Dutchman, also an inmate of "The Rock," and gives one of the finest performances of the film.

"Alcatraz Island" was directed by William McGann, from an original screen play by Crane Wilbur. Included in the cast are Dick Purcell, Vladimir Sokoloff, Ben Welden, Addison Richards, Peggy Bates, Ellen Clancy and George E. Stone.

Young Star Scores Hit In New Film

Stellar Supporting Cast Is Feature Of Shirley's Latest Picture

A SHIRLEY TEMPLE more glorious than anyone has ever known and a beloved story that has enthralled millions the world over closes its engagement today on the screen of the Paramount theater in the never-to-be-forgotten picture, "Heidi," Johanna Spyri's enchanting tale brought to such laughing, loving life by Twentieth Century-Fox that it touches the deepest corners of the heart.

Everywhere readers in all languages have been charmed by the warmth, tenderness and beauty of the Swiss Alps and all the colorful folk dwelling up just under the stars, into whose lives "Heidi" brings tenderness and mirth and courage. An embittered mountain-top exile is reclaimed from his fierce hate of the world by the heroine, who brings him a new zest for life, and a young girl is given strength and the will to walk again in the story that has thrilled readers of every country.

"Heidi," one of the world's famous stories, had to wait for its star before it could be brought to the screen, declares Darryl F. Zanuck, and the reason is evident. Shirley was cast in the title role in response to the thousands of movie fans who besieged the studio with requests that she play the part.

The result is a picture for which she will be remembered always. Ideally cast and gloriously portrayed, the screen play by Walter Ferris and Julien Josephson is an achievement in transcribing a familiar and beloved story to the screen.

Heading the cast is Jean Hersholt, famous veteran actor who gives his greatest characterization as the grandfather of "Heidi." A taciturn recluse dwelling high in the Alps, the character is the most difficult he has ever had to portray, Hersholt says, because the burden of the delineation is placed on physical mannerisms and attention to details of action and dress.

Other leading roles in the story are played by Pauline Moore, Thomas Beck, Mary Nash, Sidney Blackmer, Mady Christians and Sig Rumann.

On a novel set depicting the colorful Zuyder Zee, Shirley and a large chorus enact an elaborate dance sequence, with special routines arranged by Sammy Lee. Shirley also sings the grand new novelty tune, "In Our Little Wooden Shoes," written by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell.

Allan Dwan directed "Heidi," with Raymond Griffith as associate producer.

Shirley Temple's 'Heidi' Closes At Paramount Today

Mady Correll, New York stage star, makes her film debut in "Midnight Madonna," story of a court battle for the custody of a wealthy child, which plays Thursday at the Capitol theater. The cast is headed by Warren William and includes Kitty Clancy, a four-year-old youngster who also makes her screen debut in this picture.

"Wife, Doctor and Nurse," Twentieth Century Fox sparkling romance in the mood of today, stars Loretta Young, Warner Baxter and Virginia Bruce in a wise and witty drama that penetrates the hearts of two modern women who wanted all of love or nothing, and the man who insisted he needed them both.

A riding, tearing, human avalanche of fury, busting up the blackmailers is Buck Jones in "Black Aces," the thrilling western playing at the Capitol theater next Saturday.

Comedians all—(left to right) Alice Brady, Luis Alberni, Kenny Baker and Frank McHugh win top comedy honors in "Mr. Dodd Takes the Air," the Mervin LeRoy production which comes to the Paramount theater Wednesday and Thursday.

A scene from the Capitol's Tuesday attraction, "Public Wedding," featuring Jane Wyman, Dick Purcell and Berton Churchill. "Public Wedding" is the wackiest whale story since Jonah went to sea.

Prison Film Opens Today At Capitol

John Litel And Ann Sheridan Head Star Cast In 'Alcatraz Island'

"ALCATRAZ ISLAND," a Warner Brothers melodrama, is to have its first local showing today at the Capitol theater. at the Capital theater.

It is said the story isn't merely one of life behind the stone walls of the Pacific-washed prison. There's plenty of action on the mainland, both before and after the protagonist —one Gat Brady, played by John Litel—is confined for income-tax evasion.

The story itself deals with a powerful racketeer, (John Litel), who is forced to remove his daughter (Mary Maguire), from an exclusive boarding school, and take her to live with him. When he is imprisoned for income tax evasion, his one wish is to get out as soon as his term is up to rejoin his daughter, now in love with a district attorney, (Gordon Oliver) and his own sweetheart (Ann Sheridan).

How this desire is thwarted time and again by a former mobman seeking revenge brings us through the various prisons in the story, thus forming as powerful a background as has been seen in a long while. The double romance in the story keeps the film from being grim and thus well up in the realm of excellent entertainment.

The film is excellently cast. John Litel, who played Patrick Henry in the academy award-winning short, "Give Me Liberty," is Gat Brady. He was also in "The Life of Emile Zola" as was Vladimir Sokoloff, who played Cezanne the artist in that film. In "Alcatraz Island," Sokoloff plays a Dutchman, also an inmate of "The Rock," and gives one of the finest performances of the film.

"Alcatraz Island" was directed by William McGann, from an original screen play by Crane Wilbur. Included in the cast are Dick Purcell, Vladimir Sokoloff, Ben Welden, Addison Richards, Peggy Bates, Ellen Clancy and George E. Stone.

The head waiter in many London restaurants greets you in full dress—whether it's breakfast, lunch or dinner.

An average of 15,214,366 boys and girls were in school each day of the 1933-34 term in 41 of the 48 states.

Young Star Scores Hit In New Film

Stellar Supporting Cast Is Feature Of Shirley's Latest Picture

A SHIRLEY TEMPLE more glorious than anyone has ever known and a beloved story that has enthralled millions the world over closes its engagement today on the screen of the Paramount theater in the never-to-be-forgotten picture, "Heidi," Johanna Spyri's enchanting tale brought to such laughing, loving life by Twentieth Century-Fox that it touches the deepest corners of the heart.

Everywhere readers in all languages have been charmed by the warmth, tenderness and beauty of the Swiss Alps and all the colorful folk dwelling up just under the stars, into whose lives "Heidi" brings tenderness and mirth and courage. An embittered mountain-top exile is reclaimed from his fierce hate of the world by the heroine, who brings him a new zest for life, and a young girl is given strength and the will to walk again in the story that has thrilled readers of every country.

"Heidi," one of the world's famous stories, had to wait for its star before it could be brought to the screen, declares Darryl F. Zanuck, and the reason is evident. Shirley was cast in the title role in response to the thousands of movie fans who besieged the studio with requests that she play the part.

The result is a picture for which she will be remembered always. Ideally cast and gloriously portrayed, the screen play by Walter Ferris and Julien Josephson is an achievement in transcribing a familiar and beloved story to the screen.

Heading the cast is Jean Hersholt, famous veteran actor who gives his greatest characterization as the grandfather of "Heidi." A taciturn recluse dwelling high in the Alps, the character is the most difficult he has ever had to portray, Hersholt says, because the burden of the delineation is placed on physical mannerisms and attention to details of action and dress.

Arthur Treacher, as the comic butler in a rich Frankfort home, is "Heidi's" sole defender in many dramatic scenes, and a sympathetic portrayal of "Blind Anna" is provided by Helen Westley.

Other leading roles in the story are played by Pauline Moore, Thomas Beck, Mary Nash, Sidney Blackmer, Mady Christians and Sig Rumann.

On a novel set depicting the colorful Zuyder Zee, Shirley and a large chorus enact an elaborate dance sequence, with special routines arranged by Sammy Lee. Shirley also sings the grand new novelty tune, "In Our Little Wooden Shoes," written by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell.

Allan Dwan directed "Heidi," with Raymond Griffith as associate producer.

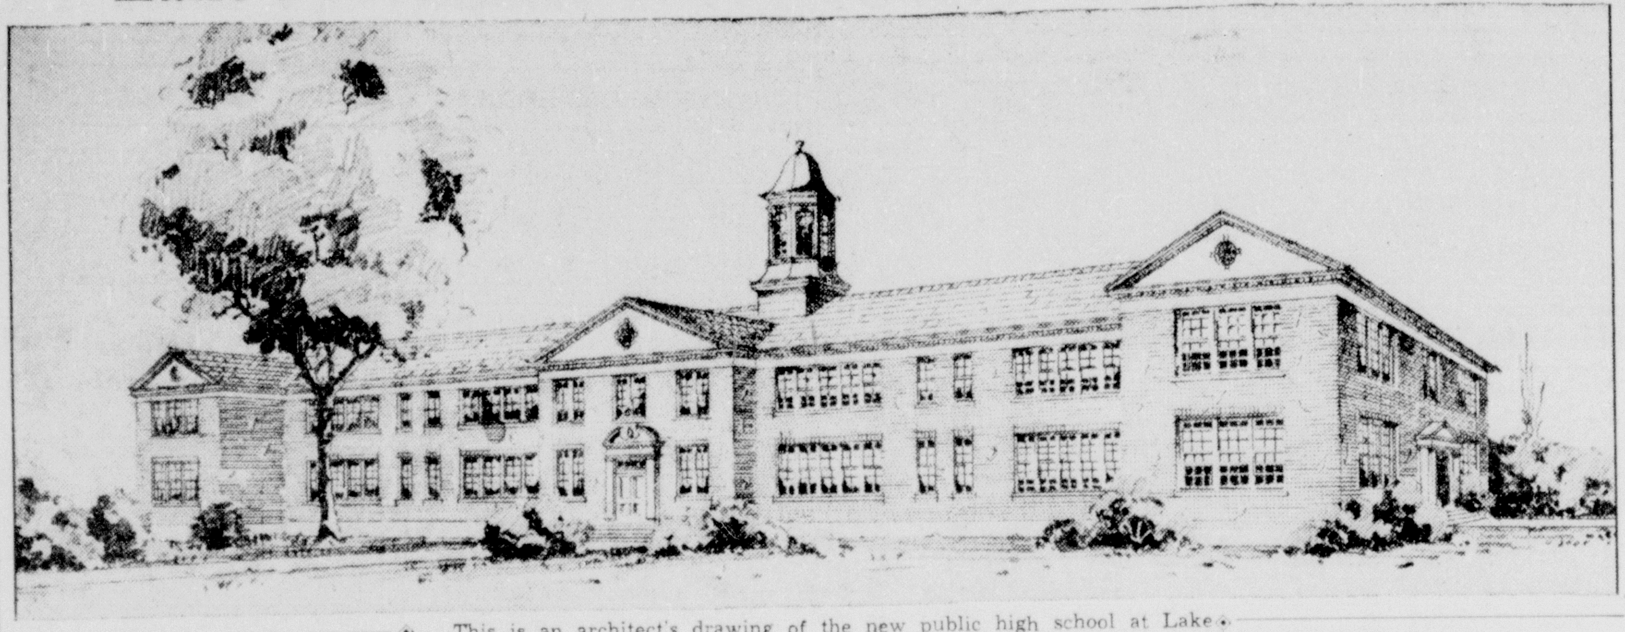
NEW FLORAL SHOP OPENS TO PUBLIC

Monroe's flower-loving public is invited to visit the "Marguerite Gardens," 205 Bright avenue, corner of Jackson street, which will be open all day Sunday for the reception of visitors. The owner and manager, Mrs. Marguerite Lamkin Easterling, has for many years devoted herself to the cultivation of flowers, and has maintained a greenhouse on DeSiard road. Mrs. Easterling recently completed a course in growing specimen flowers and floral designing at the Boston School of Floral Art in Chicago under Ellis Gornley. All the flowers on display at the "Marguerite Gardens" were grown in Mrs. Easterling's own greenhouses. She has extended a cordial invitation to her friends and the public at large to visit the greenhouse and the gardens all day today.

Lake Providence School Planned By H. H. Land



This is an architect's drawing of the new public high school at Lake Providence, the contract for the construction of which has just been awarded to M. T. Reed Construction company of Belzoni, Miss. Plans and specifications for the project were prepared by H. H. Land, Monroe architect with offices on the 11th floor of the Ouachita National Bank building.

Work on the edifice will start immediately and the building, which replaces one destroyed by fire, will be ready for occupancy at the beginning of the fall term of school. The contract was let on a bid of $140,993.

The East Carroll parish school board will be aided in defraying the cost of construction by the Public Works administration.

The building, which will house both the grade and high school at Lake Providence, will have 20 classrooms and a large gymnasium, not to mention offices, locker rooms, lavatories and shower baths. The gymnasium will be equipped for both basketball and boxing.

Erected on a reinforced concrete foundation, the building will be of brick construction. The trimming will be of stone; the roof, of asbestos shingles. The interior walls will be plastered and the ceilings will be of composition boards. All corridors and stairways will be absolutely fireproof.

The building will be steam heated and will have a public address system.

Other contracts recently awarded on projects planned by Mr. Land include:

In East Carroll parish—School, Monticello, $30,000; colored training school, Lake Providence, $35,333; both let to M. T. Reed Construction company.

In Morehouse parish—High school and gymnasium, Bonita, $63,000; addition to Westside grade school, Bastrop, $22,775; addition to Eastside grade school, Bastrop, $49,995; the first two let to Delong and Tatum of Dubach, the last to A. G. McBride and Son of Bastrop.

Work on all these projects are scheduled to start this week.

The physical education building of Ouachita Parish High school in Monroe, now nearing completion, was also planned by Mr. Land, who will be the supervising architect when construction starts on the new courthouse at Jonesboro. The physical educaton building is being erected at a cost of $104,000 by Salley and Ellis, local contractors.

AGENT ADVISES FARMERS TO GET GRADING ON HAY

Ouachita parish farmers having a surplus of soybean, lespedeza or alfalfa hay for marketing are urged by E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, to submit samples to R. A. Watson, agronomist of the Louisiana State university agricultural extension division, for grading, so that a product of an established quality can be offered for sale.

Mr. Strahan pointed out that the proper grading of hay should add to its marketing value as the purchaser will be sure of what he is getting.

"If a farmer has some excellent hay, he should be able to specify just what grade it is," Mr. Strahan said. "His best hay should bring him more than inferior grades offered by others, and it will if he has it graded."

GROCERY EMPLOYE HURT WHEN AUTO HITS MOTORCYCLE

Herman Riley, 21, living at 113 Texas avenue and employed at Green's grocery and market, 2002 DeSiard street, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg when the motorcycle he was riding was hit by an automobile driven by W. B. McCoy, 619 Jackson street, about 9 o'clock Saturday morning, in the 3100 block of DeSiard street, police reported.

Riley was reportedly delivering groceries at the time the accident took place. His machine was struck from the rear and he was flung to the pavement. An ambulance brought the youth to St. Francis sanitarium.

McCoy, who was booked by the Monroe police on a technical charge of reckless driving and who was released on his word, reported he was driving east on DeSiard street and was trying to pass the motorcycle on the left side. Riley was said to have made a left turn in front of McCoy's car. McCoy said he made a sharp left turn towards a driveway in an attempt to avoid a collision but was unsuccessful and crashed into the rear of Riley's motorcycle.

HOLDUP SUSPECT TAKES OWN LIFE

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 11.—(AP)—One of two men suspected of a holdup shot himself to death today after police cornered them at the dead end of a city street. The second man surrendered.

C. H. Reeves, manager of a filling station at Wrens, said the two men held him up, locking him in a rest room, and took $13. He kicked his way out and notified Wrens police, who called Augusta authorites.

Radio Patrolmen Allgood and Goodson spotted the automobile at the city limits. They and Lieutenant Jesse Powell gave chase.

Powell said he fired, puncturing the gasoline tank and a tire, when the car did not stop. Speeding straight on, it crashed into the barricade on Seventh street at the foot of the levee.

There, police said, the driver drew a gun and shot himself in the head. His companion crawled from under the wrecked auto, hands overhead, and surrendered.

Police Captain George R. Folds said the arrested man gave his name as Hubert Davis of Roxboro, N. C., and that of his companion as C. O. Whitt of near Roxboro.

GROCERY EMPLOYE HURT WHEN AUTO HITS MOTORCYCLE

Herman Riley, 21, living at 113 Texas avenue and employed at Green's grocery and market, 2002 DeSiard street, suffered a compound fracture of the left leg when the motorcycle he was riding was hit by an automobile driven by W. B. McCoy, 619 Jackson street, about 9 o'clock Saturday morning, in the 3100 block of DeSiard street, police reported.

Riley was reportedly delivering groceries at the time the accident took place. His machine was struck from the rear and he was flung to the pavement. An ambulance brought the youth to St. Francis sanitarium.

McCoy, who was booked by the Monroe police on a technical charge of reckless driving and who was released on his word, reported he was driving east on DeSiard street and was trying to pass the motorcycle on the left side. Riley was said to have made a left turn in front of McCoy's car. McCoy said he made a sharp left turn towards a driveway in an attempt to avoid a collision but was unsuccessful and crashed into the rear of Riley's motorcycle.

HOLDUP SUSPECT TAKES OWN LIFE

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 11.—(AP)—One of two men suspected of a holdup shot himself to death today after police cornered them at the dead end of a city street. The second man surrendered.

C. H. Reeves, manager of a filling station at Wrens, said the two men held him up, locking him in a rest room, and took $13. He kicked his way out and notified Wrens police, who called Augusta authorites.

Radio Patrolmen Allgood and Goodson spotted the automobile at the city limits. They and Lieutenant Jesse Powell gave chase.

Powell said he fired, puncturing the gasoline tank and a tire, when the car did not stop. Speeding straight on, it crashed into the barricade on Seventh street at the foot of the levee.

There, police said, the driver drew a gun and shot himself in the head. His companion crawled from under the wrecked auto, hands overhead, and surrendered.

Police Captain George R. Folds said the arrested man gave his name as Hubert Davis of Roxboro, N. C., and that of his companion as C. O. Whitt of near Roxboro.

AGENT ADVISES FARMERS TO GET GRADING ON HAY

Ouachita parish farmers having a surplus of soybean, lespedeza or alfalfa hay for marketing are urged by E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, to submit samples to R. A. Watson, agronomist of the Louisiana State university agricultural extension division, for grading, so that a product of an established quality can be offered for sale.

Mr. Strahan pointed out that the proper grading of hay should add to its marketing value as the purchaser will be sure of what he is getting.

"If a farmer has some excellent hay, he should be able to specify just what grade it is," Mr. Strahan said. "His best hay should bring him more than inferior grades offered by others, and it will if he has it graded."

"BUT WE MUST RECOVER THE CONTRACT," CRIED PIET DE VILLIERS; "IT IS OUR PROOF THAT ISHTAK SOLD US THESE LANDS."

MEANWHILE TARZAN TRAVERSED THE PLAIN, WONDERING IF THE PIONEERS WERE JUST IN THEIR CLAIMS.
OFTEN, HE KNEW, EVEN HONEST WHITE MEN LOST THEIR SENSE OF FAIRNESS IN DEALING WITH PRIMITIVE RACES.
HE MUST FIND ISHTAK AND EXTRACT FROM HIM THE ANSWER TO THIS DISTURBING PUZZLE.

WHEN THEY SLEPT, HE DROPPED DOWN AMONG THEM, WATCHFUL OF THE SENTRIES WHO FRINGED THE BIVOUAC.
THESE WERE HIS SAVAGE AND TREACHEROUS FOES, HUNGRY FOR HIS BLOOD.

PATROLLING the TOP OF the WORLD

COPR. 1937 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

LEAN-BONED, sharply alert, all standing six feet or over, men of the small patrol had assembled in the barracks before the commander, Col. John French. The colonel rose, saluted, spoke tersely.

"You are the agents of justice," he addressed his men. "Your duty is to protect as well as to punish. Where the law is unknown, make it known; and when the law is broken, GET YOUR MAN!"

A few minutes later these same men, mounted, in vivid new costumes of scarlet and blue, galloped out of Calgary across the Albertan plains. Ahead of them was their first thousand-mile trek, first patrol of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police.

That was in July, 1874. In succeeding weeks the troop scattered into the uttermost reaches of the Indian nations and the far north. Its riders carried two greetings; first, assurance of good will; second, assurance of firm will.

Sixty-three years of service since have brought countless dramatic tests of that will. Indian warfare, the gold rush, protection of the new settler, murder in the Arctic, rescue expeditions—all these have studded the daily lives of these men who patrol the top of the world. Edward VII called them "Royal," and so they've been known since.

Law and reliance of all people north of latitude 64, the "Mounties" are shown on a Canadian stamp of 1935.
